The STRANGE HAPPENINGS IN THE ROOSEVELT FAMILY.

How Cousins, Nephews, Nieces and Other Relatives of the President Have Kept the Name of Roosevelt Before the Public In Curious, Startling and Unusual Episodes.

MRS. J.E. ROOSEVELT

STRANGE happenings in the family whose head, in point of prominence at least, is the strenuous President of the United States, have caused their neighbors and friends to refer to them as "those strange Roosevelts."

Long fought lawsuits over strange contentions, odd divorces, sudden clouding of intellects, startling family disasters, the breaking away from conventions and family restraint to go upon the stage, curious legacies in the family, have earned for them the name.

Whenever the name Roosevelt appears in the news, it is almost certain to be connected with some strange feature of that news. It is unfortunate that the name Roosevelt, by reason of these strange features, has come to be regarded as a synonym of notoriety.

Since the new year three events have made the name more picturesque, more spectacular and more sensational than before. The echoes of the recent divorce suit brought by Frank Klemme against his wife, Hannah Klemme, are loudest when they involve the names of Mr. and Mrs. Jack, or J. E., Roosevelt, the cousins of the President. Constant A. Andrews was named as co-respondent. Mrs. Constant A. Andrews has been for years an inmate of an asylum for the insane. She is the sister of Mrs. Jack Roosevelt, and the most startling development of the case was the production and the reproduction of alleged letters written by the President's cousin to his wife's sister.

Some of these letters which, incident to the suit, became public property, were as follows:

My Dear Birdie:

May I come around to see you this evening, some time after half past eight?

Affectionately,

JACK.

My Dear Birdie:

It must be charming at Stockbridge this perfect weather. How I wish I were with you! We could have such times if I could only have my own way. Why should we be so far apart? Mamma arrived, but I miss my sister-in-law. Affectionately,

JACK.

Miss Cornelia Van Wagenen, Mrs. Andrews's most intimate friend, made affidavit that Mrs. Andrews, before her commitment to the hospital for the insane declared that "Jack" Roosevelt frequently professed violent love to "his sister-in-law." Mrs. Andrews had a fortune amounting to $400,000. In a lawsuit brought by Constant A. Andrews against Jack Roosevelt, Mr. Andrews alleged that "Mr. Roosevelt as one of the committee of guardianship used his power to further his own interests at the expense of the demented wife's estate."

Behind this suit is said to be a dramatic story of Mr. Andrews's discovery of the letters from Mr. Roosevelt to Mrs. Andrews, and of Mr. Andrews's visit of denunciation and warning to Mr. Roosevelt.

The firm of which Judge Alton Parker, lately candidate for the Presidency of the United States, is the head, are pursuing the case against Mr. Roosevelt.

Still more spectacular is the suit brought by John Bailler, a race track follower, against James Roosevelt Roosevelt, Jr., for alienation of his bride's affections. Bailler asserts that the President's cousin was an almost daily visitor at his home, hiding his patronymic, however, behind the commoner James Williams.

Mr. Bailler called for consultation about his domestic troubles upon Mrs. James Roosevelt Roosevelt, Jr. Mrs. Roosevelt was before her marriage Miss Sadie Heininger, and so far was she removed from the refinements of her husband's Fifth avenue family and associates that she was generally known as "Dutch Sadie." There had been many threats of disinheriting young Roosevelt for his mad marriage, but the family relented, and the young man was still permitted to enjoy a large allowance and many automobiles. Mrs. Bailler drove the automobiles, and a part of the allowance, the bookmaker asserts, was spent at the jewelers which his wife visited upon the arm of the man whose alias is James Williams.

Mr. Bailler found "Dutch Sadie" a young woman of lymphatic temperament, inclined to a calm philosophy of life. She has lived quietly since her marriage, and is proud of the fact that, while her name is not found upon the invitation list of her husband's relatives, they at least have had no cause to find fault with her manner of life since her marriage.

"I hardly see Jimmie any more," she said, indifferently. "He's been acting bughouse for some time. The next time he comes home I'll chain him down and call a doctor."

The mother of the bereft Mr. Bailler said: "I always warned Johnnie to be careful about getting married. He kept away from the women and didn't get into any trouble until he met this one that he calls Hat. When he told me he was married I felt like paddling him with my slipper. The next thing I knew he came home and said President Roosevelt's cousin had run away with her. I'm afraid this will be an awful blow for the President."

It proved to be such to Mrs. Douglas Robinson, the former Miss Helen Roosevelt Roosevelt, whose health has been impaired by grief at her brother's escapades.

During the past Winter the newspapers broke out into a daily eruption of headlines, and much interesting matter, chiefly love letters, in which the name Roosevelt frequently occurred. They were written by Theodore Roosevelt Pell, a young married namesake and kinsman of the President, to Miss Alma Roberts, a singer, whom he described in some of these missives as a "Little Lump of Gold," although Miss Roberts's figure is amply developed in all directions. Mr. Pell had recently married Miss Florence Cramp, of Philadelphia.

When Miss Roberts sued Mr. Pell for breach of promise she said that she had met him when he took her and her sister to see an apartment which they subsequently rented. She says that he called at first to learn whether the apartment was satisfactory. Afterward he called without any pretext except that he enjoyed calling upon the beautiful new tenant.

Then came the letter-writing stage. The precious documents to which prosaic lawyers alluded coldly as Exhibits A and B and C were in their nature the opposite of prosaic.

This is an alleged specimen of Mr. "Teddy" Roosevelt Pell's epistolary talent.

Sweet Lump of Gold:

I married for money. Now, dear heart, I want to marry for love. It is because I love you, and only you, and never have loved until I met you, that I propose to get a divorce and then we shall be, oh, so happy, in our little dovecote. I love you, Baby Blue Eyes, I love—love you.

"Heart of a Thousand Joys," "Cuckoo" and "Darling Little Sugar Plum" were other terms by which Mr. Roosevelt Pell addressed her, Miss Roberts stated in her affidavit. She says also that in that fervid time he wrote sonnets better than Swinburne's to her charms.

The divorce of Warren G. Roosevelt was remarkable. Mr. Roosevelt, while forced to admit that his wife was known as Mrs. John Holler, and that she had to all appearances committed bigamy, made the plea for her that she was insane and did not realize that she had done wrong. Mrs. Roosevelt, who was a granddaughter of a Bishop, put in no defence and the divorce was granted.

Equally unhappy was the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Roosevelt, which ended in Mrs. Roosevelt's securing a divorce from the President's cousin.

A legal battle is threatened by two brothers, whom friends of the family are comparing to Jacob and Esau. When Robert B. Roosevelt died his will precipitated a bitterness that had long existed between his sons, John E. and Robert B., Jr. A codicil of the will relieved Robert B. Roosevelt, Jr., of the necessity of accounting for any of the moneys of the estate which he had handled before his father's death. It also provided that he keep as a gift any money which he might have had in his possession at the time of his father's death. Throughout the neighborhood ran the story that so angry was John E. Roosevelt at the provisions of this codicil that he tore it from the will. Robert B. Roosevelt, Jr., furiously threatened his brother with arrest. Friends of the family rushed between the brothers, fearing that, though wearing fresh crepe upon their sleeves and hats, they might repeat, in the room whence the coffin had an hour before been carried, the tragic story of the first quarrel of brothers.

Most pathetic of all the stories of the strange Roosevelts is that of the President's niece, lovely Pansy Roosevelt. The story's emblem is a closed room in the handsome Roosevelt home at Meadowcroft, L. I. In that room nothing is ever disturbed. No servant ever enters it. Miss Pansy's mother keeps the only key to the room, which she visits every day. When she turns the key again upon its desolation her face reveals a broken heart.

Pansy Roosevelt is a cousin and was once the chum of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. She had planned to spend her first season in Washington with the young lady of the White House. But when their friends met the President's daughter at teas and balls and receptions in the capital and asked her why Pansy was not with her Alice Roosevelt's bright face grew sad. She answered that Pansy was not well. When questioners were insistent she said, "She is suffering from nervous prostration."

At that time the room in the Meadowcroft home became vacant. The household was saddened as though by a bereavement. Pansy Roosevelt's horse on which she had followed the hounds daringly across fields fretted for her in its stall. Pansy Roosevelt's hounds whined for the pat of her strong white hand upon their heads. The girl, who had been taken to a sanitarium in New Jersey, gave no thought to any of them, to the past nor the future. In a ward she sat dully under the eye of a watchful attendant. The superintendent said she might never recover the mental health that had so swiftly and mysteriously vanished.

The most tragic occurrence in the annals of the strange Roosevelts was the death of the son of the late Alfred Roosevelt. The young man ran down the platform of the railway station at Mamaroneck, trying to board the moving train for New York. He was flung from the platform with such force that he suffered concussion of the brain. He died next day.

One of the President's favorite kinsmen is young Nicholas Roosevelt, who started in the humblest way to learn the business of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. Sinking his identity in his jumper and overalls among 15,000 other workmen, this twenty-two-year-old youth, having been graduated from Princeton, began to toil with his hands as well as his brain. He intends to become a machinist and this is his preparation.

Of as independent character was Miss Maude Roosevelt, who flouted all the protesting Roosevelt kith and kin and went upon the stage. Her former husband, the Baron Wilhelm Mumm Von Schwartzenstein, says that for the stage she also flouted him. Miss Roosevelt joined the Hackett company, playing the queen in "Don Caesar's Return." Miss Roosevelt is now in Germany, where she is a member of the Municipal Opera Company at Elberfeld. Miss Gertrude Roosevelt, another cousin, is of the same mind and profession.

The Countess Fabbricotti, cousin of the President, chose a career and an income as a teacher of music.

There was much interest in the announcement that President Roosevelt, whom some have called "the strangest Roosevelt of them all," would pay the funeral expenses of a woman suicide who had ended her life in a Lexington avenue apartment house in New York. "Is she a relative?" was asked. "Another of that odd family?"

The woman was Mrs. Lulu B. Glover, harmlessly demented, who fancied that she had been the President's first sweetheart. She bequeathed $2,000 and an Angora named Golden Teddy to the Nation's chief executive.

Another singular gift to the President came from Denver. General Sherman Bell, of Denver, telegraphed him: "Son born this morning. Have named him Theodore Roosevelt." That evening came a second telegram from General Bell: "A mistake. Baby is a girl."

The American Girl who Danced Salome with a Real Head.

And Who Now Holds Paris Enthralled by the Intensity and Passion of Her Performance and Will Dance it Here Next Autumn if America Is "Ripe Enough."

"HER BODY RIGID AS THOUGH CARVED IN MARBLE, THE DANCER SLOWLY FORCED HER EYES TO THE FACE SHE HELD ALOFT. IT WAS THE FACE OF A MAN NOT LONG DEAD."

THE COUNT ZICHY OF HUNGARY.

MAUD ALLEN DANCING MENDELSSOHN'S SPRING SONG AND DRESSED AS BOTTICELLI'S PRIMAVERA. THIS IS THE COSTUME IN WHICH SHE APPEARED DURING HER DANCE OF THE LIONS IN BUDA-PESTH.

THREE POSES OF MISS MAUD ALLEN IN HER IMPASSIONED DANCE OF SALOME.

PARIS, June 16.

IT was not long after the Dance of the Lions.

To Maud Allen, swaying like a passion flower in the last steps of the Seven Veils, a giant negro brought upon a great salver the head of Jokaanan.

All about the dim salon of the Buda-Pesth palace sat silent nobles of the city.

Her eyes half closed, the dancer raised by its dank hair the ghastly prize of Herodias's daughter.

She leaned toward its lips. Gently the severed head touched her wrists, and there shot through her a terrible tremor, a shivering of the soul. Upon her white flesh were red stains, dark crimson clots. It was blood.

Her body rigid as though carved in marble, the dancer slowly forced her eyes to the face she held aloft.

It was the face of a man not long dead.

As one from whom life goes very quickly she crumbled to the floor. From her hands dropped the head. It rolled down upon her breast and fell beside her, leaving on her white body a crimson trail.

So was the dancer Maud Allen taught that it is not well to jest with a noble of Hungary.

Not for many days did she dance as Salome after that. Not for many days did she dance at all. And now, as she glides about the waxen head on the stage of the Varieties, that gay stage where tragedy until this day has been tabooed, Paris watches and wonders at her diablerie, at the sinister power that radiates from every movement of that wonderful dance, marvels at its fiendishness, and when it is done not for long can M. Brasseur and his joyous company bring Paris back to its normal condition of laughter.

That is because Maud Allen has been well taught not to jest with Hungary, has learned what it means to stir by ridicule the current of barbarism that rolls strong beneath the veneer. It is because that always when she dances Salome now it is not the waxen head that is before her, but the human head not long severed of a man she never knew; it is his dank hair that she grasps, his dead flesh that she sees, and to stem the flood of horror and loathing that comes over her she strives and strives to hate most mightily, and so become in truth that phase of Salome's love.

Perhaps, too, once there lived a Roman Emperor who wished that all the Roman people had but a single neck that he might sever it at a stroke. So, perhaps, dancer Maud Allen feels and sees in that head the combined heads of those Hungarian nobles who have turned one of the greatest triumphs of her art into a nightmare for her.

But, not for worlds would she jest again with Count Zichy, of Buda-Pesth, and dance the Dance of the Lions.

It has curious contrasts—this story of the wit of an American girl which was met by the mordant spirit of Hungarian humor, a grim, barbaric touch that some old Tartar chieftain would have enjoyed or which would have tickled the heart of an ancient Russian court.

Less than a year it has been that Maud Allen by her unique genius won the attention of Europe. It is less than two weeks that she appeared in Paris which promptly went wild over her. For Miss Allen, who was born in San Francisco, by the way, had a new idea—or an idea almost as old as the world, but rejuvenated. Educated in France and Germany, a pupil of Busoni at Berlin, she had found in her the power to interpret the masters of music, not by singing, not by any instrument, but by dancing.

To the study and the development of this gift she gave her years from eighteen to twenty-two. In Palestine, in Egypt, in Turkey and in the provinces thereabout, where, among the wild clans still live the ancient dances, she studied. Steadily as she worked on, month by month, the strange innate knowledge within her kept pace and outstripped those things which came to her from without. It was as though within her the souls of old dancers awoke to being, interpreting, suggesting, supplying those gaps that time had swept away in the ancient dances. She issued from the four-year novitiate the very spirit of the dance.

Her Dance That Entrances Paris.

Came to her the call, sharp and imperative, to interpret by her art the masters of music. And all of these wonderfully, truthfully she brings before the eyes as clearly as the great musician brings them to the ear. "Impressions plastiques" they call it here, but it is very much more than that. Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, Chopin's Nocturnes, Mozart's Minuets, Grieg, Brahms, Strauss, all she brings before one in graceful, lithe, beautiful lines of living flesh. There is no speaking, none of the ordinary movements of the art of acting. Her body sings the underlying motif of the music, her face completes the chain of ideas. Thus she plays upon emotions, whether it is the tender grace of a Chopin valse, the tragedy of the Marche Funebre or the religious ecstacy of the Ave Maria.

Now, this is the manner of her moving upon Buda-Pesth and why she danced before the lions and why the bleeding head was given her.

In true art she claims, there is no shame of naked flesh, and yet to the dancer steeped in the traditions of the Orient there came the battle between the Occidental ideal and the presentation of actual truth. Always she had danced with bare feet and finally her conception of Salome won against her prejudice.

She was to dance the Salome at the Munchner Schauspielhaus at Munich, and there to witness her rehearsal came Kaulbach and Grutzner and Franz Stuck and all the great musicians of the city.

Also came Miss Allen. About her forehead was a filet of pearls. Over her bare shoulders fell a great barbaric necklace of many colored jewels. Strands of jewels fell from it over breastlets of pearls. Other strands fell to the jewelled girdle, and beneath the jewels was only the dancer.

Soft, almost transparent, clinging to the body, so that no slightest movement was hidden, fell to her bare feet a golden-tinted skirt.

She danced, and she was—well, Salome.

Rapturously Munich waited for her premiere.

Alas, for waiting Munich! Between the rehearsal and the premiere the dancer had to appear one gala night at Belgrade. And while Belgrade was applauding Miss Allen was reading, with tears and anger, a telegram that said the gates of Munich were closed between her and her anticipation, and that there wouldn't be any premiere.

It had happened that a men's club built on very conservative principles had moved strenuously, and Herr Von Haider, the censor of last resort, had listened to their plea. The morals of Munich had to be conserved said the club. Ergo—Miss Allen must not dance.

The Mockery of Count Zichy.

Miss Allen was very angry. She was so angry that at last she won against the club and came right back to Munich. But when she got there she danced in so many coverings that hardly even her face could be seen. The only concession she made was to leave her very beautiful feet uncovered. And she danced only the most classical of music and funeral marches and everything like that, which was just as much true art, but so terribly subdued that the good folk of Munich nearly went to sleep.

And after that—and she really hadn't thought of doing it before—she tripped away to Buda-Pesth where people wouldn't know what you meant even if you mentioned Comstock, except, perhaps, to ask if it wasn't an American brand of beer.

Unrestrained, uncensorized and mostly uncovered, Miss Allen danced in Buda-Pesth as the spirit listed and the programme indicated. Buda-Pesth stood up and cheered. Strauss sent for her to come to Paris and dance in that famous production of Salome. But Miss Allen, confronted by a three-year unbreakable contract and a summons by the Grand Duke Montenuevo to appear before the Royal Court at Vienna, couldn't. She continued to delight Buda-Pesth.

Now among the most famous of the nobles there is the Count Zichy. Clubman, sportsman, owner of vast estates on which his serfs are as they were hundreds of years ago, Count Zichy is one of the leaders of the fast set of that curious old city. Courage is his shibboleth, as it is with most of the nobles of Buda-Pesth. Primitive passions are thick in the mediaeval atmosphere that clings about the ancient town. Primitive virtues, too. Life there is somewhat like a great barbaric jewel faceted curiously by modern hand and thought. The combination gives curious lights, strange flashes, weird shadows.

Courage, however, is a foundation stone. Therefore it was not odd that at a dinner given in the dancer's honor in March by a score of nobles the talk should have turned to the manifold virtues of courage and its multitudinous manifestations.

"It takes most tremendous courage," said Maud Allen.

"What does?" chorused the nobles.

"Why—to come out on the stage before hundreds with feet bare, with shoulders bare, with little dress," she said.

"Ha, ha, ha," laughed Count Zichy.

"It does, indeed," said the little dancer earnestly. "Every time I appear, until the spirit of it gets in my blood, it is as though I were about to undergo martyrdom. Don't you think that is courage—to fight that down and go out and face the thing you dread?"

"Ha, ha, ha," laughed Count Zichy again, thinking doubtless of boar hunts and duels and other blood-curdling specialties.

"Hundreds of eyes peering in at you from the darkened house," said the dancer. "Eyes of men, eyes of women. In how many is the light of admiration for your art? In how many of them are other lights—lights of contempt, of desire? Each time I dance I think of it and dread it."

"What you call in America—brag," said the Count. He was not in a very good humor that night.

"Ha ha, brag!" laughed the Count, unpleasantly. "You would think you had the courage to dance in a den of lions. Pouf!"

Miss Allen thought for a moment, while the nobles laughed with the Count.

"How much will you bet?" she said suddenly.

"That you won't dance in a den of lions? Ten thousand marks," replied the Count.

"Done," said Maud Allen.

Amid excitement the terms were settled. She was to dance Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" clad in the costume of Botticelli's Primavera in the lion cage at the Zoo behind locked cage doors and with her two lions and a keeper.

Word went quietly about, and next day before the lion cage at the Gardens stood all of Buda-Pesth's noblest.

Very gaily had the cage been ornamented. Inside it as yet was nothing. In a moment up dashed a closed carriage. Out of it stepped Maud Allen robed as Primavera. There was a gasp of admiration from the crowd. None had thought she would do it. Count Zichy twirled his mustache and looked annoyed.

And now in the centre of the cage was the dancer. Again the door swung open and there entered two lumbering little lion cubs, grumbling and playing like a pair of kittens. Above them a keeper gravely watched.

There was a perfect cyclone of laughter from the crowd. Count Zichy was mad all over. It was a fraud, it was a Yankee trick; he would not pay.

But in the gale of laughter Maud Allen sweetly went on with the dance. Now and then one of the fierce and untamed lions would stretch out a playful paw to her or stand on its head in sympathy. And the dance went on to the end, with Count Zichy standing like a thundercloud in the midst of a laughing May morning.

By the time it was over the Count was madder than ever. He protested violently, even impolitely. The dancer was firm. She had danced in the lions' cage before real lions. He must pay the ten thousand marks. The Count had friends, many of them, who sympathized with him, but pay he did finally.

Immediately the dancer turned the money over to one of the hospitals.

Then she forgot all about it. It was just a good joke. He had been so positive and so positively nasty. It was a lesson for him.

Count Zichy stalked about in gloom, frowning down the pleasantries of the laughers.

A few days went tranquilly by and then there came to Maud Allen a summons to dance the Salome in one of the great palaces of Buda-Pesth. It came from a source that there was little denying and the dancer went. There seemed to be no reason, for that matter, why she shouldn't.

Up to a great, dim, gorgeous salon she was ushered. Clustered about were scarcely a score of men. Some few she knew for nobles. Others were strangers to her, but nobles, too, apparently. Most courteously they greeted her. Most gallantly they raised their glasses to her.

Then [illegible] hidden orchestra began softly to play the prelude to Strauss's Salome. The dancer wreathed herself in the seven veils and white feet twinkling, body lithely moving, began that wondrous dance. One by one the veils were cast aside until only the

Was Lieut. Richardson a Coward or a Hero?

Was It Craven Hearted On His Part To Leave His Fiance—With All the Attendant Mortification at the Steps of the Altar—So That She Might Be Free to Marry a Better Man? OR Did It Take Tremendous Courage To Do What He Did, Jilt Her and Kill Himself?

MISS KELLY, WHOM LIEUT. RICHARDSON DESERTED AT THE ALTAR KNOWING HIMSELF TO BE AN INCURABLE MORPHINE FIEND.

"IN THE LIG T OF REVELATIONS MADE AFTER HIS DEATH ONE CAN IMAGINE LIEUT. RICHARDSON STANDING BEFORE A MIRROR—LIKE DE MAUPASSANT'S "COWARD"—CHOOSING BETWEEN THE POISON DRAUGHT IN ONE HAND AND THE WEDDING RING IN THE OTHER."

IS IT possible for suicide to be a deed of heroism? Is modern civilization justified in [illegible]cepting "suicide" and "cowardice" as [illegible]nonymous terms?

Just now this much-argued theory gains a most interesting illustration—one way or the other—in the case of the late Lieut. Mack Richardson, U. S. A., who killed himself after being forced out of the army because he had deserted, almost at the altar, the girl whom he was engaged to marry.

Since his death some of his brother officers—the same ones who held him in the greatest contempt for his conduct toward his betrothed bride—have declared that he died a brave man, owing to conditions that no one but himself knew about until after he was dead.

The whole story is told here, and in connection with it are printed the crucial scenes in Guy de Maupassant's tale entitled, "A Coward"—probably the best psychological study of suicide ever written.

Lieutenant Richardson was attached to the Twenty-sixth Infantry, which up to a few months ago was stationed at Brownsville, Texas. He was captain of a Missouri regiment that served in the Spanish-American war, and gave so good an account of himself that, when the war was over, he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the regular army.

He was a widower, thirty-seven years old. His brother officers liked and esteemed him, and society at Brownsville found him a genuine acquisition.

In Brownsville the family of Captain William Kelley, president of the First National Bank of that city, were socially of much importance, and beautiful Anna Kelley was a recognized belle. Lieutenant Richardson paid her much attention. He won her love. About eight months ago their engagement was announced. The date for their wedding was set for Tuesday evening, May 14.

This was the date of the anniversary of the marriage of Miss Kelley's parents. It was planned that the combined wedding and anniversary should be a great social event for the whole of Texas. Lieutenant Richardson's brother officers rallied 'round him, overwhelmed him with congratulations and were eager to shed military glory upon the marriage scene.

Following the negro regiment disturbance at Brownsville Lieutenant Richardson's regiment was transferred to Fort Sam Houston. That made no difference in the officers' enthusiasm over the forthcoming wedding; it was known that there would be distinguished guests from all over the State.

Last November Lieutenant Richardson fell ill. He recovered, but his convalescence progressed slowly. He lacked his old cheerfulness. There were times when he did not appear himself at all. When asked about it, he replied evasively, or said that he had not yet shaken off the effects of his illness.

Lieutenant Richardson corresponded regularly with his fiancee. It was arranged that he and his brother officers should arrive in Brownsville on May 13, the day before that set for the wedding.

Accompanied by several officers, the lieutenant went to the station to take the train to Brownsville. As the train rolled in—he had appeared the gayest member of the party—he suddenly slapped his thigh and said:

"By Jove; I've forgotten the ring. I'll have to go back to the post. I'll follow on a later train."

So the other officers boarded the train, one of them checking Lieutenant Richardson's trunk on his ticket.

Arriving in Brownsville, the officers explained the bridegroom could not arrive till the coming of the next train. The hour for the ceremony arrived. Still no bridegroom.

Captain Kelley's residence was beautifully decorated. The bridal supper was spread. The wedding presents were displayed, the house was filled with guests, including many of Lieutenant Richardson's comrades. Then entered a messenger with this telegram for the bride:

"Am too sick to come."

She bore up bravely. To the guests an announcement was made that the wedding was postponed, and why. With forced gayety Captain Kelley and his daughter and wife invited the guests to remain to supper in celebration of his wedding anniversary. Lieutenant Richardson's brother officers were the only guests who seemed especially disturbed.

On the following day Captain Kelley started a quiet investigation. He learned that at the hour set for the wedding Lieutenant Richardson was driving about San Antonio in an automobile.

When the officers of the wedding party returned to their posts not one would speak to, or recognize Lieutenant Richardson, except in connection with necessary orders. The recreant bridegroom found himself completely ostracised. He volunteered no explanation, but when pressure was brought to bear to force him to resign from the army, he exclaimed:

"You'll know the truth some day, and you won't blame me."

On May 21—a week too late—Lieutenant Richardson went to Brownsville, and from his hotel tried to get into communication with Captain Kelley. The result was a message from the banker to this effect:

"Miss Kelley will not listen to any explanation Lieutenant Richardson may have to offer. Mr. Kelley and Miss Kelley will leave for Washington to-morrow, and it will be well for Lieutenant Richardson not to attempt to return to Fort Sam Houston on the same train with them."

Two days later the Lieutenant returned to his post—where he knew he no longer had a friend.

Captain Kelley had gone to Washington to testify about the Brownsville raid. He made no complaint against Lieutenant Richardson; but the matter had been brought by others to the attention of the War Department, and Lieutenant Richardson shortly received a hint that it would be best for him to leave the service. Accordingly he placed his resignation in the hands of Colonel Brown, his superior officer, who forwarded it to Washington, where it went straight to President Roosevelt's hands, who promptly accepted it.

On the day after he knew that he was out of the army and forever disgraced, Lieutenant Richardson's body was found in a hotel in Fort Sam Houston. He had taken his own life with large doses of both prussic acid and morphine. He left a note which read:

"To whom it may concern: This act has been inevitable since last November."

What did he mean? Solely this—easily discoverable with the man dead: Lieutenant Richardson, following his illness last Fall, had become a confirmed victim of the morphine habit. He had tried repeatedly to shake off the bonds of the drug and had failed. Knowing that he was doomed, he would not make miserable the life of another. He could not bring himself to the point of confessing to his affianced bride, but he could fail to appear at the wedding.

"Richardson came very near being a hero," said one of the officers who had held him most in contempt.

In the light of revelations made after his death one can imagine Lieutenant Richardson standing before a mirror—like de Maupassant's "Coward"—choosing between the poison draught in one hand and the wedding ring in the other.

Did Lieutenant Richardson prove himself a coward, as de Maupassant's sorry hero did? Was it cowardice to refuse to live disgraced? Having voluntarily disgraced himself in order not to involve another's happiness, would he not have been braver to have lived on in disgrace to fight and vanquish his secret enemy?

But, outside of religion's promises, is there any sufficient reward for such a struggle?

THE LATE LIEUT. MACK RICHARDSON.

A Coward—By Guy De Maupassant.

[The Viscount Goutran Joseph de Signoles, young, rich, handsome, gallant, a good fencer and a fine pistol shot, whose life has been happy and tranquil, has properly slapped the face of an unknown man for annoying a lady, the Viscount's guest. Thus, for the first time in his life, the Viscount confronts the prospect of a duel. He goes to bed with the agreeable reflection that whatever happens his conduct will have been irreproachable. But he cannot sleep. He grows anxious. His heart beats madly.]

"CAN a man be afraid in spite of him?"

And this doubt invaded him, this uneasiness, this dread. If some force stronger than his will, if some commanding, and irresistible power should conquer him, what would happen? Yes, what could happen? He should certainly appear upon the field, since he willed to do it. But if he trembled? But if he fainted? And he thought of his situation, of his reputation, of his name.

And a curious necessity seized him on a sudden to get up again and look at himself in the mirror. He relit his candle. When he perceived his face reflected in the polished glass he hardly recognized himself, and it seemed to him that he had never seen this man before. His eyes appeared enormous; and he was pale, surely he was pale, very pale.

He remained upright before th[illegible]mirror. He put out his tongue as if to [illegible]st the state of his health, and all on a sudden this thought entered into him after the fashion of a bullet:

"The day after to-morrow, at this time, I shall perhaps be dead."

And his heart began to beat quickly. * * *

He made his toilet, dressed himself, and left the house with a firm step.

He repeated to himself, while walking: "I must be decided, very decided. I must prove that I am not afraid."

His seconds, the marquis and the colonel, put themselves at his disposition, and after having pressed his hands energetically, discussed the conditions of the meeting.

The colonel asked:

"You want a serious duel?"

"The viscount answered:

"Very serious."

The marquis took up the word.

"You insist on pistols?"

"Yes."

"Do you leave us free to settle the rest?"

The viscount articulated with a dry, jerky voice:

"Twenty paces, firing at the word, lifting the arm instead of lowering it. Exchange of shots until some one is badly wounded."

The colonel declared, in a satisfied tone:

"Those are excellent conditions. You are a good shot; the chances are all in your favor."

And they separated. The viscount returned home to wait for them. His agitation, which has been temporarily calmed, was now increasing with every moment. He felt along his arms, along his legs, in his chest, a kind of quivering, a kind of continuous vibration; he could not stay in one place, neither sitting down nor standing up. He had no longer a trace of moisture in his mouth, he made at every instant a noisy movement of his tongue as if to unglue it from his palate. * * *

The sound of the door-bell caused him such a feeling of suffocation that he had not the strength to rise and meet his seconds.

He did not even dare to talk to them any longer—to say "How do you do?" to pronounce a single word, for fear lest they divine all from the alteration in his voice.

The colonel said:

"Everything is settled according to the conditions which you fixed. Your opponent at first insisted on the privileges of the offended party, but he yielded almost immediately, and has agreed to everything. His seconds are two officers." * * *

When he felt himself alone again, it seemed to him that he was going mad. His servant having lit the lamps, he sat down before his table to write some letters. After tracing at the top of the page, "This is my will," he got up again and drew off, feeling incapable of putting two ideas together, of taking a single resolution, of deciding anything at all.

And so he was going to fight a duel! He could no longer escape that. What could be passing within him? He wanted to fight, he had that intention and that resolution firmly fixed; and he felt very plainly that, notwithstanding all the effort of his mind and all the tension of his will, he would not be able to retain strength enough to go as far as the place of the encounter. He tried to fancy the combat, his own attitude, and the bearing of his adversary.

From time to time his teeth struck against one another in his mouth with a little dry noise. He tried to read, and took up de Chateauvillard's duelling code. Then he asked himself:

"My adversary, has he frequented the shooting galleries? Is he well known? What's his class? How can I find out?"

He remembered the book by Baron de Vaux upon pistol shooters, and he searched through it from one end to the other. Georges Lamil was not mentioned. But, however, if the man had not been a good shot he would not have accepted immediately that dangerous weapon and those conditions, which were mortal.

His pistol case by Gastiane Renette lay on a little round table. As he passed he opened it and took out one of the pistols, then placed himself as if to shoot, and raised his arm; but he trembled from head to foot, and the barrel shook in all directions.

Then he said:

"It is impossible. I cannot fight like this."

At the end of the barrel he regarded that little hole, black and deep, which spits out death; he thought of dishonor, of the whispers in the clubs, of the laughter in the drawing rooms, of the disdain of women, of the allusions in the papers, of the insults which would be thrown at him by cowards.

He went on staring at the pistol, and raising the hammer, he suddenly saw a priming glitter beneath it like a little red flame. The pistol had been left loaded, by chance, by oversight. And he experienced from that a confused inexplicable joy.

If in the presence of the other he had not the calm and noble bearing which is fit, he would be lost forever. He would be spotted, marked with a sign of infamy, hunted from society. And he should not have that calm and bold bearing; he knew it, he felt it. And yet he was really brave, because he wanted to fight! He was brave, because—. The thought which just grazed him did not even complete itself in his spirit, but, opening his mouth wide, he brusquely thrust the pistol barrel into the very bottom of his throat and pressed upon the trigger. . .

When his valet ran in, attracted by the report, he found him dead, on his back. A jet of blood had spattered the white paper on the table and made a great red stain below the words:

"This is my Will."

'OH, THOSE WEDDING BELLS FOR ME!'

The Good, Old Fashioned, Hurry-Up Courtship of Millionaire R. L. Thomas, Who Couldn't Wait Another Day, and So Pursued Sixteen Ministers All Over Washington, D. C., Till He Caught One Who Had Time to Make Beautiful Miss "Dimple" Trent His Wife Immediately!

Miss Irma Trent, Now Mrs. R. L. Thomas.

WHAT a relief it is to know that the popular cynicisms of the theatre and music halls—such as "No Wedding Bells for Me," has failed to undermine good, old-fashioned sentiment in real life.

Here is the case of R. L. Thomas, the millionaire turfman, who has confessed in those actions that speak louder than words, that no sounds are half so sweet in his ears as the sound of wedding bells.

"Oh, those wedding bells for me," said Mr. Thomas, and he got 'em.

But how frantically Mr. Thomas did pursue those wedding bells until finally he came up with them! He dreamed of wedding bells. The alarm clock that awakened him betimes for trials at the race track sounded a wedding bell note. Wedding bells saluted his eager imagination at railway crossings while he "looked out for the locomotive." Wedding bells pealed whenever a hospital ambulance rattled clanging through the street. Even the Fire Department wagons were equipped with wedding bells for his ears. Oh, how Mr. Thomas loved those wedding bells!

And yet Mr. Thomas—following the death of his wife some years before—had lived to be forty-three years old, and to see his thick crop of hair turn snow white, before giving more than a passing thought to bells of any kind. This was because beautiful Miss "Dimple" Trent, of Washington, D. C., had not yet flashed across his enraptured vision.

When the Washington racing season began last Fall Miss Trent asked her mother to be allowed to attend the races, as she had never yet seen the ponies canter. Mrs. Trent gave her permission, and provided a chaperon for her daughter.

In the grandstand Miss Trent's beauty diverted attention from the events on the track. She is a young woman of most striking appearance. Even women in the street turn as she passes to steal a second glance. She is tall, willowy, and her figure is perfect. Her well-poised head is crowned with great quantities of midnight black hair, and her eyes are large, limpid and violet-blue.

No wonder that when she entered the grandstand Mr. Thomas, as well as many others, looked at the handsome young woman admiringly. But Mr. Thomas appeared to continue to look at her admiringly, so admiringly, in fact, that it was many minutes before he saw that her chaperon was a warm friend of his.

He was delighted at the discovery and hurried over to shake hands with his friend and secure an introduction to her beautiful charge. His intense admiration was expressed in his face as he bowed low, "as only a Kentucky gentleman can, sah," over the slim hand that Miss Trent placed in his.

And as turn about is fair play, Miss Trent, on her part was immensely attracted to the courtly Southern, soft-accented gentleman, with his refined face and distinguishing, silvery hair.

It was, undoubtedly, a case of love at first sight, and from that time the racing man paid strenuous court to Miss "Dimple," and very shortly proposed. She accepted him with the understanding that his family should know and like her first and in that event the wedding was to occur in July. Three weeks ago Mr. Thomas was visiting his fiancee. She semed to him more than usually beautiful and charming.

Ever since his engagement he had been keeping the railway tracks hot between Washington and the places where his ponies were breaking records. And after each brief hour with his fiancee he had been able to hear nothing but wedding bells.

Now he could spare time for a longer visit. Each time his gaze rested on the dark tresses of his fiancee they seemed entwined with orange blossoms. When she spoke her voice held the music of wedding bells.

"July! Oh, good gracious!" he ejaculated.

"Very well," she replied demurely, "if July is too soon"——

"Too soon! To-morrow would not be too soon. To-day not too soon. Darling, come, we'll cut out this waiting 'till July."

"No, dearest. First you must meet my mother and I must meet your people. That was agreed, you know."

So he telegraphed for his married sister, Mrs. Ireland, of Kentucky, to come to Washington at once.

Mrs. Ireland came. She was charmed with Miss "Dimple." She visited Miss Trent's mother and urged her to let her daugater accompany her to New York.

"Very well," said Mrs. Trent. "It will be a good chance for 'Dimple' to do some shopping."

Shortly Mr. Thomas found it convenient to turn up in New York, too. He spent an afternoon and evening in the society of his fiancee—and weding bells kept him awake all night. Bright and early next morning he was at his fiancee's hotel on his knees begging Miss "Dimple" to let him get a license and call in a minister then and there.

"No, dearest, I've promised that when I marry my mother shall be present."

"Au revoir, then; I'm off to Washington to see mamma. Will you promise to follow on the next train if she telegraphs."

"I promise, you great, big goose," laughed Miss "Dimple."

"THREW SOME THINGS INTO A SUIT CASE, AND SPRINTED FOR THE WASHINGTON TRAIN."

Miss "Dimple" was having a glorious shopping orgy. Day by day, hour by hour, her trousseau was nearing the point of perfection, and still the good work went on.

In Washington Mr. Thomas rushed straight from the train to the home of his prospective mother-in-law, suit case in hand. Mamma simply had to say "yes." Whereat Mr. Thomas and his suit case rushed to the nearest telegraph office, and, in mamma's name, wired to Miss "Dimple."

"Come home. Consent to immediate wedding."

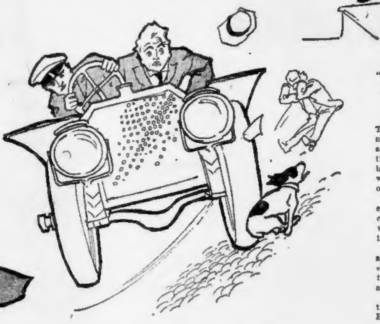
Miss "Dimple" was as good as her word, and while her train was carrying her back to Washington, Mr. Thomas did some necessary business, as well as he could with those wedding bells ringing in his ears.

"To-morrow," insisted Mr. Thomas on the same evening of his fiancee's arrival. "In the evening, here at your home."

Her trousseau being practically complete, Miss "Dimple" had not the heart to ask for more time.

One more sleepless night, full of wedding bells, for the eager lover. At nine o'clock in the morning he was in his automobile breaking records over the route to the marriage license department.

"WHEREAT MR. THOMAS AND HIS SUIT CASE RUSHED FOR THE NEAREST TELEGRAPH OFFICE."



"IN HIS AUTOMOBILE BREAKING RECORDS OVER THE ROUTE TO THE MARRIAGE LICENCE DEPARTMENT."

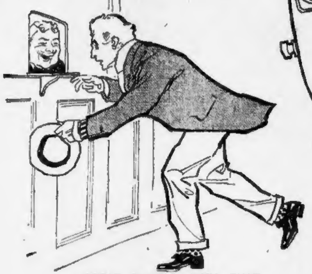
The clerk at the window listened to Mr. Thomas's names and other facts concerning the contracting parties and then demanded:

"Name of officiating clergyman?"

"Great snakes! Does that have to go in the licence?" said Mr. Thomas.

"Certainly. Clergyman's name, please."

"Dashed if I know," and then, as the clerk was turning wearily away from the window, "hold on, young man. Stay right where you are. Don't do a thing till you see me."



"'GREAT SNAKES! DOES THAT HAVE TO GO IN THE LICENCE!' SAID MR. THOMAS."

And Mr. Thomas rushed off to find a minister who was not otherwise engaged. He was in a hurry. The city directory furnished him with half a dozen names, whose owners dwelt not too far away.

So, jumping into his machine, away whirled the prospective groom to the nearest rectory. On inquiring of the trim maid who answered the bell, for the Rev. Dr. Wilson, he was told that Dr. Wilson's wife was ill and that the minister could not leave.

Back into the automobile and whiz around the corner three blocks to the Rev. Clarence Smith's.

"Rev. Mr. Smith out."

Again into the auto and five blocks furtner on to the Dr. Eaton's, only to learn that the reverend doctor was attending an important church conference and could not leave.

Back into the automobile scrambled the disappointed millionaire, the chauffeur put on extra power and scudded across town to another church and its adjoining rectory.

"Just retired after being up all night with a sick parishioner and left strict orders not to be disturbed," was all the satisfaction Mr. Thomas received there.

Again on the maddening search. Dr. Thomas proved to be the name of the next minister. Millionaire Thomas, with all the superstition of a race-track man, decided that the similarity of names must surely be a "hunch," and that Rev. Mr. Thomas was awaiting him with the prayer book open.

But the "hunch" failed, utterly and miserably. Dr. Thomas had the prayer book open, but not at the correct place, for he was in the act of conducting a christening in a distant part of the city.

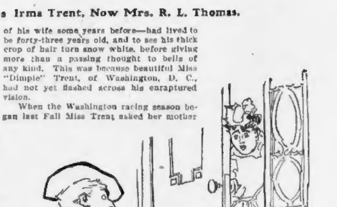
The now more than disappointed millionaire re-entered the automobile disconsolately enough, and in a heart-breaking voice bade the driver to crank and spark once more and go to another parsonage.

"Very sorry, indeed, sir," politely replied the servant at the next stop, "but Dr. Butler left this morning for Jamestown."

Two more ministerial homes were visited with no better success, and, thoroughly disheartened, Mr. Thomas directed the chauffeur to return to the City Hall.

Once there he explained his fruitless quest to a sympathetic but amused lot of clerks, one of whom consented to accompany Mr. Thomas on a still further search for a parson.

The start was made bravely enough, but not until eight more parsonages had been visited and Mr. Thomas had pulled one reverend bell handle out by the roots did success crown their efforts. The sixteenth rectory was that of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and at last—at last!—they had found one rector who was at home and available! Mr. Thomas explained the situation to the rector, Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, who agreed to wait at the rectory until Mr. Thomas could get a carriage and fetch his charming bride.



"PULLED ONE REVEREND BELL HANDLE OUT BY THE ROOTS."

Mr. Thomas fell on the minister's neck.

"MR. THOMAS FELL ON THE MINISTER'S NECK."

When he arrived at his prospective wife's home, at No. 61 New York Avenue, N. E., he found her in bridal array and very much alarmed at his prolonged absence. As they entered the carriage Mr. Thomas told the driver to exceed the speed limit if necessary, for he did not want "the only minister in Washington City to get away."

The ceremony was quickly performed and Mr. Thomas and his new wife left on a late afternoon train for Sheepshead Bay, where a few days later he celebrated his marriage by winning $50,000.

Robert Lee Thomas is rated well in the millions and is represented throughout the State of Kentucky by large tobacco interests. He is passionately fond of horses and is a shrewd horseman enough to keep a large stable and make it pay. His string consists now of twenty-six horses. One of the best known is, perhaps, Harcourt, named in honor of his first wife, a Miss Harcourt, of Lexington, Kentucky. The first Mrs. Thomas died about three years ago. She did not leave any children.

Irma Trent, now Mrs. R. L. Thomas, was born in Atlanta, Georgia, and is twenty-three years old. Shortly after her birth the family moved to Lynchburg, Va., and it was there that she received her education.

Notable New Paintings of the Year AND Priceless Ancient Art Treasures Discovered.

A Weird Colossal Conceptio of Martial Glory the Salon's Chief E ibit; a Noble Statue Worthy to Rank With he Venus de Milo iscovered by Archa logists.

THE great European exhibitions of art—the two Salons in Paris and the Royal Academy in London—have just been held, and the critics have finally decided which are the most brilliant or remarkable pictures of the year.

A few of the most discussed pictures are reproduced here.

Beyond question the greatest sensation in the Paris Salon—the elder Salon—has been created by the picture entitled "The Pedestal," painted by J. Laparra. This is described by some critics as a work of powerful imagination, and by others as a huge monstrosity.

It is an allegorical representation of the way in which the success of a great conqueror—king, president, general, millionaire or whatever he may be—is built up.

The pedestal on which the conqueror stands is built of human bones and the corpses of men and women killed by the sword or the bullet, the halter or the explosive. The pedestal has crowded about its base the figures of widows and orphans, and from its lofty tiers of mutilated humanity the blood drains down and forms red pools, which are shown in the painting.

Every form of human misery is represented in the lower portion of the pedestal. There are starving and mutilated men, women and children. Around the dreadful heaps of corpses hover huge birds of prey.

A higher portion of the pedestal consists partly of a church or pantheon. On the very summit of the structure stands the figure of a Caesar or Napoleon in brilliantly shining armor. He reins in his enormous black horse and brandishes his sword of flame over the vast structure of human bodies. His attitude is vainglorious and theatrical. His features are not clearly defined, but there is a suggestion of a death's head about them. At one or two points the pedestal is burning, so that the effect is that of a colossal funeral pyre, on which the conqueror will end his career in a suitable manner.

This picture has been greatly admired on account of the realism shown in many of the figures in the lower plane. The figures of women, children, wounded men and other sufferers are full of feeling and reality. On the other hand, many persons criticise the picture on account of its enormous size, and rudely suggest that the artist painted it so large in order that no one might miss seeing it.

But it may very reasonably be answered that, having chosen this way of representing the wickedness of war, the artist could not paint it effectively on a small scale. Martial glory, many of the best men feel, is such a wicked thing that an artist is justified in doing everything in his power to force the public, and especially the French public, to dwell upon the horrors it engenders.

This picture is certainly well calculated to call the attention of the general public to the subject. No country has suffered more than France from the horrors of war and the deadly pitfalls of martial glory. Probably this picture represents the form in which the present French Government wishes to see war portrayed. M. Laparra was a former winner of the Prix de Rome, and enjoyed his artistic education in Rome at the expense of the French Government. It is significant that his picture is exhibited on the eve of the second Hague Peace Conference.

It is pleasant to turn from these scenes of carnage to the magnificent portrait of "Madame M.," by Francois Flameng. This is the most beautiful portrait in the Salon, and also the portrait of the most beautiful woman among those who are represented there. The full-length figure is full of grace, beauty, breeding and feminine delicacy. It is truly queenlike.

"A Tragedy Behind the Scenes" is a very interesting picture, by Jose Miralles Darmanin. The eternal contrast between the joviality of the comedian, as seen on the stage, and the bitterness of his private life has led the artist to substitute the dying Columbine for the dying clown of previous pictures and poems. Accident or sudden illness, poor Columbine of the circus is stretched out near to death on a cot behind the great tent. The doctor has uncovered her bust to diagnose her illness and now stands writing a prescription, while the clown, in stage dress and make-up, tries to read his face. The woman seems dying, but the man has not given up all hope. One feels that this domestic tragedy is going on to the accompaniment of the noise of the arena just beyond the tent.

In the Royal Academy one of the most brilliantly decorative pictures depicts Joan of Arc saving her country at Orleans. It is the work of Frank Craig. It has a very striking color scheme, in which red predominates. The straight lines of scarlet lances stand out against the red and purple of the foliage in the background. The whole work is majestic and splendidly decorative. There is spirited movement in the armed horsemen with couched lances, who sweep onward in irresistible onslaught. The Maid of Orleans rides ahead of her countrymen upon the trenches of the English, who are terrified at her appearance.

"Bellona," by J. C. Dollman, is a representation of the goddess of war that is full of force, sincerity and artistic feeling. It is interesting to observe that in this artist's view the true dogs of war are Great Danes. They look the part very thoroughly.

The finest portrait in the Academy is generally admitted to be John Sargent, the American artist's, picture of Lady Sassoon, the wife of the King's Hindu friend. The artist seems to have flung heart and soul into the painting of this lady, in black hat and black dress, relieved only by touches of pink and the glitter of some pearls, who glides with such grace and deliberation athwart the canvas. The picture would attract by its bravura of technique and its flawless harmony of composition; but in the unfathomable smile of the subtle eyes and mouth, in the sensitive, long-fingered hands, there is the illusion of life.

It is almost uncanny, as you gaze long at it, to see how the figure steps from illusion into reality, and, with the silk cloak gathered in the nervous fingers, seems to move across the vision. This is not only a picture of the year, but a picture for all time.

There are several other portraits by Sargent. His "Countess of Essex" and "Lady Eden" have all his eloquence and audacity, but they are simply "commissions," admirably successful. His other three portraits are painted for painting's sake, with fulness of sympathy. The "Lady Speyer" is a daring triumph of line and arrangement, everything so right that it seems inevitable. "Mrs. Archibald Langman" is brilliant in its stillness of emotion, in the subtle curves of face and lips, the tensity of the closed hands. But among Sargent's many masterpieces his "Lady Sassoon" will surely take high rank.

OF intense interest to art lovers all over the world are the remarkable archaeological discoveries just made in the group of ancient Greek cities lying within the present boundaries of Turkey.

The famous cities explored include Delos, Pergamos, Miletus, Aegina and Aphrodisias.

The statues, friezes and other beautiful objects of art recovered equal in value and interest all the material hitherto discovered in Greece.

Most wonderful of all are the treasures recovered from Delos, which stands on an island of the Greek Archipelago. Among them is a more than lifesize statue of Aphrodite playing with Pan. This is remarkable as the earliest ancient Greek statue yet discovered displaying a humorous spirit. In artistic execution it is almost worthy to rank with the immortal Venus of Milo and the Hermes of Praxiteles. Naturally, it lacks the majestic and austere beauty of those compositions, but in its style it could not be surpassed.

The new Venus of Delos is plump and enchantingly pretty. Pan, who personifies the god of nature, is an astonishingly grotesque but amusing creature. His face is half animal, but there is nothing brutal about it. He has the legs and horns of a goat and a face that is hardly human, but is not that of any particular beast. It is just the spirit of wild nature in partially human form. Pan is putting his hands playfully upon the arm of Aphrodite, apparently tickling her.

Aphrodite is raising in the air with her right hand a curious object, with which she threatens playfully to hit Pan. The object looks like a modern leather shoe, but, of course, it is not. Probably it is an implement of the toilet for rubbing the flesh, and thus would lead to the supposition that Aphrodite has been surprised by Pan at her bath.

A smile suffuses the face and the whole person of Aphrodite. Indeed, a spirit of fun and playfulness pervades the entire composition. Evidently it is a creation of somewhat late Greek art, for in the earlier period no artist would have dared to represent a Pan tickling the mighty mother of the gods. It suggests the time when the Greeks were beginning to make fun of their gods.

The many beautiful works of art recovered at Delos include the statue of an Ephebos, or youth, in Praxitelean style; six portrait statues of eminent Romans of the fourth century, an Apollo Citharaeda, two statues of Artemis and a copy of the famous Eirene of Cephisodotos. A vast quantity of small objects, such as bronzes, lamps and terra cotta figures, having formed part of the ornamentation of temples, palaces and other public buildings, has been found.

The entire ground plan of Delos has been brought to light, its streets, public buildings, palaces and hovels. The theatre is a very interesting example of this class of structure.

Delos was one of the greatest centres of ancient Greek life. Originally it was fabled to have been raised from the bottom of the sea by Neptune's trident and moored in place by Jupiter to make a refuge for Latona, who there gave birth to Apollo and Diana. Consequently the island became sacred to Apollo, whose oracle gave responses here in Summer. Its temples were enriched by gifts from all nations. The city of Delos having no walls, was guarded by its sanctity; its temple and immense treasures were untouched by the Persians in their invasion, and during the following wars it became the seat of the common treasury of the Grecian States. When this was removed to Athens Delos decayed, but was still remarkable for commerce, and after the destruction of Corinth by the Romans became a flourishing seat of art.

The excavations of Delos were conducted by the French archaeologists, MM. Chamonard, Bulard and Mayence. The expenses were borne by the Duc de Loubat, who was formerly a citizen of New York.

At Aegina the Temple of Aphaia has been further excavated and restored. It has been decided that Aphaia was originally Britomartis, the daughter of Zeus. She fled from Crete because Minos, the terrible king of that island, father of the Minotaur, began to pay her alarming attentions. In time she was deified at Aegina under the name of Aphaia, and in Crete under that of Dictynna. The most remarkable features of the temple are two friezes from the east and west ends. That at the east represents a combat between Greeks and Trojans over the body of Achilles. The other also represents a scene of the siege of Troy, and is interesting because it includes the great hero Hercules. These sculptures are works of remarkable beauty, rivalling the friezes of the Parthenon.

At the city of Miletus many discoveries have been made. The Senate house and a magnificent public fountain have been brought to light. Several of the buildings explored contain remarkable examples of Pompeiian polychrome decoration. Among them is a museion, or public lecture room.

The statues found at this city include an Aphrodite leaning on a Hermes, an Apollo Citharaeda in Praxitelean style, and six muses, which are reproductions of the work of the great sculptor, Philiscus. These statues were erected as a public monument by the celebrated Roman Empress Faustina about the end of the second century. These generous gifts show that her life was not as completely disreputable as is commonly supposed.

Extensive thermae, or Roman baths, have also been excavated at Miletus.

In the vicinity of the water front of Miletus the sanctuary of Apollo Delphinios has been completely excavated, and has permitted the investigators to study the traces of three different periods of ancient Greek architecture. One was the Archaic period, when the great central court of a house was surrounded by a single colonnade; the second was the Hellenistic period, when the colonnade was doubled on every side of the house except the West, and the third was the Graeco-Roman period, when the builders returned to the first style, except that the Doric order was replaced by the Corinthian.

On the open place which extends from the Senate to the Fountain of Miletus patient research has made possible a complete restoration of the great monumental gate which formerly gave access to the southern Agora, or market place.

At Pergamos the eminent archaelogist, Herr Doerpfeld, has completed the excavation of the great gymnasium. The interior court is 225 feet in length by 105 feet in width, surrounded by a portico two stories in height, whence the spectators could view the games. On the hill above is a hall for the worship of the emperors.

The house of the Consul Attalos, whence came the famous Hermes of Alcmenos, has been entirely excavated, and another Hermes—unfortunately headless—has been found. A very interesting theatre has been brought to view at this place.

Pergamos was the greatest of Greek cities in Asia Minor. After belonging successively to the Persians, the empire of Alexander the Great and the Thracian kingdom of Lysimachus, it fell into the hands of Seleucus I. of Syria. On his death, in 280 B. C., it became independent under Philetaerus, and extended its power and territory. Attalus I. assumed the title of King, and through the friendly relations which he and his successor, Eumenes II., entertained with Rome the territory was increased by that of Mysia, Lydia, Phrygia and other neighboring provinces. The wealth of Attalos was proverbial in Rome, as readers of Horace will recall. Pergamos became one of the most splendid cities of Asia, rivalling [illegible] its library, a renowned school of literature and the invention of parchment the glories of Alexandria.

The Turkish archaeologist, Edhem Bey, has been conducting very interesting investigations at Abalanda. He has discovered a great number of blocks of marble belonging to an ancient Greek temple, and a beautiful frieze representing a combat of Greeks and Amazons. He also found the remains of a great Christian basilica. Then, after cutting through a thick wall of granite, in which he recognized the peribola of a sanctuary, he brought to light a mass of substructures, much complicated by numerous reconstructions, in which he distinguished the plan of an ancient pseudo-dipterous temple. A capital and some fragments from the altar are of a character that must rank this temple with the most beautiful monuments of Ionic architecture in ancient Greece. An inscription proved that the temple had been dedicated to Apollo, and it is, therefore, very probable that it is the famous pseudo-dipteros of Apollo, constructed by the architect Menestheus and mentioned by the historian Vitruvius.

WAS SO MUCH TRAGEDY EVER BEFORE CROWDED INTO ONE GIRL'S LIFE?

She Saw Her Father Drop Dead at the Supper Table; She Killed Her Mother, Then Tried to Kill Herself; Her Brother Killed Himself on Their Mother's Grave, and She Took Poison; She Was Then Tried for Murder, Spent Six Years In Madhouse, Escaped, Wandered to Los Angeles, Fell in Love, Worked as a Servant Under An Assumed Name, Died of a Brain Tumor in a Hospital, Was Buried As "Olga Miller" and Thus Ended the Tragic Career of Bertha Beilstein, Heiress to $100,000.

THE tortured brain and heart of Bertha Beilstein at last are at rest, and her death in a hospital in Los Angeles, [illegible] has cleared up the tragic mystery surrounding the last ten years of [illegible] life.

She died a wanderer and in poverty. [illegible] her death precipitates a contest for property valued at more than $100,000.

Before her mind's eye during all those years was the picture of her mother [illegible] dead by her hand, of her frantic efforts with the same weapon to end her own life, of her brother dying a suicide on his murdered mother's grave.

During the last two years of her wanderings she lived over again six years of close confinement in a madhouse, which [illegible] ended with her escape through the [illegible]ance of the man who loved her and of friends she had made.

In spite of the tragedies she had [illegible] she had always been able to retain [illegible] and she held fast the love of a man to the hour of her death. But she never dared to marry, and there seemed to be no one spot on the earth's surface where she could rest while life remained in her.

Now that she is dead the tragic mystery of Bertha Beilstein is explained, best explained to those who read first the history of the last third of the poor girl's life.

Ten years ago Bertha Beilstein was tall and a really beautiful girl, with a charming and intelligent face crowned with heavy masses of auburn hair, which, when unconfined, swept her knees. She lived with her parents and her elder brother, Edward, in a comfortable home in Pittsburg, her father being a wealthy business man of that city.

Bertha seemed to be a healthy girl, except that she was occasionally troubled with headaches. Mentally she was normal, unless a tendency toward spiritualism in one so young can be considered abnormal. Bertha and her mother had come under the influence of spiritualistic teaching while visiting the Chicago World's Fair when Bertha was barely sixteen, and these teachings had seemed to take firm root in the girl's brain.

ocked by Her Father's Death.

One evening Bertha's father suddenly straightened up in his chair at the supper table, then fell to the floor dead. This was a terrible shock to all the family and Bertha in particular showed the strain. Sometimes she spoke of seeing spirits.

On October 2, 1898, a few months after her husband's death, Mrs. Beilstein was awakened by the sound of some one moving about her room.

"Who's there?" she called out.

There was the sound of a match struck, a jet flared up and Mrs. Beilstein saw that the intruder was her daughter.

"Why, Bertha, what is the matter?" she asked, sitting up in bed.

Her daughter was aiming a revolver at her.

"Mother, I am going to kill you," said Bertha.

Almost the next instant Mrs. Beilstein was dead. Bertha had fired twice and either shot would have been enough. Then she turned the weapon on herself, pouring the four remaining bullets into her own body.

One of these bullets penetrated the right temple, crashing into her brain. Another pierced her body just beneath the lungs, one the doctors believed to be mortal wounds, the two others being mere flesh wounds.

She was taken to a hospital, and although more than two ounces of brain matter had escaped from the wound in Bertha's head, on the third day she regained consciousness. In two weeks she was able to go home, where she was arrested and placed under guard charged with the murder of her mother.

Soon she learned that while she lay at the hospital her brother Edward had been found dead on her mother's grave. He had shot himself. Hearing this, Bertha made an enigmatical remark:

"Then it is soon finished."

When it was discovered that she had previously [illegible] and swallowed nearly an ounce of laudanum, that remark was understood.

n Control of Spirits.

[illegible] the doctors were able to save her [illegible] in a few weeks she was placed on trial [illegible] her testimony in her own defence she [illegible] of her mother's death as here related.

"But why did you kill your mother?" she was asked.

"Spirits visited me and compelled me to do so," she answered. She was quite calm and entirely rational in manner and speech. She continued:

"I loved my mother. I did not want to kill her. But ever since my father's death [illegible] loved him dearly, spirits had visited me [illegible] night, telling me that father longed for his dear ones to join him. They urged me to kill my mother and myself so that we would be united again. I fought against their influence, but they persisted.

"On the night that I killed my mother [illegible] with the spirits until nearly dawn. [illegible] in despair I tried to drink poison. [illegible] my arm stiffened so that I could not [illegible] my mouth. Then I knew that I must [illegible] the spirits. I took the revolver and [illegible] into my mother's room and did as I [illegible] told you.

"When I came out of the hospital and [illegible] that my brother had joined father and mother I was, of course, more anxious than ever to die."

Bertha was heir to her mother's property. The prosecution tried to show that to have been a sufficient motive for the girl's crime of matricide, but failed. Her determined efforts to kill herself made such reasoning fallacious.

A curious bit of evidence showed a close friendship between Bertha and a certain medical student, with whom she had carried on a correspondence, both writing with invisible ink. This student swore that he knew what was in Bertha's mind, and that if a letter of his had not been intercepted it would have prevented the tragedy.

The jury found that Bertha Beilstein, "being insane," was not guilty of murder. Accordingly she was sent to the Pennsylvania State Asylum for the Insane at Dixmont, near Pittsburg.

There Bertha remained for six years. Most of the time she was in good health, seemed quite rational, and by her beauty and engaging manners gained gradually the friendship and sympathy of the nurses.

A lock of her luxuriant hair usually con[illegible]

But the nurses saw it often. Also they knew of the scars of three other bullet wounds.

It has never been known which of the nurses it was who was so sympathetic and so deep in the confidence of Bertha Beilstein that she came to know of the man who loved the girl so utterly that he was willing to take any risk to regain freedom for her.

The identity of this man has remained a mystery—unless that mystery, too, is solved by Bertha Beilstein's death in Los Angeles.

He was supposed to be from Chicago and rich, to have met Bertha when she was in Chicago with her mother, stopping with friends in that city.

Prior to the great tragedy in her life Bertha Beilstein's most intimate girl chum had been a pretty girl of Allegheny City, Olga Miller. They were perfect foils to each other in every respect except the [illegible] vanity common to both. Olga Miller was slight and dark, while Bertha was tall and stately and of the blonde type.

When Bertha was sent to the asylum Olga was inconsolable. She wrote to her chum frequently and her letters were answered. This correspondence seemed to have the effect of making pretty Olga quite reckless. She plunged into pleasures and dissipations, and one day her body was found in a room where she had [illegible] for some days after running away from home. She had drunk carbolic acid.

When [illegible] she had nearly completed her sixth year in the Dixmont asylum, during which period she had repeatedly written coherent letters to the authorities declaring herself sane and asking [illegible] she [illegible] her sensational escape. A key was [illegible] obtained and a man in an [illegible] had stopped near the institution [illegible] sounded his horn, then shortly an automobile whirled swiftly away with a passenger beside the driver. There were [illegible] the [illegible] of the escape to [illegible]

A[illegible] the first week [illegible] Bertha Beilstein seemed to have disappeared from the surface of this earth.

One day in the last week in May the authorities of a hospital in Los Angeles, Cal., suddenly came to the conclusion that they had a case of murder on their hands. A young woman patient who had entered the hospital a few weeks before, giving the name of Olga Miller, had died after drinking a glass of milk given to her by a man visitor who had been so persistent in his efforts to see the patient that he had finally been admitted.

This man, who was young, good looking and well dressed, had given the name of Richard Hardy. After talking with the [illegible] for a few minutes he asked the nurse for a glass of milk. The nurse brought [illegible] the visitor who [illegible] to [illegible] of the patient. She choked when drinking it. Nurses came hurrying from other parts of the ward, whereupon Hardy jumped up and ran away.

The next morning Olga Miller was dead. During the night Hardy had called up the hospital anxiously asking after the patient. He was stopping at the Royal Hotel. When the girl was dead, the hospital authorities, believing that Olga Miller's visitor had given her a dose of poison in the milk, had him arrested on the charge of murder. But when the autopsy showed no trace of poison, showing instead that death had been caused by a tumor on the brain which had been gradually developing for years, the prisoner was released.

This was after Olga Miller had been buried. The facts now came to light that Olga Miller [illegible] while working as a waitress in Los Angeles for $35 a month. She was supposed to be getting ready to marry Richard Hardy, who sold books of a [illegible]. He seemed to be very much in love with the girl.

Presently there was a startling development. Frederick Beilstein, a cousin of Bertha Beilstein, had telegraphed from Chicago that the dead Olga Miller had been none other than Bertha Beilstein. He ordered her grave to be guarded until he could arrive and take charge of the body.

How could Frederick Beilstein in Chicago be so certain that Olga Miller, dead in Los Angeles, was Bertha Beilstein? No one had reason to doubt that the hospital patient was other than the Olga Miller she claimed to be, and, therefore, no description of the dead woman had been circulated. For the answer to this question the scene changes to Chicago.

She Was Bertha Beilstein.

A few days prior to the death of the Los Angeles hospital patient Edmund W. Wander, of Chicago, received the following telegram from Richard Hardy in Los Angeles:

"Olga Miller is dying in hospital. Send fifty dollars at once."

Mr. Wander lost no time in seeing his friend Frederick Beilstein.

"Bertha is dying in the hospital in Los Angeles," he said, and showed the telegram containing that intelligence about "Olga Miller."

There was no need of any description of "Olga Miller." Both men knew that Bertha Beilstein had assumed the name of her dead girl chum, fearing recapture during her wanderings after escaping from the asylum.

When Mr. Wander was a [illegible] living in Allegheny City, Pa., his people had been intimate friends of the Beilsteins. He had gone to Chicago and married [illegible] Frederick Beilstein, Bertha's cousin [illegible] and there during the visit of Bertha and her mother to the Chicago World's Fair they had stopped with both families.

The Wanders and the Chicago Beilsteins heard of Bertha's escape from the Dixmont asylum, and anxiously awaited further news. In a few days it came, brought by Bertha herself. She was exhausted and almost in rags. Having insufficient money for her journey she had been forced to tramp the last stages. She was in great fear of recapture and anxious to get far West.

So, after she was rested and provided with proper clothing, the Wanders and Beilsteins provided her with money and a ticket to Los Angeles, giving the Pullman porter a generous fee to look after her on the journey. They had advised her to take another's name, and she had chosen that of her dead chum, Olga, because of her blond hair and general Swedish appearance.

She Wanted to Marry

Her Chicago friends heard from her frequently. She wrote to them about Richard Hardy, whom she loved, and asked their advice about marrying. They advised her to wait a year, until the sensation caused by her escape from the asylum had been forgotten.

Thus matters stood when the telegram was received that Bertha was dying.

The news that "Olga Miller" was really Bertha Beilstein was easily verified at the hospital when Bertha's description was received. The nurses had noticed the great deep scar on her right temple. [illegible] Richard Hardy now admits that he knew she was Bertha [illegible]

But there are [illegible] relatives who perhaps [illegible] of her death [illegible] express doubt. They made application to a [illegible] court for $1,000 [illegible] the estate to pay the expenses of securing proof [illegible] the exhumation of the poor girl's body.

Frederick Beilstein and Edmund Wander have [illegible] Bertha [illegible] arrival in Chicago [illegible] Olga Miller [illegible] Los Angeles.

So beyond much doubt the tragic mystery is explained. The tumor that killed Bertha Beilstein, that gave her headaches when she was a little girl, that grew steadily larger, pressing harder and harder upon the brain, produced periods of insanity during which her mood was homicidal and self-destructive.

In one of these periods she killed her mother and [illegible] herself. Probably it was the [illegible] brain substance through the wound in her temple that relieved the [illegible] pressure and restored her to [illegible] during the whole period of her [illegible] her six years in the asylum, and [illegible] her wanderings, until in Los Angeles the diseased area of the brain reached a point which made speedy death inevitable.

Bertha Beilstein.

1 "Bertha's father suddenly straightened up in his chair at the supper table, then fell to the floor dead."

2. "'Mother, I am going to kill you,' said Bertha."

3. "Then she turned the weapon upon herself, pouring the four remaining bullets into her own body."

4. "Her brother Edward had been found dead on her mother's grave."

5. "She had swallowed nearly an ounce of laudanum."

6. "The doctors were able to save her, and in a few weeks she was placed on trial."

7 "She wrote frequently and her letters were answered."

8. "Six years of close confinement in a madhouse."

9 "An automobile whirled swiftly away with a passenger beside the driver."

10. "'Bertha is dying in the hospital in Los Angeles.'"

When Woman Looks Down Upon Man.

WHILE it is not unusual for woman to look down upon man intellectually, the statement that she will soon be able to do so from the physical standpoint will be somewhat of a shock to the creature called by courtesy the "lord of creation." Yet, in the words of an eminent physician, "the present century will witness striking changes in the comparative physiques of men and women."

[illegible] decades of the nineteenth century the average stature of woman showed a gain of over an inch. While it is absurd to think of an indefinite continuance of this progression, it is probable that within fifty years the six footer feminine will be a common sight, and the average masculine stature will not exceed five feet eight inches.

That the increase in woman's height has been due to her enthusiastic adoption of outdoor sports cannot be doubted, but why man's stature should dwindle instead of increasing or remaining in statu quo is not so susceptible of explanation. [illegible] Whatever the [illegible] should be [illegible] man [illegible] he is shortly to be looked down upon.

ANCESTORS, natural or acquired, are valuable possessions.

In fact, no home with any pretensions to fashion is quite complete without them.

If you haven't already laid in a stock of portraits of ancestors, together with old family silver and mahogany bearing the stamp of age, you should lose no time in doing so.

Fortunately, they're not hard to get.

But if you don't have luck in picking up portraits that look like you, you must try to look like them.

A careful study of their style of dress and a suggestion of it in your own modern gowns will work wonders. You may even have the satisfaction of hearing people say, "How very like her great great grandmother she is!"

Mrs. Arthur Iselin needs no money or art to supply either the ancestors or the resemblance.

I came across a photograph of her the other day, taken when she was a school girl, which bore quite a striking likeness to an ancestress, Sarah Livingstone Jay, the wife of the statesman, John Jay.

She was taken in a big picturesque poke hat tied with broad ribbons under her chin, an exact duplicate of her great great—something! And there was no doubt about the relationship.

But some time Eleanor Jay (as she then was) went in for the picturesque in dress.

Long before other girls wore poke-shaped hats she had discovered their becomingness and had lots of hats on that model. Her princess gowns, made with a flat plait in the back, caught my eye before many of us had adopted that one-piece frock.

Picturesque is not the word I should use, however, in describing a gown I saw her wearing most successfully this Spring. It was daring and chic, a regular love of a gown. I breathed a sigh of envy even while I admired it.

It was a study in flame color, the color of poppies, the color of Summer. And poppies, great, flaunting, overgrown poppies, were used most appropriately in its adornment.

Chiffon cloth was used in the construction of the dress, and the skirt hung so softly, in such graceful folds, that I should guess that several underskirts of chiffon were used beneath the outer one.

The skirt was shirred closely over the hips, giving fullness to the sides and leaving a plain front breadth.

The waist was collarless and had a yoke which extended into the sleeves, of creamy Maltese lace. A most charming lace with tints of old ivory all through it.

A very high belt made of folds of the chiffon cloth, swathed tightly around the figure, came up well under the arms, and was put on with no interruption of the lines of the gown and so seemed part of the waist.

And for trimming there were poppies. And still more poppies. And again poppies.

They edged the bottom of the skirt in varied sizes and irregular arrangement. They ornamented the waist, coming up over the yoke and joining the waist and skirt. They made cuffs for the sleeves, where they showed up with great effect against the creamy tone of the lace. In fact they formed the most striking and effective trimming imaginable.

They were made, I think, of chiffon. The edges of the petals were outlined in black sequins and each flower had a big black centre.

It would have been easy to spoil the effect of this gown by the tactless selection of a hat.

Mrs. Iselin again showed her sense of the fitness of things by choosing a hat of black and white, which gave just the right note of relief to the brilliance of the dress.

It was a medium sized mushroom shape, and was made of black tulle over which was shirred fine white silk point d'esprit. Its sole trimming was an enormous bow of black taffeta, wired and shaped most smartly. Brilliant hat pins held the hat in place.

Although Mrs. Chauncey Depew's costumes are always rich and she rather affects the French style which suits her gray hair and rosy cheeks so well, she's awfully conservative in the matter of colors. No flame-colored gowns for her! Rather quiet grays and dull blues and sedate black and white.

She did, however, allow herself a suggestion of pale pink in the lining and trimming of a dull steel-grey voile gown I saw her wearing not long ago.

The jacket closes slant-wise down the front and at the closing is fastened with pert little bows of shot pink and blue taffeta silk. Each bow has a cut steel buckle in the centre.

Around the neck and down the front run bands of the shot silk and the same note is repeated on the sleeves. Then there is a band of the ombre silk over which run narrow strappings of grey silk, the exact shade of the voile, a most effective touch.

Very handsome heavy lace, dyed gray, is applied around the bottom of the jacket and on the upper part of the sleeves. Flowerlike ornaments of braid, which stand out in petal form, decorate the upper part of the jacket.

The skirt is round length and has three plaits on either side of the front breadth and again three plaits over either hip. These are stitched down for some distance and pressed flat below where the stitching ends.

Around the bottom of the skirt are bands of voile which run up here and there in an oblong design.

The pink silk lining gleams through the gray voile and gives a changing, shimmering light which is rather unusual. The pink and blue ombre silk emphasizes the shot effect.

Mrs. Rogers Winthrop must be a perfect joy to her dressmakers. Her tall, willowy figure would give distinction to almost any dress, and her coloring is charming, too. Blue eyes and fair hair adapt themselves to many color schemes.

I shall always remember her wedding in Roslyn as one of the most picturesque sights. And for once "Lord Harry of the Aisles," as we laughingly call Harry Winthrop—you know he's been usher at so many, many weddings—had to play an insignificant part. He was only the bridegroom!

That Striking Note of Yellow.

The other day I saw Mrs. "Bertie" Winthrop lunching at Sherry's and looking as fresh as a June rose.

Her gown was simple and yet quite worthy of attention, for it had one or two rather novel effects. For one thing, the sleeves. You'll see in the illustration how graceful and unusual it was. The lace ruffles falling below gave just the right note of contrast.

The material of the gown was a pin-stripe voile—one of those voiles I've seen a lot of women of our set affecting lately. I told you the other day about the smart gown of pin-striped voile I saw Mrs. August Belmont wear.

This gown of Mrs. Winthrop's was blue and white, not at all a pale blue, rather a good old-fashioned navy. And the stripe being so fine it gave rather the effect of gray at a little distance. But the blue was accented by the trimming, which was all of blue taffeta silk, embroidered in white.

The waist had a yoke of lace, the same lace which came in ruffles below the sleeve. Edging the yoke was a shaped band of the white-embroidered taffeta and this extended down the outer side of the sleeve.

A wide pointed belt, also embroidered, came up in the back and gave a slightly Empire effect.

A band of taffeta about five inches wide formed the only trimming of the long, plain, elegant skirt. It was placed just above the foot and repeated the effect so often seen on fashionable gowns this year.

A note of yellow—that note of yellow which gives a cachet to many toilettes—was struck in the band of yellow velvet which circled the crown of the wide gray hat. The hat was trimmed with gray plumes and was picturesque in the extreme, and illustrated the fact that it is again permissible to wear a hat that, as the Chinaman puts it, "No matches!"

Such news my returning friends bring me from abroad! Of hats extending quite absurd distances from the back of the head, of la marquise parasol sticks, and the queerest of all, of Elizabethan ruffs!

Of course hardly the ruffs of the old days. In the present crowded state of things either the population or the ruff would have to be cut in half. And with our President the former would hardly be in favor, I suppose, so our dearly loved chiffons must suffer.

Worn by the right person I was about to say the ruffs were most becoming and picturesque. Of course only those blessed with a long, thin neck would venture to the fashion, and the rest of the costuming must be in keeping.

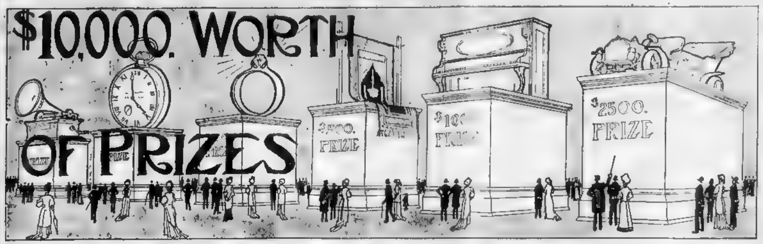
A $2,500 "Maxwell" Automobile, $1,000 Regina Piano with Piano Player, $500 Vantine Silk Rug, William Reiman Diamond Ring and Gold Watch, 50 Lyra Phonographs, 50 Waterman Silver Pens, Etc., Etc.



And 10,000 Sam Loyd Puzzle Books for the Missing Letter Puzzle.

THE new series of puzzles and the splendid list of prizes offered by this newspaper has attracted wide attention. Besides the ten thousand Sam Lloyd Puzzle books given each week as prizes for the Sunday Puzzle there will be awarded a special list of extra prizes worth more than $10,000.

To find out just what our readers would like best I requested suggestions as to what I should offer as special prizes—how I had best spend the $10,000 in buying these extra prizes.

From the many communications and suggestions received we realize that our puzzle contest is fully under way. Here is a valuable opinion from a well-known automobilist.

New York, June 11, 1907.

New York Journal Puzzle Editor.

Dear Sir—Taking a lively interest in your puzzles as I always do, I notice with pleasure your liberal programme for a great competition and call for suggestions. I think that the first prize of an automobile would be a very seasonable and acceptable one, which would meet with general favor. I have derived much pleasure and satisfaction during the past year from a "Maxwell," which we have come to call the wonderful "hill climber." As this prize is likely to fall to the lot of an amateur, it would be just the car for a beginner. Its mechanism is "so perfectly simple as to be simply perfect." One of these touring cars would be a prize indeed. Truly yours, D. J. DENSMORE.

We accept with pleasure the opinion of such a well-known expert, and have placed an order with the Maxwell-Briscoe Company, of Tarrytown, N. Y., to build a special touring car, which is offered as first prize for solving the puzzles in the puzzle books.

For the second prize a musician of national reputation says: "As a most desirable prize for the lady of the house allow me to propose one of the modern player-pianos, which can be used as an ordinary instrument, but which have a concealed mechanism which will play automatically from the music roll. I have been so thoroughly satisfied with my Regina player that I most heartily recommend it as a most acceptable prize."

Thanking our correspondent for this timely suggestion, we have ordered a specially fine Regina Player-Piano from the company at Rahway, N. J., and will offer it as a second prize well worth winning.

Here is another suggestion which is accepted with pleasure, as coming from a lady of refined tastes.

Lyric Theatre,
New York, June 17th, 1907.

Mr. Sam Loyd, Puzzle Editor, New York Sunday Journal, City:

Dear Sir—I am interested in the puzzle department of the Journal, and as you ask for suggestions for prizes to be offered in your competition I would suggest that one of those exquisite $500 silk Persian rugs that are on exhibition at Vantine's would make a most generous prize and one well worth striving for. Very truly yours, MINNIE DUPREE.

We are sure that the star of "The Road to Yesterday" has made another great hit, so we place the commission with the house of A. A. Vantine & Co., of Eighteenth street and Broadway, to make a selection from their marvellous stock of Oriental rugs and novelties which will be a credit to the firm. This we offer as the third prize in the contest. We would have made it a special ladies' prize, but Mr. William Reiman, of No. 328 Fifth avenue, the noted importer and connoisseur in diamonds and precious stones, has anticipated our wishes, and offers a splendid diamond ring worth $100 for the ladies to compete for, but then as he naively adds, "If any young man assures us that he has some young lady in view to whom he wishes to present it as an engagement ring he may compete." He also contributes a $50 watch to the enjoyment of the occasion, and will take pleasure in showing what a magnificent and reliable timekeeper he can furnish for that amount.

Time has not permitted us to examine half of the suggestions made, but having noted scores of calls for a real good fountain pen we will meet the wishes of professional men and writers who appreciate a good thing by offering at least fifty of the famous "Waterman's Ideal Pen" to such as exhibit exceptional cleverness and clearness in writing out their answers to the puzzles.

Several correspondents would entertain the whole family with a phonograph. This meets with our hearty approval, so we have placed an order with the importing firm of E. A. Denham & Co., of No. 500 Broadway, for fifty of the noted Lyra machines, which are said to reproduce as well as any of the machines sold for $30.

Many other prizes have already been added and will be mentioned next week, but suggestions and recommendations from correspondents are still in order.

As our puzzle solvers must not hope to win these valuable gifts without some little effort, we take occasion to show by the accompanying cut how Harry made his 3 1-4 and 4 1-4 bricks pile up just 12 inches high. Of course many of the puzzles are very simple, but we want our clever solvers to be prepared for some tricky puzzles like this one. You don't always have to give the exact answer—just send the BEST you can find.

Do Snakes Possess a Well-Developed Sixth Sense?

By RAYMOND L. DITMARS,
Curator, N. Y. Zoological Gardens.

"Thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life."

THUS we may read the degradation of the serpent as quoted in the Scriptures. The greater portion of the human family up to the present day looks upon the snake as the most despised of terrestrial creatures—the natural enemy of man, and fit only to be ground beneath his heel.

Recent scientific researches hint at an amazing condition. Man, as we know, has five senses—feeling, sight, hearing, taste and scent. But certain snakes appear to have a well-developed organ relating to a sixth sense. Despite man's supremacy in all animal creation, scientists among his numbers are hopelessly puzzled in determining what may be the nature of the apparent sixth sense possessed by the lowly serpent, when they realize they are investigating a sense utterly lacking in man himself.

In recent years scientific discoveries have followed one another rapidly—many of them so astounding to the reading multitude as to appear beyond all belief until followed by actual demonstrations. It is an age of surprises and we are gradually becoming accustomed to an explanation of nature's schemes. The quite independent investigations of scientists both in this country and in Europe may yet show us what may seem an utterly incongruous and amazing fact, and this to the effect that the despised serpent, cursed in the Scriptures and generally trodden under the heel of the average member of the human family, is gifted above man in possessing six senses, while humans may enumerate but five.

Puzzling indeed are many of nature's schemes delved into by our most brilliant [illegible] scientists. This possibility of a sixth sense in snakes has been made the hobby of many eminent men. Pronounced and queerly developed organs have been again and again dissected [illegible] the result of their investigations, but the actual use of the [illegible]. It might be significant and valuable if this alleged sixth sense could be discovered in a creature so despised by the human, for man is a most conceited animal, and it is well for him to realize amid his preconceived ideas of the supremacy of the human and his attempts to wipe off the earth most of the animals [illegible] himself, that nature has a hand in the welfare of others than him alone. Certain it is that scientists are confronting a decided problem as they endeavor to discover the significance of a sense which man does not possess.

It is among the deadly and most specialized of serpents that we find most apparent the strange organs pointing to the existence of a sixth sense. Between the eye and the nostril of these creatures, on each side of the head, is a deep pit lined with a tender and delicate skin, which is underlaid with innumerable microscopic nerves. These fuse into a central nerve that plunges through an opening in the maxillary bone intended solely for its reception, thence it communicates directly with the brain. The track to the brain of this large nerve is [illegible] with fully as much [illegible] among the bones as the nerves of the other major senses—sight, scent and hearing.

But the pit vipers—so called because of the mysterious organ—are not alone among snakes in intimating the existence of a sixth sense. A great number of the harmless serpents show two minute pits near the tip of each scale of the body covering, while among the great constricting serpents, the boas and pythons, we find many species with a series of deep pits along the plates or scales covering the lips. The pit vipers, however, have caused the most interest among scientists owing to the pronounced development of their unknown sensory organs and the favorable opportunity for dissection. Among these serpents are the rattlesnakes, the copperhead snake, the water moccasin and the [illegible] vipers of tropical America, the fer-de-lance and the bushmaster of America.

Quite recently the pit of these snakes has been found to be far more complex than previously imagined. It [illegible] to be a double organ, connecting with an inner chamber [illegible] is situated near the eye and [illegible] the same network of nerves as the [illegible].

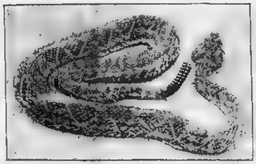
Among all serpents, the pit vipers show the most recent effects of evolution. Their original ancestors were [illegible] devoid of fangs or poison [illegible]. Various branches of [illegible] serpents [illegible]. Some [illegible] had crude fangs [illegible] developed [illegible] a wonderfully [illegible].

They are armed [illegible] in the shape of a pair of elongated [illegible] in the upper jaw which fold against the roof of the mouth when the jaws are closed. At the tip of each fang is an orifice for the ejection of a deadly [illegible] secreted and forced forward [illegible] behind the eyes. The fangs are constructed exactly like the hypodermic needle of human surgery.

Among serpents so formed [illegible] the rattlesnake, representing the [illegible] and newest type [illegible] evolution [illegible] which are fangless and consequently innocuous are serpents that have undergone [illegible] change in the passing of ages [illegible] claw.

As but the clawed portion is hidden under the skin, though the limbs are [illegible] and the [illegible] snakes used by the [illegible] shown [illegible] the presence of [illegible] pair of [illegible] hind limbs of serpents [illegible] we may go back yet further in the scale of evolution and trace the ancestry of snakes among the lizards.

[illegible] here we may remark upon the [illegible] in the Scriptures condemning the snake to grovel in the dust forever as the most degraded of creatures. Far from the standpoint of actuality, it seems, as time has gone on, evolution has been providing the snake with more elaborate structure, greater mental powers and, as it now seems probable, with an additional sensory organ to the five possessed by man.



The Diamond Rattlesnake, a Typical Pit Viper. The Great Swollen Temples Indicate the Presence of the Poison Glands

A Beautiful and Dangerous Serpent Possessing the Mysterious Pits—The Copperhead Snake.

The writer believes that it will be only from a study of living snakes that the object of the pit will become known. As a great part of the writer's life has been spent in studying serpents he has had numerous opportunities to investigate the use of the mysterious organ. As yet, however, he is able to but theorize, though he has noted certain actions on the part of pit vipers that may be significant.

Such reptiles are among the most nervous of all snakes, suffering so keenly the shock of captivity that many of them absolutely refuse all food, and after fasts of from six months to over a year, die of starvation. A few of the species may be induced to live as captives, but it is among these serpents are found certain kinds which have never been known to feed while under observation.

As an example we may take the South American bushmaster. It is the largest of the New World poisonous snakes, provided with enormous fangs and dealing a bite invariably fatal. Specimens delivered to the writer in perfect condition have always shared the same fate. They retire to the darkest corner of the cage, coil tightly and pass away [illegible] a lifeless sleep that may last as long as a year.

They drink frequently, becoming well acquainted with the position of the water dish, but the most enticing morsels of food elicit absolutely no interest. Yet their food is well known from [illegible]. When dissected [illegible] show [illegible] to contain [illegible] other rodents [illegible] apparently [illegible] be a distinct shock to their [illegible] to another cage [illegible] presented [illegible] from one nearly [illegible] to certain death.

THE GORILLA AND THE GUN

HE hath put down the mighty from their seats—Luke i., 52.

Human beings have known the gorilla for a long time as one of the strangest, most powerful and frightful of beasts. Stuffed gorillas are in almost every big city. A few have been brought to civilization alive, but they have died from homesickness, consumption and rage combined. The writer once studied a huge gorilla more than six feet tall, brought to the Paris Jardin d'Acclimation. The great monkey was caught and brought to France with his child, a shivering, reddish-haired little creature. The two were in a cage together. The big giant from the African forest shook every iron bar, pounded the floor, turned, first in a rage, and then with sad pathos, his dull, wondering eyes upon the weak white animals looking at him. Gradually he realized that the world had changed. He saw around himself slender bars that he couldn't break, he saw outside white-faced, weak-bodied creatures, beyond his reach, yet controlling him. He curled himself up in a heap on the floor, and stayed there, only occasionally reaching out one long arm to touch the baby gorilla that tried to rouse him. There he died, full of scorn for civilization and its queer power. The baby monkey died soon afterwards.

* * *

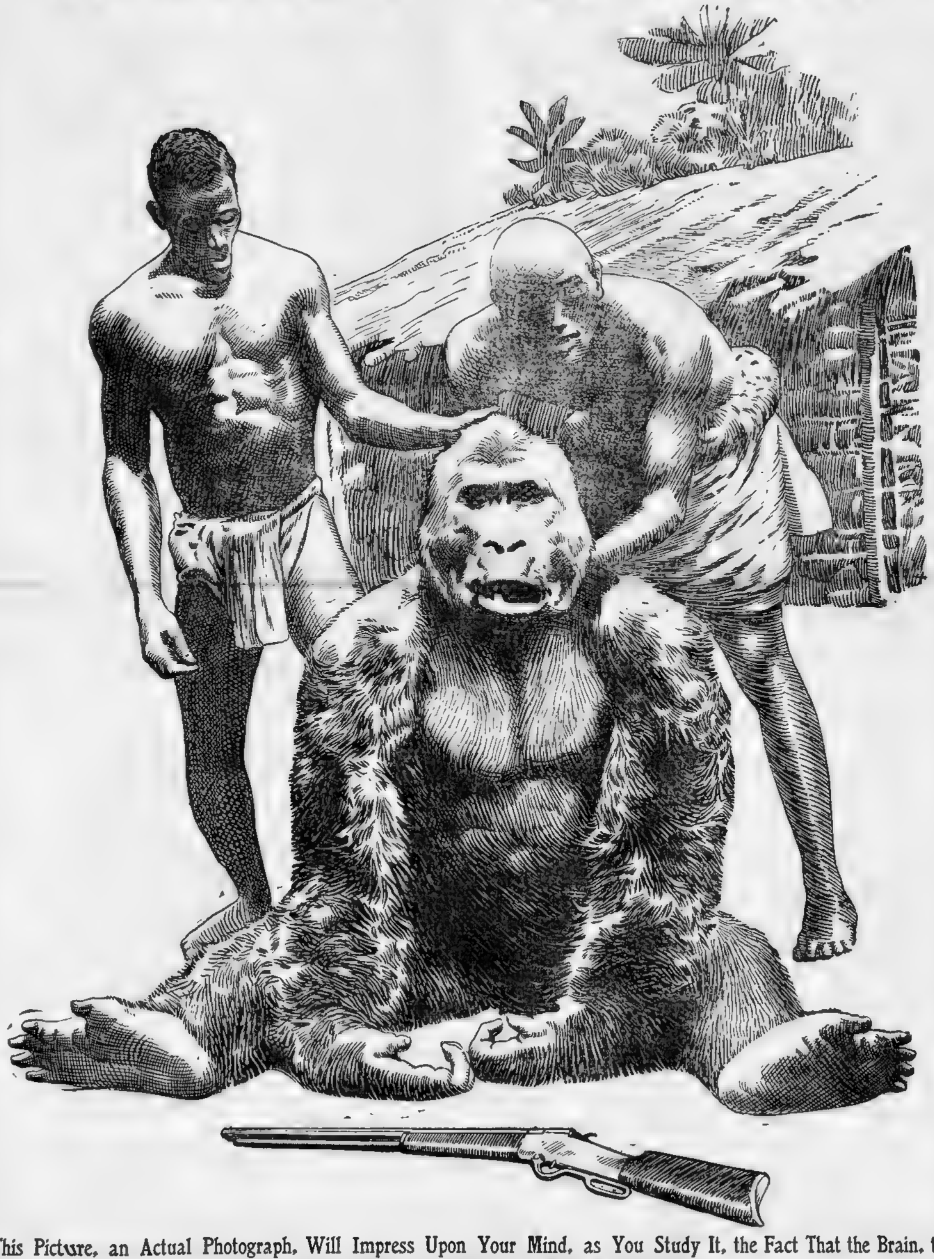
The gorilla in THIS picture, about which we ask you to think, is an entirely new kind of gorilla, one very recently discovered in South Africa, and one infinitely bigger than the sort to which natural histories accustomed us.

This huge monster, photographed after death, while two negro savages held him up, stood more than eight feet high. He belonged to a race of gorillas far more powerful than any hitherto dreamed of. His weight was nearly a thousand pounds, and with the least effort of his powerful hand he could have bent the gun barrel that sent the bullet that killed him.

A half a dozen editorials could be made out of this monstrous ancestor of man.

It would be interesting to know of the giant's fight for life, of the cunning and surprise, and finally of the killing. It would be interesting to know the thoughts that were passing through the minds of these two savages, as they held up the corpse of the giant monkey. Little they dreamed that they would ever have the honor of helping this powerful brute to pose for his death photograph.

Boys and grown men would read with the keenest delight of the life that this vast creature led, his fights with panthers and other creatures able to crawl up to his nest, his power to frighten even the most savage of the wild creatures.



This Picture, an Actual Photograph, Will Impress Upon Your Mind, as You Study It, the Fact That the Brain, the Power of Thought, Is Invincible and Must Rule the Earth

The plain truth about this giant monkey gentleman of South Africa—without the slightest elaboration by "nature fakirs"—would fill many a book and magazine with good reading.

* * *

We could interest you a little by asking you to compare yourself with this biggest of all monkeys, greatest of all our Darwinian ancestors.

Notice, for instance, the gigantic hand and the tiny thumb. Then look at your own thumb and see how much bigger it is in proportion to your hand than the thumb of the gorilla.

Your thumb reflects the growth of the BRAIN. In the gorilla's existence, the thumb is merely a HOOK, which lets him fasten his great hand around a big stick.

Whereas, with mankind, the thumb is the associate, the partner, that works with each one of the four fingers. As our brains have grown and taught us to do new things, the thumb has developed to meet the emergency.

This gorilla is removed by many hundreds of thousands of years of development from the salamander, which, according to history, is the ancestor that gave to us all, monkeys and men alike, our five fingers.

The salamander's thumb toe is about as well developed as the gorilla's. If your thumb is long, especially the upper end of it, you can flatter yourself that you have developed very far from the salamander and gorilla stage.

Then, too, you can amuse yourself by comparing your face with the gorilla's face. You can see in your higher forehead proof of the development of mind. You can tell by looking at this great monkey that it isn't a good thing to have your eyes too close together or your jaws too highly developed, unless you want to make your way by sheer brutality.

By a study of the gorilla's feet you will verify the statement of the embryologists, who tell you that the clubfoot in man is in reality A GORILLA FOOT, the man with the clubfoot having stopped in his prenatal development at the gorilla stage.

This will make you reflect on the interesting fact that before birth we go through all kinds of animal transformations, repeating each one of us, in our own embryological lives, the entire history of animal life on this earth.

* * *

We didn't reproduce this curious photograph, and put it on this editorial page, however, with the idea of talking about its thumbs, or feet, or eyes too close together.

Here is the thought that the picture suggests:

ABOUT THE MOST USEFUL THING THAT BRUTE FORCE DOES IN THE WORLD IS TO PROVE OVER AND OVER THAT IT IS POWERLESS AGAINST THE FORCE OF THE BRAIN.

Out in this African forest, the eight hundred pound monster sitting dead in this photograph was absolutely lord and master. The savages that hold up his corpse would not have dreamed of molesting him. The long, monstrous arms, the terrific chest, the great masses of muscle on the shoulders, would have enabled this giant to walk at his leisure through a whole army of human beings, crushing, scattering, breaking their bones as he passed. If the intelligence of mankind had stood still, if the brain had never developed beyond the point reached by the savages in the picture, this gorilla, and the brutality which he represents so well, would ALWAYS have ruled in Africa and everywhere else on this earth.

But there has been NO STANDING STILL. The brain has grown, its power has increased steadily, and will increase steadily.

Put this gorilla in a closed room with a hundred of the most famous prize fighters in the world and in half an hour they would all be dead.

But put him in his own native forest, and pitted against a dwarf four feet high, armed with a rifle, THE PRODUCT OF THE HUMAN THINKING BRAIN, and the gorilla has NO more chance against that dwarf

The brain's power to think has done away with the importance of brute force. The size of the muscles, the length of the arm, the brutality of the passions, can rule the world no longer.

* * *

THOUGHT RULES. One idea produces the instrument that makes the strongest man as weak as the weakest, and as vulnerable.

And what is more important, we have gone BEYOND that. The well developed brain has produced the instrument that makes physical force nothing. And that same brain, working for civilization, gradually taking away from men the idea and the love of brutal battle, is eliminating from the world slowly, but inevitably, ALL brutality, ALL fighting, ALL exercise of power save government by justice.

This powerful gorilla sits dead, supported by negroes that are above him in intellect. And those negroes in their turn are governed by others, sometimes brutally, but also above THEM in intellect.

And above all of us, even to-day, and soon to rule all of us, stands peaceful thought, power of intellect, free from brutality, working materially and mentally for humanity's emancipation from the rule of force, working for the inauguration on earth of peace and good will.

THE SUCCESSFUL MAN

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

DO you call yourself a successful man? Do you believe yourself a fairly worth while sort of individual?"

Are you thinking of yourself as a failure because you have not made millions, or invented a flying machine, or established a college or a library?"

Whatever you have or have not done, if you are a husband and a father, there are one, two or three questions you can ask yourself, and the answers will decide your place in the world as a failure or a success.

Ask yourself first, HOW HAVE I FULFILLED MY PROMISES MADE AT THE MARRIAGE ALTAR? HAVE I DONE THE BEST IN MY POWER TO MAKE MARRIAGE A SUCCESS? IF I AM NOT HAPPILY MARRIED, WHAT PART HAVE I PLAYED IN THE FAILURE?

Be your own prosecuting attorney in this trial, and do not spare the witness.

Probe down to the bottom of the testimony and get at the FACTS IN THE CASE.

Perhaps you married a pretty face, with few brains back of it.

Perhaps you have grown intellectually, and your wife has not kept step with you.

But have you done your best to develop her mind and to lead her into a larger field of thought? Has it been a constant, patient effort on your part to make her the companion you needed in your life?

Have you tried to share your intellectual pleasures with her, and to make her care for the books and people that shed light on your path?

Then about your children.

Are they a disappointment to you?

Are they disobedient, secretive and unsympathetic?

Will they do nothing you want them to do?

Have all your ambitions for them resulted in disappointment?

Then call YOURSELF, the witness for the defence, again before the bar.

You have had the opportunity to make these children what you desired them to be.

They came into the world with unformed brain cells and undeveloped tendencies.

They were plastic as wax, had you chosen to realize the fact in time.

Hour by hour, day by day, week by week, month by month, year by year, the minds of these children have been developing.

If you gave them no careful personal attention, no patient lessons in the way you would have their mentalities directed, you must not blame them that they developed along the lines of least resistance.

If you do not focus your camera, but expose it to any impression, it will reproduce whatever happens to be in range.

Just so a child's mind will grasp whatever comes its way by chance; if you do not teach it concentration, and choose its subjects for focused thought.

If you DO begin in time to direct the child's ideas and habits, you can make that child just what you wish it to be in disposition and conduct.

Inheriting irritable or violent qualities from you or its mother, yet with persistent loving sympathy and wise guidance and continual painstaking (such as Abbe Fenelon gave to the father of Louis V. of France), you can make your child a model of self-control.

Though he may be born with extravagant and indolent tendencies, you can teach him economy and industry.

I know this can be done; I have seen it illustrated under my own eyes by the gentle guardianship of a wise uncle over a nephew left to his care.

The idle dreamer, the thoughtless spendthrift, became the prudent and industrious worker, and never knew how he was transformed because he was led by the hand of LOVING WISDOM.

IT WAS NOT THROUGH SCOLDING OR PREACHING THAT THE GREAT CHANGE WAS PRODUCED, but through the quiet talks, the steady dropping of the waters of good precepts upon the rock of the mind. It was the beautiful example always before his eyes; precept turned into practice; it was companionship.

It is not enough that you have loved your children and that you have held high ambitions for them.

It is not enough that you have given them advantages.

The question is, HAVE YOU BEEN THEIR NEAREST FRIEND, THE ONE THEY FELT MOST FREE TO APPROACH? HAVE YOU STUDIED THEM AS A HORTICULTURIST STUDIES HIS PLANTS? HAVE YOU MADE THEM THE DEAREST OBJECTS OF YOUR LIFE? HAVE YOU SHOWN PATIENCE, LOVE AND UNSWERVING INDUSTRY IN YOUR AIM TO FORM THEIR VIEWS OF LIFE; AND HAVE YOU GIVEN THEM THE EXAMPLE YOU WISHED THEM TO FOLLOW?

If you have not done all of these things, then do not ask for sympathy in your disappointments over your children.

And if your children are failures, then do not class yourself with the world's successful men.

The man who is not the best friend of his son and daughter, the man whose children seek any confidants before himself, is not a successful man.

If you have kept in this close, sweet touch with your children, if they love, respect and admire you as they grow into maturity, if they are a delight to your heart and a solace to your mind, then no matter how poor your worldly station or disappointed your worldly ambitions, YOU ARE A SUCCESSFUL MAN.

You have accomplished the first great obligation of life; you have done well the duty which lay nearest.

No man is called upon to accumulate millions, to establish colleges, to invent machinery or write dramas.

If he does any one of these things well the world applauds, but only his own ambitions reprove when he fails to achieve some such success.

But when a man becomes a father he is under divine obligations to BE A GOOD FATHER, A WISE FATHER, A PATIENT AND A JUST FATHER. If he fails he has made the worst possible failure a man can make. And whatever his position may be in the world, his duty is to begin AT ONCE to try and reform his ways, and to remedy the evil he has done.

For the worst evil a man can do is to bring bad children into the world, which so needs good men and women to carry on the purpose of creation.

ARE YOU A GOOD FATHER?

UNPUBLISHED APHORISMS OF THE GREAT GOETHE

Translated by

Henry Thaler, A.B.

THE all embracing and penetrating mind of Goethe pictures itself best in the work which has just been published. This volume contains a collection of "Maxims and Reflections," edited by Bernhard Suphan, the well known expounder of Goethe. It is a high pleasure, indeed, for the lover of literature to read this little volume, "a book of the world and life in its deepest sense," as Suphan most appropriately calls it. Among the aphorisms which are contained in this volume are these which have not hitherto been printed, as their existence was not known:

"All laws are attempts to approach the intentions of the moral order in the current of the world and life."

"Whosoever goes down into his being will find himself to be only half; whether he needs a girl or a world to become an entity does not make any difference."

"Out of nature, wherever you look, there springs unlimited being."

"Modesty belongs to good and limited society. Even into large society immodesty brings always advantage, but roughness, even toughness, has its place in massmeetings, where the mob always wants to talk while one must shout down, or else be silent himself and go home."

"The wrong thing, the mistake, is always more convenient for weakness."

"It is a most terrible thing when a dull incapable person associates with an illusionist."

"The whole of life consists of willing and not accomplishing, of pushing and not willing."

"The man of genius tries with greatness of mind to be in advance of his century, the man of talent often seeks to retard it out of stubbornness."

"The prime evil: Everybody wishes to be everything that he possibly can be, while he wishes the others to be nothing, or even not to exist at all."

"They may deny the verdict, but they cannot hinder its taking effect."

"Who may say that he learns something if he is not a learning man?"

"What you do for them is not enough, what you have done is nothing, their whole being, which you have created, they take from the gods' favor, and thus you are as if you were not, had not been."

"The queerest thing in life is our confidence that other people will lead us; if we do not have this confidence we stumble and feel our way; if we do have it, we will also find ourselves very soon ill led."

"To the wise man life appears easy, when it is difficult to the fool; and often it is difficult for the wise man, when it appears easy for the fool."

"There is no situation which cannot be made nobler by acting or suffering."

"The genuine German may be recognized by variety in education and unity in character."

"I curse the every day affairs because they are absurd; only what we gain over them by possible effort may well be summed up."

"One does not love who does not consider the faults of the beloved as virtues."

"One must not fear to be outvoted, when he is opposed in his views."

"Wit deserts able men least of all when they are in the wrong."

"The wolf in sheep's clothing is less dangerous than the sheep in any skin in which it is taken to be more than an ass."

"Do not say you are going to give, but give. You never can satisfy hope."

"If God had wished man to live in truthfulness He ought to have made His institutions in some other way."

"In way of joking one might say that man consists entirely of faults, some of which are useful for society, others harmful. Of the former one says only good things, calls them virtues; of the latter one speaks always ill, calls them faults."

"Our qualities we ought to cultivate, not our peculiarities."

"There are brooks through which one learns everything and yet in the end does not understand anything of the subject."

"It was customary among the ancient Romans when they wanted to say something good to say it in Greek. Why not with French?"

"Who must exercise patience? Who plans a great deed, ascends a mountain, [illegible]"

"Everybody has sentiment, some people have ingenuity, art concepts are rare."

"It is easy to learn how to reign, hard how to govern."

"Looked at from a historical point of view, our good qualities appear in a modest light and our faults excusable."

"I always think when I see a misprinting there is something new invented."

"Somebody said: 'Why do you care so much for history? You cannot understand him, anyhow.' To that reply: 'Neither do I understand sun or moon or stars; but they are over my head, and I recognize myself in them while I see them and watch their wonderful way, and I think at the same time whether I also shall ever become of any importance.'"

"No word stands still, but by being used it always moves away from its original place, rather lower than higher, into the worse rather than into the better, into the narrower rather than into the wider, and from the changeableness of the words one may form a conclusion as to the changeableness of the concepts."

"The man who wants to outshine all the others usually but deceives himself; he does only what he can, and nourishes the conceit; that is as much and more than all the others can do."

"The Christian religion is an intentioned political revolution which after having failed became moral."

"God is All: If we are high: if we are low, God is but a supplement of our misery."

"The creature is very weak, for if it seeketh for anything it doth not find it; but God is strong for when He seeketh for the creature He has it in His hand at once."

"Belief is love for the invisible, confidence in the improbable."

"The Germans of ancient times found their only pleasure in the fact that nobody had to obey the other one."

"The Germans of modern times consider nothing else as freedom of thought and speech as when they are allowed to despise each other in public."

"The usual theatre reviews are unmerciful lists of sins, which a bad demon reproachfully presents to the poor sinner without leading him with helpful hand toward a better road."

"Kindness of heart occupies a larger space than the wide field of justice."

"A man does not show his character until he speaks of a great person or of an extraordinary thing."

"A truth repeated loses much of its beauty; a repeated error is entirely unbearable."

"A right answer is like a lovely kiss."

"No man deceives himself who had the highest expectations in his youth. But as he then found his expectation in his heart, so let him look for its fulfillment in his heart, not outside of it."

"Who passes all his life at one business, the ingratitude of which he finally recognizes, hates it without being able to rid himself of it."

"I have not found anything more unpleasant than to be in bad relations to a man with whom I would have agreed."

"Only for people who cannot produce anything does nothing exist."

"Reality in the highest usefulness will also be beautiful."

"When a thing displeases me I either let it go or make it better."

"Our opinions are but supplements of our existence. On the way one thinks one may see what one lacks. The emptiest people think most of themselves, excellent men are suspicious, the vicious are impertinent, and the good are timid. Thus everything is balanced; every one wants to be whole or at least appear so before himself."

"Why hear we so much blaming talk? They are all afraid to appear smaller, if they recognize the smallest merit."

"If youth has a fault one gets very soon over it."

"Who would have had patience with me if I myself had not had it?"

"How have the Germans carried on to keep away from themselves what I have possibly done and effected! And do they not do the same even now? If they had accepted everything and had proceeded on the same way, if they had made my work bear interest, they would have been further advanced than they are."

MIRANDY ON THE SOUVENIR COLLECTOR

By Dorothy Dix

"MA'Y JANE," said Mirandy, "was readin' me de odder night 'bout dem perfectly honest an' respectable folks whut went visitin' on de Eyetalin warships at de exposition, an' toted away wid dem ev'ything dat was movable, even to the buttons of de Duke of Abruzzy's pajamyrs, which dey routed out from behind de do' of his stateroom whar dey was hung.

"'My lan'!' 'sclaims I, 'but dem folks must have been a excussion of de chain gang.'

"'Not so,' 'spons Ma'y Jane, 'dey was members of de fust families an' Christian Endeavorers, an' mothers in Israel at home, an' dey des merely took ev'ything dey could get deir hands on for souveneers.'

"'Ma,' axes little Teddy Roosterfelt, 'whut is de differunce between takin' souveneers an' stealing?'

"'Well,' says I, 'ef you is po' an' needs a thing dat belongs to somebody else an' you takes hit, hit is stealin', but ef you is able to buy hit yo'self, an' don't want to part wid de money for hit, an' takes hit, hit is a souveneer.'

"'A souveneer,'" put in Ma'y Jane, "'is lak de mantle of charity, hit covers a multitude of thefts.'

"'Dat's so,' 'spons I, 'an' dere's mongsty few things you can't steal in dese days, ef you gits de chanst, widout any reflections on yo' character ef you'll des give out dat you is makin' a collection of somethin' or odder, or is took 'em for a remembrance of de happy occasion. Seems lak de word souveneer kinder throws a halo around stealin' so dat you don't have no occasion to be ashamed of hit.

"'Ef Brer Ben steps down de road some dark night an' gathers in a fat pullet whut is roostin' low, he has chicken for dinner de next day, but he keeps mongsty quiet 'bout whar he got his meat. He don't feel he's called to brag 'bout hit an' tell folks de particular place an' way dat he happened to pick up dat nice, fine specimen of a chicken whut belonged to anudder man. But when Mrs. Brown has company an' she sent for Sis Sairy, what is Brer Ben's wife, to wait on de table, an' Sis Sairy slipped one of Mrs. Brown's teaspoons in her pocket, she up an' show hit off to ev'ybody dat comes an' ax you to admire her new souveneer spoon.

"'An' ev'ybody say dat hit suttinly is grand, an' dat Sis Sairy is got a collection dat sho'ly does do her proud, becaze ev'y spoon is different an' got a different name on hit.

"'An' when you goes to Sis Alviry's house, she's got a collection of souveneer towels dat's got de name of half de hotels in de country on 'em, becaze Sis Alviry is been a ladies' maid to a rich woman an' dey is traveled, an' when Sis Alviry seed her Madam collectin' souveneer towels, she des stuck one in her own trunk, an' she sho'ly does brag mos' outrageous 'bout 'em, an' is dat puffed up wid pride dat hit is hard for a woman dat ain't got no towels, 'ceptin' dem whut she paid for, to stand her wid Christian charity.'

"'Hump,' says I, 'hit looks lak to me dat folkses dat is got de money to ride on de palace kyars, an' put up at de bes' hotels, sho'ly would be above liftin' de towels an' de wash rags, but Sis Alviry 'spons dat I don't know whut I is talkin' 'bout, an' dat when you took along wid you a couple of towels dat had "Bullman" embroidered on 'em a inch high, dat you warn't stealin', you was des takin' dem for a souveneer.'

"'Well,' says I, 'I done noticed befo' dis dat hit made folks kinder light fingered to travel, for I se done observed dat de marks on de pepper boxes an' salt shakers of dem of my friends whut has been off on excursions don't nowise correspond wid deir name, an' dey 'splains de difference to me by sayin' dat peppers an' salts is souveneers of de place whar dey is visited. An' when I axes 'em to promulgate to me de whyness of hit, dey say dat hit's all right to slip a plate or wine glass, or anything dat won't bulge too much in de front of yo' shirt waist, as long as you is jest takin' hit for a remembrance.

"'Cose I ain't 'cusin' my friend whut's got dem mongrel sets of dishes an' spoons of stealin,' but when I sees dat one of 'em is got de souveneer habit, when she comes to see me I des passes quietly around an' turns de key in de bureau drawer an' counts de spoons as soon as her back is turned. 'Taint dat I suspects 'em of not bein' honest, but I des thinks hit's de safest. Dat's all.

"Naw'm, I ain't got no opinion of dat souveneer business, becaze I done had sperunce of hit. You know I is a fo'handed woman, dat has got towels, an' napkins, an' spoons of my own dat I se done took in washin' an' paid for, an' dere ain't narry a souveneer in de whole lot, nor any remembrance of anybody's else's washline or dishwater. Well, once I up an' give a party, an' ef I does say hit myself, de table des fairly groaned under de things dat I had on hit, an' de way de sisters passed me de compliments on how well I was fixed sho'ly did puff me up.

"'What lovely napkins you is got, Sis Mirandy,' says Sis Alviry, 'an' is you work all dese fine monnygrams yo'self?'

"'Dat I is,' 'spons I, 'fur I is a master hand at de needle.'

"'What sweet spoons!' 'sclaims Sis Amaryllis. 'I sho'ly does love dis heah colonial patterns. Hit's so chaste.'

"'Well, you may use de word, Sis Amaryllis,' says I, 'for I chased 'bout fo' million shuts through de washtub to git de money to buy dem.'

"'I disremembers dat I ever seed any chany mo' to my taste dan dese yaller plates wid de blue roses on 'em,' remarks Sis Becky. An' I 'spons dat I wo' my ole dress all las' Winter to git de money to buy dem identical dishes.

"Oh, I sho'ly was swell lak a frog wid pride an' vain glory as I set at de head of my table an' listened to dem women brag on how well I was fixed up, but ef you believe me when dey was gone, an' I went to wash up de dishes, dar warn't nothin' to wash up. Dey had just tooken 'em all away onbeknownest to me as a little momento of de entertainment.

"'Cose I couldn't set de perlice on 'em for dey was all my friends, an' in good an' regular standin' in de church, but hit took me 'bout fo' years to git back my stuff. Ev'y now an' den Sis Alviry would give an entertainment, when she'd have out her souveneer collection of napkins, an' I'd sort of cast my eye casual around de table till I come to one dat had my name on hit, an' when I went home hit went home wid me. Den Sis Amaryllis would ax me over to a chicken supper, an' I'd cabbage a spoon dat had a familious look an' dat matched de balnce of my set, an' when I was a callin' at Sis Becky's an' recognized a plate dat I had seed befo' in my own house, I'd sort of jostle de things around on de what-not so' she wouldn' miss hit an' I'd collect dat plate to add to my souveneers of dem whut had been lost an' was found again.

"Naw, I don't hold wid de collection of souveneers, specially when folks collect 'em from me, an' when any of dese heah folks dat calls deirselfs souveneer collectors comes around you better keep yo' hand on yo' pocketbook an' yo' furniture nailed down. You hear me."

"BLESSED BE NOTHING AT ALL"

By Carolyn Prescott

SHE was a big blonde, and her rich broadcloth and lace opera coat hung from her shoulders in luxurious carelessness as she entered the box at the theatre and took her seat. As the elegant garment fell from her there was disclosed a fortune in diamonds and pearls. They gleamed in her ears and in her hair, and at her throat, and a river of gems fell from her neck almost to her knees. Her fingers were covered with diamonds and other precious stones, in fact she outshone every other woman in the audience or all of them put together for that matter.

From the conversation of two girls who sat in front of me I learned that before she became the wife of the rich man who had bought all these precious stones for her during the past three years, this woman worked in a store. That's no disgrace, to be sure; I merely mention it because I heard the girls talking to each other about her gown and handsome jewels.

"Oh, if I only had just one of these diamonds," one of the girls said, "how perfectly happy it would make me! Just one of the smallest. She would never miss it, and it would make me happy all the rest of my natural lifetime. I'm just dying for a diamond ring."

"Me, too," answered her companion. "I would be perfectly satisfied if I had just one teeny, weeny diamond in a ring, and here she has bushels of them."

But Carolyn, sitting behind them, listening to their conversation, made up her mind that she was perfectly satisfied without the diamond for many reasons.

After hearing of the troubles and worries that beset the women who own diamonds and real laces and other expensive things, I make up my mind that I was satisfied to have my money come to me every Monday afternoon and to have it all gone by Saturday night, without investing any of it in diamonds.

For I have known many women who have lain awake nights worrying about the safety of their jewels and precious laces and valuable furs, and thank goodness I am not one of these. Can you imagine anything more silly than for a woman to own so much valuable "truck" that its possession keeps her awake nights? If one is kept awake nights with an ache or a pain, a visit to the doctor soon remedies the matter. But the woman whose diamonds and laces keep her awake nights keeps on accumulating them, constantly adding something more to her load of trouble.

In a neighboring city I heard not long since of the danger into which the ownership of handsome diamonds brought a society woman. She was returning from the grand opera alone in her carriage when, in one of the loneliest and most shaded spots of the avenue, her coachman and footman held her up and at the point of a revolver forced her to strip her jewels from her fingers and neck and hand them over to them. Then they made their escape, leaving her to make her way home with horses and carriage as best she could.

Wonder if she was the happiest woman in the world," as she sat on the box of her carriage at 1 o'clock in the morning, driving a pair of lively horses through the deserted avenue, after her encounter with the thieves? And yet she had plenty of diamonds and other jewels.

Oh, little girls who think diamonds would make you perfectly happy, think of something else. The woman who owns pecks of them is no happier than when she stood behind the counter and sold lace and embroidery. She looks prettier, perhaps, in her handsome gowns, but every diamond and every handsome gown is bought with a price, and this price is paid in worry and apprehension. I would rather be you, with your cheap little hats and dresses, than the woman who lies awake nights worrying for fear her diamonds will be stolen or her priceless sables and sealskins be eaten by the moths. The possession of riches does not always bring with it the happiness that one imagines. Learn to say with the philosopher, "Blessed be nothing."

BEFORE the FACE of LIFE...

An Allegory. By Maxim Gorky.

Rendered into English by Stracey Chambers.

(With Special Permission of the Author.)

TWO Beings stood before the stern visage of Life; both were discontented with her; and to Life's question, "What is it ye would of me?" one with dull voice replied, "'Tis the cruelty of thy eternal contradictions that makes hot my ire; in vain my tortured spirit seeks to fathom the object thereof, and, lashed by doubts, my soul trembles before thee. My own consciousness may tell me that man is the Crown of all Creation—and yet * * *"

"What wilt thou of me—say?" asked Life, in passionless tones.

"Happiness! * * * and to give me that two contradictory forces must be reconciled—my 'Will' with thy 'thou Must.'"

"Begin, then, to adjust my 'Will' to what my 'Must' compels thee!" Life sternly made reply.

"That will I not, for I will not be thy Bondsman," cried the man. "Master of my own Life would I be, not bend my back beneath the leaden load of thy stern laws."

Then spake the other man, he who stood nearer Life: "Use simpler language, friend," but the first Speaker heeded not these words and cried again:

"'Tis Freedom I would have! Would live in Harmony with mine own Desires. I loathe thy 'Must,' that forces me to be a Brother or a Slave unto my fellow-men; I would be free to exercise my will as pleaseth me, a Brother, or a Slave, not like some senseless Stone, placed here or there by Society, as she listeth, to build her a prison-house. I am a Human Being; I am the Soul and Ego of the World Infinite; therefore must I be free!"

"Stay!" Life made answer, with a bitter smile. "Thou speakest glibly; what thou wouldst further say is known to me long since. Thou wouldst free? Then * * * be so! Strive with me! Force thou me down, raising thyself to mastery over me, so shall I be thy slave! I feel no passions, as thou knowest well, but yield with ready grace before my Conquerors. Yet must I conquered be! Art thou able to wrest thy Freedom from me? Art sure of thine own strength to carry off the Victory o'er me? Hast thou Belief in Self?"

And he addressed with wav'ring courage sighed. "'Twas thou didst force on me this duel with myself, sharpening my consciousness like to the tempered steel of a knife's blade, which, plunged deep down into my Weaknesses, divides me 'gainst myself."

Then spake once more the other, urgently: "Address thyself to Life in sterner tones, not whining and complaining."

But he who first had spoken cried aloud: "Oh, Life! Let me but breathe more freely 'neath thy load. Grant me this boon but once!" And again Life, smiling bitterly, made answer, saying.

"What are thy words? Commands or weak entreaties?"

"I do entreat thee!" breathed the man, like a faint echo.

"So thou dost fawn on me like a habitual beggar? Then hark to what I say, thou miserable one! Life gives no Alms! And hearken yet again! No true man doth entreat, but, closing with me, wrests my riches from me by sheer force of Will! But thou! Thou art a Slave—of thy Desires! Not Free, for only he is free who hath the power to abnegate each wish, so as to fight with me. Dost understand me? Go!"

And, having grasped her meaning, the man lay down, even as a dog, before Life's Feet, gathering in servile humbleness the crumbs that fell from her Table.

And now the lustreless eyes of Life pierced to the Soul of that other man, but this one's face was set and determined.

"And what dost thou entreat?"

"Naught! I demand!"

"And what?"

"Justice! All else will I wrest from thee hereafter—but for the present, Justice! Long have I waited—waited patiently—living downtrodden, without Rest, without Light! Now 'tis enough! 'tis time to live! Justice is my demand!"

And Life—passionless as before—made answer:

"Wrest thou it then from me!"

FATHER FEEHAN BISHOP-ELECT OF FALL RIVER

A HOME STUDY OF THE MAN AND THE PRIEST—"A SERVANT OF 'PLAIN DUTY'"

On June 18, cable dispatches from Rome announced that the Congregation of the Propaganda had selected the Rev. Daniel F. Feehan, P. R., of St. Bernard's Church, Fitchburg, Mass., to succeed the late Bishop Stang of the Fall River diocese. On June 19 it was announced that His Holiness, Pope Pius X., had confirmed the appointment. A representative of the Boston Sunday American, sent to Fitchburg to secure an interview and to write a pen-picture (indubitably of wide-spread interest and especially interesting to the readers in New England) was accorded an audience by the Reverend Bishop-Elect.

By Maurice F. Murphy.

"I am a servant of plain duty."

THIS has been the watchword through the life of the Rev. Daniel F. Feehan, permanent rector of St. Bernard's parish in Fitchburg, Mass.

This is the watchword that has made him a leader of the Roman Catholic church and a power among men. It has developed and perfected in him attributes which have spread his fame far beyond the confines of the little parish of St. Bernard's—farther even than the bounds of the great New England archdiocese.

The story of his labors in the upbuilding of his parish, in the education of children and in the cause of temperance has travelled across ocean and continent to the See at Rome, where the Congregation of the Propaganda, the college of ecclesiastical philosophers, who, next to the Pope, hold highest office in the church, after much deliberating, settled upon Father Feehan as the one man best fitted to succeed the late Bishop Stang as chief prelate of the Fall River diocese.

"I Love This Church, This Hill and My Dear People."

And His Holiness, Pope Pius X., whose acquaintance with the individual achievements of his vast multitude of priests is wonderful, concurred with the cardinals in their choice.

Probably no one was greater surprised at the news of the appointment than Father Feehan himself. A representative of the Boston Sunday American ascended Water Street Hill, in Fitchburg, to the modest but picturesque little rectory in the shadow of St. Bernard's Church, and conveyed to him written congratulations of Boston clergy and community.

"I hardly know how to receive this news," he said. "There is a chance that it may not be so."

With the word "chance" there came over his face a smile that was evidence he hoped it would prove not so.

"But it is so, Father," the reporter ventured. "Cable dispatches announce that the news of your appointment is confirmed at the Vatican."

Father Feehan is not a tall man, probably five feet seven inches, but he has a muscular physique that trembled all over at this announcement. Tears came to his eyes, and it was with a faltering voice that he finally said:

"I would have preferred to continue my plain duty as parish priest. A promotion in the church is a command, a call to duty, and 'plain duty' I have always looked upon as my guiding star. If this news is true, I am ready to go, but I love this church and this hill and the people on it and around it."

Just then six or seven children passed the window of his study. "Watch them," he said, as they strolled through the rectory yard. "They are visiting the Blessed Sacrament during their noon hour from school. You don't see that everywhere, and it isn't because they're my children that I say so. That's the proper place for piety to begin—in the child."

Weeps as Little Ones Hail Him as They Troop to Church.

Two little girls and a boy glanced up at the window with a

"Good morning, Father Feehan."

It was then afternoon, but the wording of the greeting didn't matter to either Father Feehan or the children.

"Bon jour, Pere," said the others of the group—for many of the parishioners are French.

"You're not goin' away, are you, Father?" asked one little tot not more than five years old. "My dad told us the papers said you were, but you're not, are you?"

The priest's eyes filled again and it was with difficulty that he was able to reply:

"I don't know, dear; I hope not. Now go into church, like good children, and don't forget to say a short prayer for me."

"You bet——" began one, but another clapped a hand over her mouth to shut off the innocent disrespect, and said: "We always say a prayer for you, Father Feehan, and it isn't a short one, either."

"Do you wonder that I hate to leave here?" he said as he closed the study window. "Those children tell me every one of their secrets and their parents do, too. It's the greatest satisfaction in the world to know that they don't feel any barriers between themselves and their priest. I want to know my people from their very birth. I want to baptize them myself. I want them to come to me with their little troubles of school and play.

Guides Old and Young Who Unbosom Secret Burdens

"Don't you know there are so many little cares in children's lives that they hesitate to speak to their parents about. The parents, no doubt, are worn out at night after a hard day's work—in many families of this parish both fathers and mothers are bread-winners—and they haven't the time to listen to a lengthy tale of 'how brother Johnnie pulled my hair,' or that 'sister Katie took a penny from Mrs. Johnson for going an errand for her an' you told her not to take money from anybody.' Those are foolish little troubles that blow away quickly, you may say, but I want them to come to me with them all.

"I have a school here, too, that I try to have all my children attend. Religious training is so important in the education of children that they can't have too much of it. It is not necessary either to lower the general school standard or to lessen the time of other studies. A few minutes a day will suffice.

"After they have finished their school days and have gone out into the world of wage-earners I want them still to come to me. Difficulties at work, affairs of the heart, anything at all, they come and tell of it. Later when they have married and are heads of families I have their confidences. If the baby is sick, if a half-grown boy shows a disposition to remain from school—but we haven't, of course, any boys like that in St. Bernard's parish," he said smiling. "They're all bright, ambitious, embryo Presidents of the United States."

"But, Father," the visitor said, "won't you tell me something of your plans for the Fall River diocese? Everyone in New England is interested in your appointment."

Never Dreamed of Honor of Prelate of Fall River.

"Now my dear young friend," Father Feehan continued, "I don't know a thing, I'm sorry to say, about the Fall River diocese. I was trying a little while ago to learn something about it from the Diocesan Directory," and he indicated a large book lying open on his desk. "The Fall River bishopric is something that I never dreamed of. Anyway, I have not yet received any official notice and officially I may take no notice of any reports or rumors."

Just then a door leading from the piazza opened and a big, finely-built man with a heavy brown mustache entered. He appeared as if he might be the gardener.

"I beg your pardon, Father," he faltered, as he uplifted his hat; "I didn't know you were here. I was just looking for Katie. I think she has some work for me."

"That's all right, Michael," Father Feehan replied. "Come right in. You can do something for me. This young man is from one of the Boston Sunday newspapers and he wants to learn something more about the St. Bernard's parish and its people. You just take him over to Mr. Smith's book store and see if they haven't got some data there that will help him. You know—do the showing around for him. I've got to do a lot of work this afternoon."

"I will, Father," replied Michael.

Love Was King for 20 Years in the Parish of S. Bernard.

"I have some clippings here from the Boston newspapers that concern you, Father," the reporter said.

"All right, thank you, leave them if you want to, but it's too bad they say so much about me. I would have much prefered the life of a parish priest."

The reporter went with the genial Michael to Smith's book store and then wandered about the city of Fitchburg. Everywhere it was the same story of love and veneration of people for their pastor and sorrow at his leaving, even to receive greater honors.

"I try to be a good Catholic," said one old fellow at work in the car shop on Water street, "and I know that it's my duty to attend church services, but I'm afraid that lots of times I went just because I knew that Father Feehan would be there and would talk to us. It's too bad he's got to go away."

St. Bernard's is the happiest little parish imaginable. Anyone who visits it cannot fail to carry away memories of the little community where all love their pastor next to their faith, memories also of the pastor who has ruled them for nearly twenty years with love and kindness of his wonderfully kind face, surmounted with hair that is snow-white though its owner is hardly past the half-century mark, and of the words that are conveyed in voice and attitude.

"I am a servant of plain duty."

20,000 Communicants Now Where There Were 2,000.

Father Feehan became rector of St. Bernard's in 1888 when the parish consisted of less than 2,000 persons. Everyone was a fellow and a brother of the others and all, as one, looked to their pastor with a reverence that was akin to brotherhood. Within the same limits to-day there are five prosperous parishes containing more than 20,000 communicants and among them all there still lives the same feeling of fellowship, brotherhood and love and the same brotherly and fatherly respect and veneration for the beloved pastor. For nearly a score of years he has brought this spirit to the paramount and it can readily be understood why new honors for such a pastor can mingle grief with the joy of the parishioners from whom these new honors separate him. There is a watchword that may console the sorrowing parishioners. It is the watchword of their beloved pastor:

"I am a servant of plain duty."

A Little Sermon on the Happiness of Being Poor

By Rev. A. E. George.

THERE was once a woman who had an alabaster box of ointment, and she poured this valuable gift over the head of the Master, as he sat at meat in a humble home in the village of Bethany.

No sooner was this act witnessed than it gave vent to an objection: "To what purpose is this waste?"

The men who saw it regarded this act as simply throwing away material that had a commercial value.

We are all apt to think of gifts in dollars and cents. We see, or want to see, money in everything that we do.

We are money-mad, and, being so, we are apt to color our vision with it.

It is no new infirmity, but it gets too much attention nowadays and drives away the sweetness and beauty of life.

Life can be made happy without much money or without emphasizing this element.

Take the little that you are getting and take enjoyment in its use. It may be hard discipline to do this and may demand courage and patience in the trial.

But it is worth trying. The man who has a little can more readily get the secret of enjoying life than the man who has much and wants more.

It is this everlasting desire to get more and make a better showing that is oppressing so many minds in these days and driving them to self-destruction.

Wealth does not bring continued happiness. It is no real pleasure to think of ways and means to spend a large income.

It is the man of small means who can be really happy, if he will safeguard his condition with simple tastes and desires.

He can look beyond money. He can make his pleasures apart from his material possessions. He can think away from the chains of riches and enter a field of pleasure, which he can sow with his own seeds of experience drawn from his personal battles and struggles.

How to be happy though poor is no dream of the imagination. It is this class who are really happy in life to-day, when they take their little and make it go so far and then think they have done their best with its use.

This woman gave up ointment worth fifty dollars, the annual wage of one man in those days. She made herself happy in her act, even though she made herself poor by the sacrifice.

This is the true secret of living—making yourself happy—and it can be done upon the basis of having a little, more than upon the necessity of having much.

To learn this will let sunshine and peace enter the humblest home, and keep it radiant with the joys that the mere possession of money does not give and cannot give.

STOCK COMPANIES OFFER NOVELTIES

Revivals of Unusually Popular Plays Are Features of the Week's Theatricals.

SILLY SEASON NOW ON

THE stock companies are offering the only novelties in the theatrical world of Boston this week. A farce, a musical comedy, a melodrama and a grand opera comprise the new attractions, while two musical shows and "The Music Master" continue, the latter for its final week. All the variety houses now open put on strong bills. The "Silly Season" is now well under way with eleven theatres open. Here are the offerings of the week.

Keith's Theatre

Stella Mayhew, who scored one of the triumphs of the season in "Comin' Thro' the Rye," will return to Boston this week as the headliner of a capital bill, with a group of songs of the kind she sings so well. Much local interest is attached to the engagement of Wilmer Walter, who, supported by Annette Marshall and William Vaughan, is to present a dramatic sketch entitled "Duplicity," written especially for him by Ernest L. Waitt, dramatic editor of Boston's leading daily, Mr. Walter furnishing the plot. Marie Wainwright and company appear in a jolly farce called "Our Baby," and other big acts include Willie Eckstein, phenomenal young pianist; Ellis-Nowlan groupe, acrobatic comedy skit; Arthur Buckner, sensational stunts in cycle riding; Elsie Faye, dancer, assisted by Bissett and Muller; Vauni and Clotti, Boston vocalists, in an operatic sketch, and Keno and Rosa in a dance novelty. Baker and Gourlay, acrobatic funmakers; Wynn and Lewis, the "Rah, Rah Boys;" Morton and Diamond, in a comedy sketch; Nagel and Adams, acrobatic humorists, and new pictures by the kinetograph round out the show.

Park Theatre

Lillian Lawrence and her company at the Park Theatre are giving their patrons great variety. Thus far they have produced one French comedy, one English comedy and three American plays, one comedy, one melodrama and the other military drama. Next week, however, sees one of the most ambitious efforts of a dramatic stock company. Here's "A Milk White Flag," put on with the same thoroughness that characterized its presentation here originally.

Globe Theatre

Great interest is manifested in the comedy which Mr. Craig is to give at the Globe Theatre this week. It is a three-act piece called "The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown," and it is one of the funniest plays ever given. It has not been seen here in many years. Mr. Craig will play the dual role of Captain Courtney and Miss Brown, which will be the first time he ever has donned woman's attire. There also will be good parts for Mr. MacLarnie, Mr. Evarts, Miss Sanders, Mr. Yost, Miss Colcord, Mr. Seeley and Kate Ryan, who returns to the company for a special engagement, playing a rollicking Irish character.

Castle Square Theatre

That grand opera is extraordinarily popular in Boston was evident at the Castle Square during the recent week when "Faust" was produced. Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," one of the most famous of Italian operas, is to be given during the coming week at that house. Italian opera means melody from start to finish, and "Lucia di Lammermoor" is one of the most melodious operas ever written. In the title role of Lucia Miss Lois Ewell and Miss Helen Darling will appear alternately. Miss Darling comes to the Castle Square with the assurance of good judges that her voice is exactly adapted to the lyric and dramatic demands of the role.

Majestic Theatre

Warfield is now nearing the final performance of "The Music Master" at the Majestic Theatre, which event will also be the passing of this great character creation from the American stage. To-morrow night will occur the 1000th performance of the play, and Mr. Belasco will commemorate it by the distribution of handsome souvenirs in the form of bronze busts of Warfield as the music master. The seven performances which are yet to be given will positively mark the last appearance of Mr. Warfield in "The Music Master" anywhere.

Tremont Theatre

Richard Carle's "Hurdy Gurdy Girl," nicely equipped for all seasons alike, will enter upon its fourth week to-morrow. The Tremont's Summer attraction is made strong by a well selected cast, evident thought having been given to individual fitness. The author, with some little daring, has made the story interesting by an occasional sentimental touch, which gives the comedy all the sharper contrast.

Colonial Theatre

"Fifty Miles from Boston," the new Cohan play at the Colonial, has settled down for a prosperous engagement. George M. Cohan has long possessed a peculiarly well developed knack of fingering the public pulse and diagnosing exactly the likings of the theatregoing public, and he has once more struck the key note in his very lively, amusing and original production. The new piece is a mixture of fun and sentiment, pathos and just a touch of tragedy, with bits of jingly music and pretty chorus numbers, an occasional song and some of the best acting seen on a Boston stage in a long time. A souvenir performance is slated for one evening this week, when a handsome [illegible] booklet, with photographic reproductions of scenes in the play and individual portraits of all the principals, will be presented to every lady attending.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Wife in Name Only," a melodrama which will touch the hearts of all, will be the production at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, opening on Monday. The play is full of emotional interest. Rifka Harrison will be seen as Kate Brandon and with Arthur Behrens in the character of John Raymond, it is expected that true types will be portrayed. Others will be Edwin Trevor, Edwin Denison, Isabel Sherman, Laura Houston, Frank Wright, Ralph Brown, Tommy Shearer and Irene Martin.

Howard Athenaeum

Fun and jollity—that's the combination at the Old Howard. A big variety bill is offered with the Todd Judge family of acrobats as one of the features. Another attraction is Burke and McEvoy in "Fun in a Gymnasium." The Female Minstrels have another feast of fun, and to complete the programme are O'Rourke and Marie, singing and dancing novelty; Wil and Minnie La Belle, hoop rollers; Arthur and Lucile [illegible], in a skit; Emerson and Van Horn in "The First Rehearsal"; Ed Eustis, equilibrist; Fred Buckner, coon shouter; "The Laundry Girl," a one-act farce written by Henry Powell, with the Howard's own comedians in the cast and the Howardscope.

Palace Theatre

"Charlie" Waldron has prepared an excellent bill for this week at the Palace Theatre. The stock company will appear in two funny skits, entitled "Way Up Yeast," by John J. Black, and a rollicking comedy burlesque called "On Watch," by T. F. Thomas. The vaudeville bill will include Bohannan and Corey, illustrated songs; Stirk and Loudan, acrobatic bicyclists; P. Eugene, imitator; La Barre brothers, comedy acrobats; the Valdings, on double trapeze; Dan Malumby, Australian comic singer; Anger and Hanley, singers and dancers; Mardo, clown juggler; Louise Brandon, female baritone, and the Palacescope.

Austin & Stone's Museum

The largest, plumpest feminine arm in the world will be one of the sights this week at Austin & Stone's Museum. The owner, a stunning massive maiden who tips the beam at scarcely less than 500 pounds, is one of a group of ladies direct from Fatland, aggregating nearly two tons in weight, who have come to Boston to hold their yearly midsummer convention. Among other attractions are Myrack's Tyrolean Troupe, Topp's Harmoneans, and Tilli's Marionettes.

In the theatre are the "Minstrel Maids," Ted and Clara Steele, Jordan and Brennan, Malone, the chanteuse, and the Marten Comedy Company in "The Little Court-room Round the Corner."

Hub Theatre

For a hot weather attraction next week's bill at the Hub Theatre, where Miles Brothers moving pictures are the feature, can't be beaten. The Hub has established a reputation of being from ten to fifteen degrees cooler than out of doors. Comedy pictures full of good laughs, emotional pleasures in abundance and a variety of sensational pictures have been scheduled and will make up the hour show. A new program of illustrated ballads and march songs sung by an able corps of singers, headed by Miss May White, and a special selection of instrumental and incidental numbers by the ladies' orchestra completes the bill, changed again on Thursday.

Orpheum Season Ends

Final performance of the season will be given at Percy Williams's Orpheum with to-night's concert. Owing to the necessity of repairs and alterations it is necessary to close for a brief interval. At the conclusion of the repairs the Orpheum will reopen, presenting the highest grade of vaudeville ever seen in Boston. Among the entertainers at to-night's concert are Bellclair Brothers, Viola DeCosta and company in "In the Latin Quarter"; Mosher, Houghton and Mosher, Chadwick Trio, Welch, Francis and company, Almont and Dumont, Ziska and King, and Sue Smith.

Sothern-Marlowe Engagement

Monday evening, July 1, and for a single week following, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will appear at the Majestic Theatre. These six performances will afford the last opportunities for seeing the distinguished actors together, for next season, under the direction of Lee Shubert, each will head a separate company. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings the offering will be "Romeo and Juliet," on Thursday and Friday evenings "Hamlet," and on Saturday matinee and night "Twelfth Night." There is but one matinee.

Lyceum Theatre Closes

This popular burlesque theatre closed Saturday evening, terminating a successful season of forty-four weeks. The house will receive the annual renovation during the summer weeks, opening again in August. The standard road attractions will play here next season as usual.

"Glittering Gloria" Coming

The Park Theatre, during the week of July 1, will house another new play. Lillian Lawrence and her company will put on that week "Glittering Gloria," the comedy that caught on so nicely in New York and added laurels to Adele Ritchie's fame as a comedienne. This will make the fourth new play that the Lillian Lawrence company has given to Boston.

"In Bohemia"

"In Bohemia" is the attractive title of a new one-act play which is to have its first hearing upon any stage at the Orpheum Theatre this evening. It is the work of a Boston author, and tells the story of four American art students who hold bachelor rooms in the Latin Quarter of Paris and are having a hard struggle for an existence. Its author is Henry D. Coolidge, clerk of the Massachusetts Senate. It is staged by George De Carleton, and produced under the management of O. R. Henkel, press representative of "The Time, the Place and the Girl."

FLASHLIGHTS FROM STAGELAND

By The Observer

I AM going to say a word or two about personality as a factor in stage success. More and more is it borne in upon me what an immense factor it is, and especially is it impressed by half a dozen visits to Keith's Theatre, where personality ranks A plus in the list of essentials for a successful act. It is most remarkable in the case of Nat M. Wills, a man who can take the most ordinary matter and make it fairly sparkle by the way in which he says it. Then there is Eva Tanguay, who cannot sing, who cannot act, who cannot dance, but she is worth many dollars to a vaudeville house because of her personality. Dainty Winona Winter does a simple, clean act, that in the hands of almost anyone else would be a failure, but her sweet personality makes of it a success. Lawrance D'Orsay became a headliner by reason of it, for the sketch in which he appeared had no elements of popularity in it. It is interesting to study these successful actors and actresses, for it teaches one a great deal about human nature. It makes one realize that, after all, it is the man or the woman behind the song or the monologue or the sketch that makes it successful, rather than any intrinsic value in the vehicle.

> I want to play plain women, just such women as go to Macy's to buy shirt waists.—Rose Stahl.

ONE can hardly realize that this is the last week in which David Warfield will ever be seen in his great character of "The Music Master," but it is. He is even now studying another, and some say a greater role in which to appear at the opening of Belasco's new Stuyvesant Theatre in New York next September. Warfield is a fine example to the young man of to-day. He never abandoned hope, even when he felt the sting of failure in early life. It was his unlimited confidence in his own powers that impelled him to try again and again until he won [illegible] some one

IT is to be practically a new Boston Theatre that the playgoers of Boston will see on September 2, when it opens again under the management of Lindsay Morison, with as strong a stock company as it is possible to secure in America. Carpenters, masons, painters, decorators have been at work night and day; the interior of the playhouse has been transformed; every modern convenience, for players and patrons, has been installed, and a surprise is in store for the opening night. Mr. Morison is very reticent regarding the makeup of his new stock company, but it is known that Eva Grau, daughter of Robert Grau, who is now appearing in vaudeville with Harry Davenport and Phyllis Rankin, is to be one of its members.

THE HERITAGE OF HATE

CHAPTER LI.

"I HAVE sent them away. Come with me now among the trees," Jack Heath said, going back to the woman who stood waiting for him in the shadow of the angle formed by the jutting wall of the western wing of the great house.

His voice was steady now—steadier than it had been for days—and his step had become firm again and free. The shock he had received had done him good. He had listened to the footsteps of Horrocks and the others retreating in the direction of the drive; he had taken care also to assure himself that Adele and the two stable boys who had accompanied them had gone back by the way they had come, and then he had returned to the courtyard with long, quick strides. In the clear moonlight it was evident that his face had lost the dull flush [illegible] that had been upon it, and had become instead startlingly pale.

"Come," he repeated in a low voice. "We shall be able to talk more safely there than here. Come!"

"And he believes it! He believes it still!" she cried. She stretched out her left hand suddenly and pressed its open palm hard against the trunk of the giant oak under whose shadow they stood. "Oh, Father in heaven!" she panted below her breath, "must this, the worst part of my martyrdom, endure forever and forever?"

Jack pressed his bloodless face closer to hers in the moonlight. His glance plunged into the haunted depths of her sad, dark-brown eyes.

"It wasn't true, was it?" he asked desperately. "For Heaven's sake tell me that it was not true!"

"True!" A sudden fire leaped into her eyes, to be quenched by the glistening shadow of a sorrowful bitterness. She clenched him with a force that sent a sharp pain shooting through him. "Do you, too, doubt me still? Have I not already told you that I am innocent, that my hands are as clean of blood as the hands and the soul of a little child—such a little child as you were when they took me from you? Can you not—you who should have the insight of love—read in my face even here and now that I have done no murder?"

"Thank God!" He bowed his head against her breast, and the dry sobs that had been swelling in the throat found way at last, partly choking his utterance. "The blow of it—of hearing the dreadful story—was terrible. I was on the wrong track already, more than any one knew or suspected, and I hoped, I prayed that I might redeem myself by the help of a love that was filling my life with light. But my father shut me out from hope. He told me that the evil was in my blood, that it was my accursed heritage. He sent me out from his presence the wretchedest creature living. Since then I have gone about like a beaten hound—hopeless, reckless, quivering with degradation. I have tried to forget the horror in drink; but the brandy seemed only to make it blacker and more hideous. Yet I went on drinking. I thought it was no good to try to fight against one's heritage. And all the while it was not true! It was not true!"

"No!" the unhappy woman confronting him answered steadily, yet with a throb of fierce indignation in her voice. "It was not true. It was all a tissue of lies, cowardly lies, from beginning to end. You have no heritage of evil, my son, you have only a heritage of hate—of wrong." The full, steady voice quivered as I paused, and then continued: "Think for a moment what my life has been! Eighteen years ago I was a happy woman. I had done no wrong, or even consciously thought an evil thought. I was happy in my love for your father, and for you and Pauline. Then came the horror of your uncle's death. The crime was committed down there." She pointed through the moon-barred darkness toward the part of the Heath grounds which was nearest to the drive.

"And because I chanced to be passing near there at the moment of its perpetration, suspicion fastened upon me, and grew little by little into a whole fabric of rotten proofs, so-called proofs, based on circumstances which were misinterpreted. Your father"—her voice faltered—"will have told you that I was accused, tried, convicted and sentenced to death. And all the while the real perpetrator of the crime kept silent. I was within an ace of death upon the gallows, yet still he kept silent. Then I was reprieved. He must have rejoiced then, since it rid his conscience of an additional burden. Or perhaps he trembled in his shoes lest some day I might break free and demand justice. I could tell."

"Who was he?" demanded Jack, in a voice at which she started, so changed was it.

"Wait a little," she said, lifting her hand. "There is more for me to tell you. Your father must have told you that my sentence was commuted; that, instead of death, a death in life—worse, worse a thousandfold—was meted out to me. I was glad, at first. I did not know what agonies awaited me, what unutterable humiliations were to fill every dragging minute of the long years that lay before me.

"I only felt that I was saved for those I loved; saved to have my guiltlessness proved in a few months' time at longest, saved for a reunion with you and Pauline and—and your father. But the awful days passed and no freedom came to me. Every day I sank deeper, until I felt that I was down in a seething pit of blackness and criminality and terror. The only thing that kept me from madness was the expectation of letters. But none came. Just one letter would have satisfied me for months; just one to tell me that all was well with you and Pauline, my two babies, but never a line came.

"Your father had listened to the seeming proofs of my guilt. He was one of those who believe that the law cannot err. And he had closed his heart to me. May God forgive him for it! I have forgiven him these many years past, yes, even from the first hour—because, in spite of all that has chanced between us, he is my husband, and I love him, and we two are one still in the sight of heaven.

"The bitterest drop in my cup was the news of the granting of the divorce," went on Sister Rachel. "When the news came—when I awoke from the stupor of despair in which I had been numbed, I understood then what had been done to me."

She pushed back with a trembling hand the wind-blown locks of her hair.

"I understood then that I had been cast out forever from my home, from my place by my husband's side, from his heart and from the hearts of my children. I knew that no helping hand would be stretched down to help me up again from the pit into which I had been cast, but that I had been abandoned to sink down deeper, a disowned creature, a widowed wife, a mother who had living children and yet was childless. And in my wretchedness I was stricken with illness. I lay for weeks—yes, and months—upon the brink of death. But I was not destined to die then. I had more to suffer still. What, my boy, are those tears I see in your eyes? God bless you for them! You were very little then, and could not help me. But you can help me now."

"Tell me how," Jack panted. There was a fierce eagerness in his low tone. His hands were hard clenched and the glow of moonlight showed his features to be rigid as though carved in marble.

"Wait!" The mother lifted her hand again. "That shall come presently. I want to tell you first how it is that I am here. It is years since that decree of divorce [illegible] and death came so near to me, and from then until last year, when I got my parole, no word of the outside world penetrated to me in my darkness. Through all those fearful years you and your father and Pauline were as dead to me as if I had never been your nearest and dearest. But you lived in my heart, morning, noon and night I hungered and thirsted for you. I used to wonder what you and Pauline were like, now that you had grown. In my memory I could only see you in baby frocks." Her voice faltered. "The news that a stepmother had been given to you reached me accidentally through Mr. Jolly——"

Jack started. "Justice Jolly?" he interrupted.

OUTDOOR PLEASURES IN GREAT VARIETY

Land and Water Offer Attractions for Summer That Cannot be Forgotten.

EXCURSIONS ARE POPULAR

Open Air Summer Attractions

Wonderland

Wonderland, that great ocean-side park at Revere Beach, has proven its grip upon the recreation-seeking public by its many thousands of visitors the past week. The great board walk parades at 2 and 7 o'clock, with their four bands, ten clowns, representatives of the different forces and various concessions and the entire fire department are in themselves a big entertainment. In the free circus this week appear the Josselin Trio in a triple trapeze act, the Holman Brothers in a comedy acrobatic triple bar act, Sandy Chapman, who sings with the Salem Cadet Band and the Wonderland harlequins. New comers in the vaudeville this week are Bert Letter, handcuff wizard, who asserts his power to perform all of the tricks which have made Houdini famous, Eugene L. Fielding, the man-fish, who eats and sleeps in the water of the big tank in Diver Wallace's wonderful "Under the Sea" exhibition, and several high class vocalists and dancers.

Norumbega Park

Beautiful Norumbega Park, in Auburndale on the Charles, with its winding walks and its shady trees, has proven a veritable Mecca for those who sought to escape from the hot weather. Not only is the park cool, but the ride to the park over the lines of the Newton & Boston Street Railway, along the wide and picturesque boulevards, is also an attraction. And the covered open-air theatre at the Park, that, too, is cool and inviting. This week as a special feature the famous Onlaw Trio has been secured. For two years past this remarkable team has been the sensation of the European music halls. They are novelty wire performers. A climax to their act is when Miss Onlaw rides a bicycle on a slender thread of steel, the ends of which are held in the mouths of two men.

King Philip Fishing Trips

Hot weather has increased the number of passengers who desire to escape the heat of the city and take advantage of the delightful ocean sail afforded on the commodious steamer, King Philip, under the command of Captain Edward W. Dixon. The boat leaves the south side of Commercial wharf every day at 10 o'clock for the fishing grounds, which are reached after the passenger has had an opportunity to see all the various points of interest on the trip down the harbor.

Off for Nova Scotia

Beginning to-day, daily service of the steamers of the Dominion Atlantic Railway line from Boston is in effect, steamers leaving Long Wharf, foot of State street, every day, except Saturday, at 2 p. m. Nova Scotia and the Maritime Provinces are yearly becoming more and more favorite pleasure resorts for people from New England. The climate is delightfully pleasant and invigorating and persons contemplating a trip abroad should send for beautifully printed "Vacation Days in Nova Scotia" and "Summer Homes in Nova Scotia," which will be mailed free on receipt of four cents in stamps on application to J. F. Masters, New England superintendent, Long Wharf, Boston, or free copies can be obtained by applying personally at city office, No. 228 Washington street.

Picnics at Provincetown

No more delightful place for a picnic is to be found than the old town of Provincetown, which is reached by daily trips by steamer "Cape Cod." In three minutes after landing excursionists may be at the top of Town Hill, where the great Pilgrim Monument is to stand, and there are delightful shady nooks for little picnic parties. The boat will wait long enough for luncheon and a look about the town.

Boats for Bass Point

The former Nantasket liners, General Lincoln and Governor Andrew, have been carrying large numbers of passengers on their daily trips this week to Bass Point and Nahant. This shore resort is growing in popularity with the people of Boston, due largely to the splendid boat service now offered. Nahant is one of the most picturesque shore resorts in New England, with many places of interest, such as Senator Lodge's house, Governor Guild's house, and other dwellings of famous men.

Beautiful Trolley Trips

Warm weather has sent people for relief to the trolleys, whose season, though late in opening up, is now making up for lost time. More and more people are each year appreciating the restful, healthful joys of trolleying. This is especially true since it has been made so easy for them through the establishment of a free trolley information bureau in conjunction with the work of the passenger department of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railway Companies at No. 300 Washington street, where all sorts of information and literature may be secured, including an especially fine colored map of eastern Massachusetts, southern New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

STAGE NOTES.

One of the features at Keith's next week will be May Tully and company in "Stop, Look and Listen," a sketch that is among the pronounced successes of the season. It is from the pen of Matthew White, Jr.

STAGE GOSSIP TOLD IN BRIEF

The Duke D'Abruzzi and his party were visitors at Keith's Theatre last Wednesday evening.

* * *

There promises to be any number of reunions of the large Brown family at the Globe Theatre this week. In Boston and its suburbs there are nearly 10,000 persons answering to the name of Brown, and judging by the [illegible] at the box office of the theatre a large part of them are anxious to witness "The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown," to be given there this week.

* * *

The third grand opera of the Castle Square season will be Verdi's deathless "Il Trovatore" during the week of July 8. The first double bill of the Summer will be Gilbert and Sullivan's mirthful "Pinafore" and Leoncavallo's tragic "I Pagliacci," forming an interesting and startling contrast.

* * *

Boston Museum enthusiasts have double cause for interest in the cast of "Fifty Miles from Boston" at the Colonial. Fred Williams, who plays one of the leading characters in the new piece, was the son of Fred Williams, for so long a time the stage manager there and later in the same capacity at the Lyceum Theatre in New York. James H. Bradbury made his debut at the Museum as Horatio James, a nom de theatre which he afterward replaced by his own name.

* * *

Sothern and Marlowe have not done "Twelfth Night" in Boston for two years, hence there will undoubtedly be a large demand for seats for the two performances to be given of this play during the week these stars will appear at the Majestic.

Leave well enough alone—be satisfied with what's what and all that. They look all right in the dream book and do for a political pointer, but for the show business may not in a thousand years. FOUR QUEENS OF BEAUTY, WEALTH AND FASHION WILL WED THIS WEEK

Society, Tired After Gay Festivities, Is Eager for the Woods and the Sea.

By a Society Woman.

AFTER a perfect whirlwind of gayety during the past week, which included the festivities attending Harvard class day, the final meet of the Country Club races and the wining and dining of a prince and a duke, members of smart society in the Hub are left weary and eager for the woods and the sea.

Many of them who are now taking final leave of the town will enjoy a brief respite in the seclusion of country homes before plunging into the varied pleasures at the fashionable resorts.

Weddings during the coming week will make practically the last of social demands, and as they are all out of town affairs, the city will be deserted as far as society is concerned.

A Peerless Quartet of June Brides.

The last week in June will be graced by a peerless quartette of brides, each in her own right a queen of aristocracy, wealth and fashion.

Two of the weddings are of international import—that on Monday of Mary King Sherwin of Jamaica Plain to Philip Lee-Warner of England, and that on Saturday of Cornelia Thayer to the young Danish nobleman, Count von Moltke.

On Tuesday, at Moraine Farm, the beautiful North Beverly estate of her mother, Anna Tucker Phillips will become the bride of Raynal Bolling, and on Saturday Katherine Gardner plights her troth to the Rev. Francis Buckner Boyer.

Monday's bride, Miss Sherwin, is the second daughter of General and Mrs. Thomas Sherwin and a sister of Mrs. William Goodwin of Dedham. She has spent much of her time abroad, where her beauty and distinguished appearance made no end of a sensation. She was especially talked about when she was first introduced to London society. Hers is the regal, full-blown type of beauty, as she is tall and dark with glorious eyes of sea-deep blue. She is of a charming disposition, and ever since her debut has been surrounded by a coterie of admirers.

Ceremony Performed Abroad To-morrow.

Mr. Warner, who is the head of a famous publishing house in London, is the eldest son of Sir William Lee Warner of England, who has been a member of the Council of India since 1902.

The wedding was to have taken place in America, but at the eleventh hour the groom found it impossible to get away, and it was necessary either to postpone the wedding until Autumn or to celebrate it abroad. So on the 6th of June the bride-elect, accompanied by her father, mother and younger sister, Anne, sailed for England. The ceremony will be quietly performed at noon to-morrow at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, London. The bride's only attendant will be her sister.

After returning from a short honeymoon trip, Mr. Warner will take his bride to his beautiful place, Eaton Tower, Caterham Valley, Surrey, where they will make their all-the-year-round home.

Bride Was Presented at St. James Court.

North Beverly will be en fete Tuesday for the wedding in the pretty little church there of Miss Phillips and Mr. Bolling.

Miss Phillips, who is a daughter of Mrs. John C. Phillips of Berkeley street and Wenham, has only recently returned from a tour of the world, on which she was accompanied by her mother and her sister, Martha. They spent much of their time in Pekin, China, where the second son of the house, William Phillips, Harvard '00, is second secretary of the United States Legation. He was formerly private secretary to Ambassador Choate at the Court of St. James, and at the conclusion of Mr. Choate's service in London was appointed to the secretaryship in Pekin. During Mr. Phillips's stay in London his mother and two sisters, Anna and Martha, leased a house there to be near him, and at that time both girls were presented at court.

Mr. Bolling, who is a Kentuckian by birth, is a Harvard '00 man—a classmate of the bride's brother.

The Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham has been selected to tie the nuptial knot, the ceremony taking place at 3:30 p. m.

Brother Comes from China to Attend.

The church will be beautifully decorated with birch and beech, white Easter lilies and white peonies.

The bride will wear a handsome imported creation of white liberty satin, a tulle veil, and will carry a shower bouquet of valley lilies. Her only attendant will be her sister Martha, quite the beauty of the family, who will wear a gown of light yellow chiffon with hat en suite, and carry yellow roses.

John C. Phillips will give his sister in marriage, and William Phillips, who came over from Pekin especially for the occasion, will be the groom's best man.

The list of ushers will include George Wendell Phillips, another brother; Malcolm Donald, Frederick Swift, E. Wells Farley and John F. Perkins, most of them classmates.

An al fresco reception will follow the ceremony at Moraine Farm, the extensive and beautiful country estate of the bride's mother.

After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Bolling will reside in New York.

American Beauty Captivates Count.

Most important of international weddings which has occurred in Boston for several years will be that on Saturday of Miss Thayer and the young Count von Moltke.

Miss Thayer is the oldest of the three daughters of Nathaniel Thayer, whose first wife was a Barroll. The only married daughter is Mrs. William Patten. Miss Sally Thayer, the youngest, whose brunette beauty is in striking contrast to the decidedly blonde coloring of her sisters, was one of the most sought after girls at Newport the last two seasons and much admired for her good looks, vivacity and admirable style.

Miss Thayer is especially interested in philanthropies involving the interests of children, and is devoted to the little convalescents at the Children's Hospital, of which her grandfather, Nathaniel Thayer, was one of the founders, and which she visits daily when in town.

The pretty romance which culminates Saturday started over a year ago, when Miss Thayer was travelling with her parents through Europe. She first met the Count there, who ever since has been most constant in his attentions. They are a handsome pair, the young Dane, with his fine military bearing, good looks and the rich coloring which characterizes his race, and his bride-elect, whose inherited Baltimore beauty causes a sensation wherever she goes.

The ceremony will take place at the Unitarian Church in Lancaster, and afterwards an al fresco reception will be held at the fine country estate of the bride's father, nearby.

Miss Thayer will wear an imported gown of white liberty and a lace veil—a family heirloom. Her only attendants will be her sister, Sally, and her cousin, Susan Thayer, E. V. R. Thayer's second daughter.

Mourning Causes Very Quiet Wedding.

Miss Gardner has chosen the same day for her wedding to the Rev. Mr. Boyer, curate of the Church of the Advent.

Miss Gardner, who is a favorite niece of Boston's well-known Mrs. "Jack," and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Gardner of Beacon street, was presented to society several years ago at a large ball given for her at the Somerset by her parents. She received her education abroad, and has been more or less in Europe since her debut. She is quiet and unassuming in her manner and of a studious disposition.

At the time her engagement was announced she was pursuing a course of study at the Institute of Technology. Her family connections are large and important.

The wedding will be very quiet, on account of the family being in mourning. It will take place at Southboro, where the Gardners have a magnificent Summer place. The bride will be attended by Helen Sears, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, as maid of honor.

MRS. POTTER PALMER ENGAGED TO BARON?

NEWPORT, June 22.—Society is discussing the reported engagement of Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago to Aubrey Fitzclarence, Earl of Munster and Baron Tewkesbury, of London.

No more persistent climber ever invaded Newport society than Mrs. Potter Palmer, who came to Newport a few years ago, almost unheard of, and jumped right into the lime-light by managing the wedding festivities of her niece, Julia Dent Grant, to Count Cantacuzene. Then she came for a year or two more to make sure of her foothold, and entertained every foreigner within reach of the season. After this she proceeded to London and played for an entre to the royalty and nobility set, where she is presumed to have reached the very goal of her ambition.

COMING BACK FROM THE HONEYMOON

A NEW AND EXCLUSIVE PHOTOGRAPH OF MRS WILLIAM B. WOOD (NEE EMILY N. LOCKWOOD)

THE exclusive Milton colony of "newly weds" is waiting anxiously for the return this week of that popular young couple, Mr. and Mrs. William Wood (Emily N. Lockwood), whose wedding was an event of early June and who have been passing their honeymoon at Mt. Kineo, Me. Mrs. Wood is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes Lockwood, of Beacon street and Lexington. She is considered one of the handsomest girls of her set, being tall and dark, with a most vivacious expression and lively manner.

She has won much fame on the golf links, and was among the society girls who went to England with several of her club associates a few years ago to compete in the international golf match.

One of her sisters is Mrs. D. Crosby Greene, Jr., of Beacon street, and another sister is the wife of Richard Gleason Fower, a millionaire member of the Somerset Club. It was at their Summer home in Lexington that Mrs. Wood was married.

Mr. Wood comes of a fine old family, formerly of Brookline, but now of Bay State road. He is a Harvard, '02, man, a member of several of the best known clubs and is extremely popular.

Mrs. Edward Sawyer (Leslie Toby), Helen Fay, Frances Griscom and Alice Griscom were the friends Mrs. Wood chose as her attendants at her wedding, and a handsome quartette they made in their white radium chiffon gowns and white plume-laden hats. The bride's presents to the attendants were amethyst pins surrounded with pearls.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood will occupy a handsome cottage on Canton avenue, and are to give a house-warming to their young married friends soon after their return.

What Society is Doing ◆ Some Remarkable Photographs

FOUR OF BOSTON'S FAIREST BRIDES

Former Vincent Club President Now [redacted]

TYPICAL June weather made the past week an ideal one for brides and if the old saying "Happy will be the bride the sun shines on," be true, at least four of Boston's fairest daughters are destined to happiness. The initial wedding of the week to interest the ultra fashionables was that on Tuesday of the clever Vincent Club girl, Mary Hoague, to Charles Minot Sheafe, Jr., of New York. The ceremony took place at Trinity Church at 3.30 in the afternoon, and was followed by a reception at the Hoague residence on Mt. Vernon street.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of the church, in a bower of pink hydrangeas, pink carnations, asparagus vines and palms, artistically grouped about the chancel rail and altar and tufting the pews occupied by the guests. The graceful brunette bride was given in marriage by her brother, Theodore Hoague, with whom she has made her home since the deaths of her parents. She wore a gown of white liberty satin trimmed with old point applique and a lace veil edged with old point of the same design as that used on the gown. The bridal bouquet was a shower of white sweet peas.

Miss Ruth Sheafe, the groom's sister who came on from Seattle, Washington, for the occasion, was maid of honor, and was most attractive in white net over white silk and a white hat adorned with white plumes and pink roses. Her bouquet was of pink sweet peas. The bride's two cousins, Miss Mary Cunningham and Miss Mary Copley Amory, the latter one of last Winter's prettiest buds, were the other attendants and were gowned alike in pink chiffon with silk trimmings, and pink hats trimmed with pink plumes and pink ribbon.

William Greenough, a Harvard classmate of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Morton Shaw of New Bedford, Clement B. Wood of Philadelphia, Langdon S. Marvin, Francis H. Kinnicutt, Arthur Du Bois and Stanley Cunningham.

After an extended tour Mr. and Mrs. Sheafe will reside in New York.

Quite the largest and most important of mid June weddings was that on Wednesday of Miss Hannah Stevenson, former president of the Vincent Club, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson of Beacon street and Readville, to Samuel Huntington Wolcott, Harvard, '02, son of Mrs. Roger Wolcott and the late Governor Wolcott.

The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the country home of the bride's parents, and was followed by an al fresco reception on the extensive and beautiful grounds of the estate. Only members of the two families and the more intimate friends attended the ceremony, but the reception was attended by all the friends of both families.

The bride's gown was of white liberty satin, trimmed with old family lace, and a lace veil fastened to the coiffure with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of the same flower, especially grown for the occasion. Miss Cornelia Wolcott, the groom's sister, was the bride's only attendant, and was handsomer than ever in her dress of white filet lace, trimmed with salmon pink ribbons, and her white hat, trimmed with pink plumes. Her bouquet was of gardenias.

Prescott Wolcott, a brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Thomas G. Stevenson and Robert H. Stevenson, brothers of the bride, and Roger and Oliver Wolcott, brothers of the groom. Mrs. Stevenson, mother of the bride, in gray marquisette over silk, and Mrs. Wolcott, mother of the groom, in white lace trimmed with black lace motifs, a black toque with white roses and black plumes, assisted the young couple in receiving.

After an extended honeymoon abroad Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott will make their all-the-year-round home in Milton.

In the First Parish Church, Brookline, at noon on Wednesday, Miss Elizabeth Sweetser, daughter of Mrs. Frank E. Sweetser, became the bride of Kenneth Moller, Harvard, '06, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Moller of Jamaica Plain. The Rev. William H. Lyon officiated, and the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Frank E. Sweetser of New York. She wore white satin trimmed with point lace and a tulle veil fastened with orange blossoms.

Miss Susan Sweetser was her sister's maid of honor, and wore point d'esprit over pink silk, a Neapolitan hat trimmed with pink plumes and carried pink sweet peas. Miss Naomi Muffer of Philadelphia, Sally Bliss of Brookline, Mary Cunningham of Cohasset, who on the day previous served in the same capacity at Miss Hoague's wedding, Fanny Howe of Brookline and Isabell Clark of Boston were the bridesmaids. Their gowns were of white point d'esprit over white silk, and they wore white hats trimmed with pink plumes. Their bouquets were of pink sweet peas.

Irving C. Moller was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Jack Sweetser, H. R. Putnam of California, George Cunningham of Colorado, Robert Jordan, John Muffer of Philadelphia and William G. Perry.

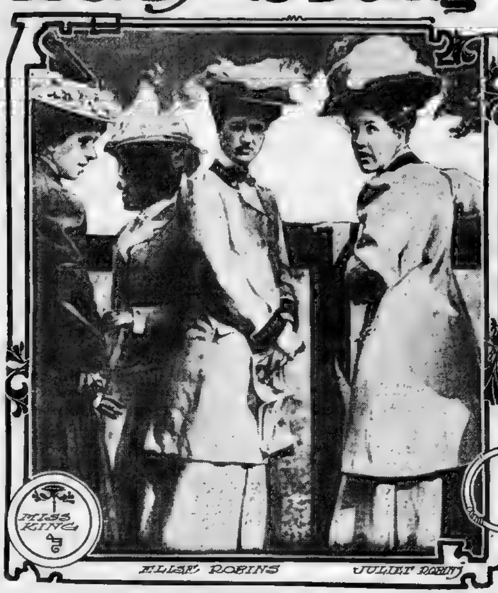
The week's—and, in fact, the season's—most beautiful bride was Miss Laura Wilson, the recognized belle of the Vincent Club, who on Saturday at noon in Trinity Church, was married to Ogelsby Paul of Philadelphia, a nephew of the late Mrs. William Waldorf Astor.

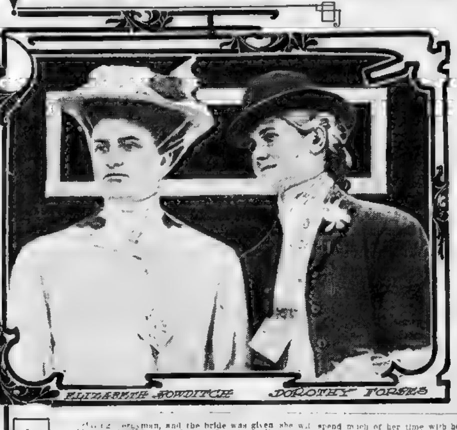
The Rev. Henry S. Nash was the officiating clergyman, and the bride was given in marriage by her father, Dr. Cecil P. Wilson.

The bride's gown was of white satin and her veil of tulle. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. James Purdon, herself a bride of last year. Mrs. Purdon was in white chiffon cloth, and wore a vastly becoming white hat. Robert Hare Davis was the groom's best man and the ushers included John Kent Kane, Frank W. Paul, Jr., and Joseph Oglesby, all of Philadelphia; Richard Horace Bland of Baltimore, H. de W. Fuller and Arthur Shurtleff, both of Boston.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents, No. 3 Exeter street, followed the ceremony. After an extended wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Paul will reside in Villa Nova, Pennsylvania.



ELISE ROBINS JULIET ROBINS



ELIZABETH BOWDITCH DOROTHY FORBES

If there is a finer, more attractive or [redacted] who make up the younger contingent of smart society in Boston, the Duke of Abruzzi gallantly declares he has yet to meet them.

[redacted] where the duke was noted "reaping the [redacted] girls who were putting up enthusiastic wagers on their favorite horses.

This group, which attracted also the attention of the camera man, included Dorothy Forbes, one of Boston's daring horsewomen and the most invulnerable of its heiresses, as several foreigners have learned. Miss Forbes was caught in her characteristic pose—that of strict attention to the issue at hand and easy indifference to the admiring glances she never fails to attract with her splendid bearing and her hair of rapidly whitening hair, which add so much to her distinction and the singular charm of her youthful face.

Her close friend and companion, Elizabeth Bowditch, who is at present with her parents, the Ernest W. Bowditches, at their Eastover estate in Milton, near the J. Murray Forbeses, and who, unconsciously, attracted at the races, as she does elsewhere, what some girls consider more than her share of attention, was looking exceedingly smart in a military make of white linen suit.

The pretty Robins sisters, Elise and Juliet, who were so much admired as ushers at the Vincent Club show this Spring and who are now with their parents at their fine country estate, together with clever Miss King and one other, whose demure manner was pleasant to behold and whose identity is left to the guesses of her friends, made an interesting quartet, which for pure girlishness—even to a few delightful and surreptitious giggles—was enough to distract dukes or any other who had the privilege of beholding so charming a group.

By Ernest I. Jackson.

A NOVELTY produced for the first time this season, which takes visitors to Paragon Park by storm, is the Human Roulette Wheel.

It was invented, or discovered, or originated by a New York man and was first planted in Coney Island, where Summer crowds went wild over it. Manager Dodge had it installed at Paragon Park, and when the wheel is going every other show on the grounds is in danger of losing customers.

The Biggest Roulette Wheel

You know roulette. Invented in Paris and in great favor at Monte Carlo, it is also indulged in in America. The Paragon Park roulette is the biggest of all roulette wheels, but it is not a money game. But it is a game proposition all right—the most uproarious fun game yet introduced!

A roulette is a wheel with a lot of numbers, painted red and black or red and green, with an "0" and a "00," with a spinning marble which flies off the disk into a color compartment, rigged so that you can bet on color, sections, numbers, columns, and all the rest, and lose your money at the rate of 5½ per cent. for each turn of the wheel, leaving you practically broke on the average in about sixty turns, if you covered every number each time.

The Human Roulette Wheel at Paragon Park costs you only the small price of admission and does not break you at all, though the on-lookers of the kaleidoscopic scootings and shootings of the rapidly whirling disk imagine necks are going to be broken. A little later they recognize the safety of this lightning whirl and try it themselves.

Battle with Centrifugal Force

The disk is big enough to accommodate half a hundred people. The outer edge of the bowl is painted in sections of black and red with two green spaces representing "0" and "00."

You pay your money, step into the circle, find a soft spot on the charmed circular platform and, taking a graceful position, sing out, with a dozen or two other passengers, "Let 'er go."

Then she "goes." Presently you "go" and everybody "goes." It's a nice, restful sensation to begin with, but you soon discover that something is pulling you outward. That's centrifugal force. There are no ropes on your feet and nothing is greased, but you are sliding. It's the same force that makes mud fly off a wagon wheel.

Out you go. Out go the others. You all yip and shriek and reach for something. Perhaps it is the other fellow's foot. You catch it, but it does no good. In an instant you see the outer edge of the bowl coming in after you like a red and black striped racehorse.

"Ooch" and "zip" and "ooch" and more of them, and there you are in singles, doubles and clusters, on your back, on your side, on your necks. Some of you have struck the red and some have struck the green. You do not take your pick. You don't get the chance. The element of chance does that. And how the crowd around the circle does laugh and encourage you to do it again.

If you are a sport, you tackle it over and over.

Presently you discover a fundamental principle that will beat the game. Just get in the absolute centre of the disk, keep your centre of gravity over this point and you've got to stick. But you forget your friends. One of them grabs you by the instep and you wind up with him against a "00" entwined into a double-cross-toe-lock that requires some thought to unwind. And such hilarity!

Red and green, take your choice! Be a dead game sport and play the only good square game of roulette ever known!

I went down to look it over this week. I saw it. It's there, and it works. If you don't win, then you don't like that kind of fun.

By Artist Moynahan.

I went down to Paragon Park the other day to see "The Human Roulette Wheel." Never having seen a human roulette wheel before, I had some misgivings as to just what would happen to the chaps who would dare to try it. After having seen a trial spin, and having noted minutely the perfect abandon with which the engineer turned her loose, and also the velocity the wheel attained, I decided that the friend I had brought with me would be just the man to give me the inside information I desired.

With very little persuasion he got on. First man on took the centre. Around him grouped a bunch of boys and men. Twenty-five were on the wheel when the engineer opened the switch. It looked easy at first. Everybody had a smile. Then, as the wheel gained in speed, the smiles came off, and in their stead was the desperate grimace of the man hanging onto nothing. The outer rim of the wheel was soon cleared of its clinging beings. They were slid off at all angles and in heaps dropping into soft cushions. The three nearest the centre stuck.

The speed of the wheel kept increasing. Soon the biggest fellow began to slide, then, as if shot from a catapult, he made one grand swoop for the cushions. Only two left. Then one of the two began to weaken. In an inkling he was disentangling himself from out of the cushions. The engineer turned her loose.

My friend still stuck. Then his arms began to go back, his legs started forward. He worked desperately to save himself. Soon he slid a few inches form the centre, turned turtle, righted himself, but it was all off. He took a most beautiful sweep, clutched desperately at the wind, flopped over a couple of times sideways, somersaulted, then straightened out, sliding into the cushions at the rate of about fifty miles an hour, none the worse for the little journey.

It certainly is funny from the time the barker yells "All ready" until the last survivor brings up in the pads. It only takes a minute or so, and then a new batch is loaded on.

The Human Roulette Wheel is the real thing.

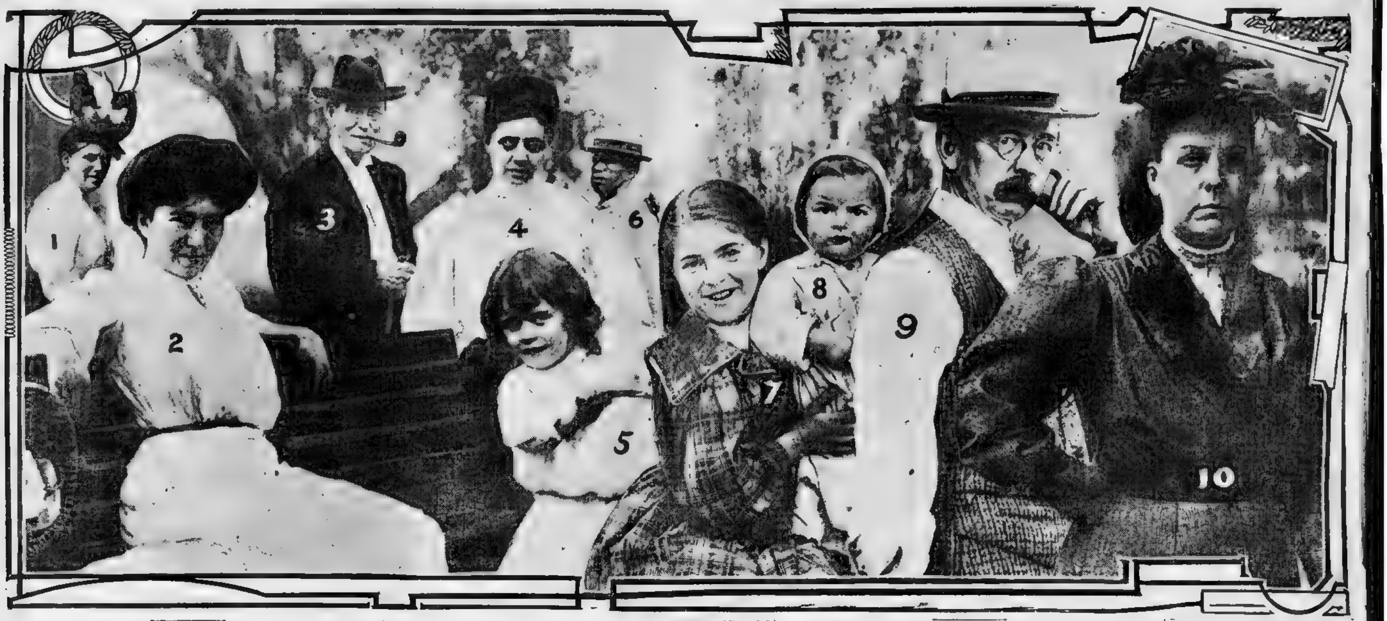
"SNAPSHOT TEN" ARE CAPTURED IN DAY'S TRAVEL IN SOMERVILLE



Ten Dollars Awaits Each of the Above If They Will Call at Boston American Office.

Question—If a man doesn't buy a Boston Sunday American when his picture is published in the Snapshot Ten, what happens?

HERE are the "Somerville Ten."

Also the names of those of the Cambridge Ten, published last Sunday, who have succeeded in identifying themselves.

In his wanderings through the city where it has been commented upon that men of somewhat more than mature years are in power, the Snapshot Man was struck by one thing. He had a constant and ever increasing desire to train his camera on children.

Children Very Much Interested

He found them on every corner, in every grass plot, in front of about every house. Some of them were vastly interested in the Snapshot Man's paraphernalia. Others were too dignified to give more than a casual glance at the camera and then resume their play.

The Snapshot Man thinks that after such temptation that he got a very representative group of citizens from Somerville.

Are you one of them? If you can satisfactorily prove that fact—and the Snapshot Man is easily convinced by facts—then there is Ten Dollars awaiting you at the office of the Boston American where the Snapshot Man hangs out.

Perhaps you know one of them? Even though you get nothing yourself it will doubtless give you some sort of satisfaction to realize that a friend of yours has captured one of the Snapshot Man's prizes.

Went All Over Somerville

Anyway the Snapshot Man had a good time out in Somerville. He started at one end of the town and went to the other and walked across. Now and then his camera recorded a subject to be a candidate for the Somerville Ten.

He didn't stop to see whether or not the subject wore shoes or stockings before the camera clicked. Race nor creed make no difference to him. He wanted a picturesque looking Ten and in his own opinion he thinks that such is reproduced to-day. There is no reason for Somerville to feel otherwise that proud of this group.

Somerville was the second city in Greater Boston to be visited by the Snapshot Man. Cambridge was tried first and strange to say, Cambridge produced only five identifications of the Snapshot Man's pictures.

Which is remarked because the Snapshot Man wants to say again with more emphasis than ever before: "Be'cause you did not see the man with a camera, is no reason why your picture may not have been taken."

This applies to the Somerville Ten also.

Hard to Believe It Was Herself

Here is an illustration: During the week there came into the Boston American office an elderly lady from Fall River. She was in doubt. Her friends had told her that she very much resembled the picture in the Boston Sunday American of June 2.

"Now I was in Boston on Memorial Day," she said, "with my husband. But I never had the slightest idea that my picture had been taken. I am not sure now that it was, but the picture looks like me and my friends say it does, so I came in to see the Snapshot Man."

She was accompanied by her husband. The Snapshot Man got out his original picture that showed the couple just going through the gate at the Public Garden. There was no doubt about it. She was the original of the picture and the Snapshot Man was very glad to put down the name of Mrs. Hannah M. Wetherell, No. 392 June street, Fall River, as No. 9 in the "Holliday Ten."

Mrs. Wetherell wins Ten Dollars that she didn't even suspect was hers.

Caught Man Rebels Couldn't

The first man in the Cambridge Ten to be identified was one the Snapshot Man was glad to see. He was Solomon M. Busnach of No. 100 Brookline street, Cambridge, the first volunteer to be enlisted in Cambridge when President Lincoln made his call for troops and the seventh volunteer enlisted in the country. He has all kinds of medals to show for it. Pretty good for the Snapshot Man, wasn't it?

Group Was Captured in as Many Different Sections of City as There Are Subjects..

Mr. Bushnach is a member of John A. Andrew Post, No. 15, G. A. R., and his comrades have been telling him that he is a lucky fellow all over again.

Small Paul Richard O'Donnell, son of Maurice O'Donnell, the Cambridge druggist, started on his vacation this week after his mother had brought him in to be identified as No 9 in the Cambridge Ten. Paul hadn't decided just what he would do with the Ten Dollars.

Another fortunate youngster was Henry David O'Connell. Henry was four years old on the day the Snapshot Man was out. His mother was giving him and his brother Jack, an outing when the Snapshot Man happened along with no warning that he was taking a birthday celebration.

Taken on His Way to Work

When Oscar Swanson's Quincy boss told him to go to Mt. Auburn Cemetery last Thursday and do a piece of work on a tombstone, Swanson didn't think that he was running into an extra Ten Dollars in addition to his day's pay. He was standing with his hands behind his back in Harvard square waiting for a car when the camera man came along.

"I thought you were taking a picture of the square," said Swanson when all doubts had been set at rest.

It's hardly necessary to tell anybody in Cambridge who travels about the vicinity of Central square who Jessie M. Baird is. The red-cheeked little lady who has been for some time employed in a Massachusetts avenue restaurant, has more friends in the University City than she can count in a week.

So much for the Cambridge Ten.

Taking another look at the Somerville Ten before the group is finally presented for identifications and some few Ten Dollar pieces, the Snapshot Man feels rather proud of it. In next Sunday's Boston American will be announced the names of those who won Ten Dollars.

Likewise there will be another Ten.

Dr. John Ingram and His "Religion of Humanity"

In a recent letter I referred to the death of Dr John Kells Ingram, the author of our famous ballad, "Who fears to speak of '98?" In the Positivist Review Mr. S. H. Swinny, writing of Dr. Ingram, his politics and his religion, says he was a professed believer in "the religion of humanity." Despite the alleged freedom of Trinity College he regarded himself as bound by "the implicit test," and "under an implied contract not to interfere with the religious ideas of the young persons whose literary instruction was entrusted to him. Hence his reticence about his opinions until he ceased to teach.

But the Comtist brotherhood included his confidants, and Mr. Swinny as one of them. It is interesting, therefore, to learn that he was "strenuous and unfailing" in his opposition to the South African War; that he was "indignant at the invasion of Tibet," and that his first paper in the Review was "directed against the policy of protection, so suddenly sprung on the country by Mr Chamberlain." As to Ireland, apparently he would have been a Separatist if only Ireland agreed with Comte.

When the Golden Age of Positivist is Reached.

"My general view as to the future composition of the world at large, which coincides with Comte's, leads me to believe that Ireland will be one day independent, and if she were once Positivist (which she is not likely to be till France, Italy and Spain are first converted)—a large order—her voice would be one of the most interesting, touching and poetic in the symphony of the nations."

Pending the Positivist Golden Age, however, Dr Ingram had begun to admit that even Catholic Ireland might be given a larger liberty.

Commenting on an article by Mr. Goldwin Smith, Ingram writes in January, 1906, "Smith seems also greatly alarmed at the notion of a severance of Ireland. But the longer I live, the more assured am I of two propositions: (1) that separation is the real solution, and (2) that we in Ireland are not yet ripe for it. I think C B S policy on this subject is the right and the only feasible one at present, and that Redmond ought to accept it, and work with the government." He was not, therefore, afraid to speak of '98. According to Mr Swinny his fame among his own people as a writer of the greatest ballad was undoubtedly gratifying to him; he recounted to me how he had heard his song sung in the extreme North and the extreme South of Ireland, the singers being ignorant of his presence; and his eyes brightened as I told him that I had seen the first two lines picked out in white stones on the green slope of Vinegar Hill."

Married Men's Flirtations

By Mrs. John A. Logan

WE regret to see in a long article by John Strange Winter a tendency to [illegible] of this species of vanity and tendency on the part of married men. The writer strains the point by saying that without this privilege there could be no sociability, and insists that if a man devotes all of his time to his wife and is dominated by her, he would not have even the privilege of dancing with any one else. Nobody imagines that the civilities that obtain in social life border on flirtations. There would be few women who would allow themselves to dance with married men if they thought that by so doing they would be the victims of flirtatious propensities of their partners. No sane woman would expect her husband to be always in her company. On the contrary, a woman is very glad when other women admire her husband, as it, in a word, commends her choice, but it is known [illegible] she would not be at all [illegible] if she discovered in her husband a disposition to carry on a flirtation with other women.

There can be no more reprehensible tendency in any man than that he should allow himself to indulge in foolish attentions to either married or unmarried women. Women are also warned of the consequences of their accepting these attentions seriously, and are given good advice. It is quite true that all flirtations end unhappily, and not infrequently in the disgrace of the parties to such illicit relations.

There is no such thing as an innocent flirtation, and the same may be said of platonic friendships between men and women, as there is a limit even in the warmth of regard manifested for one's dearest friends, and the moment that one steps outside of the proprieties which govern the intercourse of men and women, that moment one may be subject to criticism and to misconstruction of one's feelings toward another.

Loyalty in thought, word and deed should govern every married man and woman, and when that loyalty does not exist there is much misunderstanding, heart burning, and all too frequently ultimate separation.

Oftentimes one drifts into undue regard for some accepted friend, who presuming upon courtesies shown him dares to take unwarranted privileges, causing the keenest suffering to the person who had shown him every kindness and courtesy.

Woman's vanity and love of admiration often lead her to accept admiration from the husband of one of her friends, thereby inflicting, without any compunctions of conscience, unspeakable mischief which she has wrought and can never undo.

Men are not behind women in vanity, conceit and love of admiration, and will accept flattery from a wife's best friend or any other silly woman who is foolish enough to bestow it upon one who she knows has sworn to love and cherish another.

As a matter of fact, flirtations should be condemned in men and women; neither has the right to indulge in this species of evil, especially if either is married. Trifling with human affections is one of the most cowardly and wicked propensities of mankind, and absolutely without hope of happy or moral results.

MRS. C. E. FINK

HEALTH OF WOMEN

In this nineteenth century to keep up with the march of progress every power of woman is strained to its utmost, and the tax upon her physical system is far greater than ever.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers few drugs were used in medicines. They relied upon roots and herbs to cure weaknesses and disease, and their knowledge of roots and herbs was far greater than that of women today.

It was in this study of roots and herbs that Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., discovered and gave to the women of the world a remedy more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an honest, tried and true remedy of unquestionable therapeutic value.

This medicine made from native roots and herbs contains no narcotics or other harmful drugs and today holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any medicine the world has ever known, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the laboratory at Lynn, Mass., which testify to its wonderful value.

Mrs. C. E. Fink, of Carnegie, Pa., writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— "I wish every suffering woman would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and write to you for advice. It has done me a world of good and what it has accomplished for me I know it will do for others."

When women are troubled with Irregularities, Displacements, Ulceration, Inflammation, Backache, Nervous Prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of her vast volume of experience she probably has the very knowledge that will help your case.

LAWSON TO RENEW WAR ON SYSTEM, HE SAYS; BACK FROM EUROPE.

Battle Only Suspended, He Declares—Plans Fight to Finish.

BET $5,000 ON ROOSEVELT

Confident President Will Be Triumphant in Another Run for Office.

POSES FOR "MAD" ARTIST

Returns from Interesting Trip Abroad, Accompanied by His Two Daughters.

THOMAS W. LAWSON returned quietly to New York yesterday on the steamship Celtic after a two-months' tour of Europe and after declaring that he would yet crush the System, stole quietly to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where, for the rest of the day, his presence even at the hotel was denied by the clerks in obedience with his orders.

The financier had been caught by the reporters at the dock, and in leased wire dispatches to the Boston American last night it was stated that Lawson says he has come home full of fight and with many ideas as to foreign and home situations.

"The general financial outlook in Europe is very good," Mr. Lawson said. "Conditions are better than they have been for many years and there is nothing to indicate any change."

Another Term for Roosevelt.

Mr. Lawson in discussing the political situation declared that is his opinion that President Roosevelt would be forced to accept the nomination and be elected to a third term.

"Roosevelt has been advised and is well aware that he has reached about the greatest prestige that he can ever hope to attain and that a third term will without doubt end in absolute failure," said Mr. Lawson. "That I believe he will be elected is evident from the fact that four months ago I wagered $5,000 with Sam Untermeyer that he will serve another term.

"I was sure of it then and am even more sure of it now."

Asked if he intended to continue his fight against the System Mr. Lawson replied: "Why of course I am. Now that the System is being slowly crushed I would be a fool if I were to quit. There will be no compromise on my part.

"It is true that some time ago my friends advised me to give up the attempt and perhaps I myself did for a time think it would be a wise thing to do. But all that is changed now and I will fight it out to a finish."

Accompanied by Daughters.

Mr. Lawson spoke interestingly of his sittings for Mancini, the painter in Rome.

"Mancini is both mad and a genius," he declared. "I sat to him for three weeks and he would often crawl around on the floor on hands and knees and scratch and growl like some animal."

Mr. Lawson during his two months abroad spent much of his time in getting information from the people at first hand. With him were his daughters, Mrs. Eben B. Stanwood and the Misses Marion Doris and Jeanne Lawson. He will remain in New York until Tuesday, when he goes to New Hampshire to attend the graduation of his son.

Weatherman, Kinder Than Usual, Assures an Ideal June Sunday

Promises Heat Enough to Send Record Crowds to Beaches and Amusement Parks.

Ideal June weather for to-day is predicted by the weather forecaster.

If it arrives, as all conditions indicate that it will, it will find the beaches and the amusement parks ready to handle some of the largest crowds they have received in their history.

The heat yesterday, although not excessive, caused several prostrations in Boston.

There will likely be considerable humidity to-day to contribute some discomfort but, taken all in all, the weather man said last night that to-day ought to be a fine, pleasant day with enough warmth to convince the most skeptical that summer has at last appeared.

The mercury yesterday averaged 71 degrees.

PROSTRATED BY HEAT YESTERDAY

McAULEY, MICHAEL, thirty five years old, lineman, employed by the Malden Electric Company in Malden. Overcome by the heat near the Bell Rock depot, Malden, and taken to the hospital. Condition serious.

O'NEIL, MARTIN, thirty-seven years old, No. 12 Winchester street, cut his throat with a razor while crazed by the heat. Condition serious.

FAMOUS OLD ADAMS ACADEMY CLOSES ITS DOORS FOREVER.

Dr. William Everett, Its Renowned Head, in Tears as He Makes the Announcement.

SCHOOL FOUNDED IN 1872

Lack of Funds Causes Institution to Discontinue Its Educational Work.

GREAT MEN WERE PUPILS

Many Prizes Awarded at Yesterday's Last Commencement Exercises.

PATHETIC was the scene last night which noted the passing of Adams Academy, when Dr. William Everett, the venerable overseer of Harvard University and a foremost figure in educational progress in the United States for almost threescore years, announced that the famous academy at Quincy would not again open its doors.

With a voice quivering with emotion, which he vainly tried to suppress, and with tears streaming down his cheeks, Dr. Everett made the announcement at the last annual commencement exercises that the academy, endowed by the family of John Quincy Adams and founded in 1872, was to be closed, largely for lack of support from the town of Quincy.

"I am sorry," he said in a trembling voice, "to state that owing to the poor financial condition of the academy the school must close. I am also sorry that the citizens of Quincy have not found themselves able to contribute toward the support of the school so as to make its further usefulness in the community assured."

Then Dr. Everett handed the graduates their diplomas and told them to go their way in the world, but to keep in their hearts a kind remembrance of the old academy, which had graduated so many distinguished men in its time.

Head Master for 35 Years.

Dr. Everett has been head master of the famous old Adams Academy since its founding thirty-five years ago. Its existence has been his existence, for he threw his whole soul and being into its success and its work.

The venerable head of this institution has seen scores of boys who are now famous men graduated from the academy, and to each of them he handed diplomas, with words of wisdom and advice to guide them in their after lives.

Sons of New England's greatest citizens have been sent to the academy, which was housed in a small brick building near the home of Mrs. John Q. Adams, and which was rated as one of the foremost institutions of the town, named after two of the first Presidents of the Republic.

Already a case has been filed in the Supreme Court to determine whether the city of Quincy can be compelled to take over the academy and consolidate it with the high school.

Many Prizes Awarded.

Herbert Adams Lawton was awarded the prize for the best declamation. The judges were Dean B. F. Hurlburt of Harvard, Edwin P. Seaver, formerly supervisor of the Boston Public schools, and Perry Lawton. The prize was the Adams Academy gold medal.

Prizes for scholarship, awarded through the Robert C. Billings fund, were as follows: Excellence in studies, first class, August H. Wigren; second class, Herbert A. Lawton; third class, William E. Bullock, fourth class, Fridolf F. Peterson; extra for mathematics, William J. Nolan; for industry and good conduct, Francis Holley, August Wigren, Stanley F. Bates, Davis Lindbert, William Bullock, Rudolf C. Blake, Willard C. Middleton, Walter Slavin and Fridolf Peterson; translation of Homer, Joseph F. Godhue; Virgil, Stanley S. Bates; Caesar, William E. Bullock; Brackett essay prize, Edmund Boyd Fitzgerald; Anderson scholarship prize, August H. Wigren; alumni prize for best oration, Willard B. Middleton.

Diplomas were awarded to Raymond L. Brown, Vincent A. Curley, Joseph F. Godhue, Francis J. Healey, George P. McKenzie, August H. Wigren, and Edmund Boyd Fitzgerald.

NEW STANDARD OIL RAILROAD FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN.

Gigantic Transportation Scheme Now Planned by Henry H. Rogers.

BOSTON EASTERN TERMINAL

Every Available Dollar in Money Market Snatched to Perfect Scheme.

NEW HAVEN LINK IN CHAIN

Small Roads Being Gobbled Up to Complete Links of System.

NEW YORK, June 22.—H. H. Rogers has confided to his friends recently his determination to have an ocean-to-ocean railroad within the next two years. He puts a time limit on his operations because his health is such that he believes he should retire from active business in about that time.

His physicians have urged him to withdraw sooner, but he is determined to finish his railroad first. This grim determination of the Standard Oil man is responsible for much of the fighting that is going on among high financiers in Wall street just now.

Rogers has alienated some of his best friends, among them being John D. Rockefeller. He has pushed his railroad enterprises to such a limit that for the first time in his career he has been forced to go outside the Standard Oil banks for money. He recently borrowed $12,000,000 publicly and paid a very high rate of interest for it. William Rockefeller stands for Rogers in this enterprise, and is himself now seeking $15,000,000 from an insurance company to help out the railroad scheme.

New England in Deal.

This enterprise is more far reaching than is generally believed, for there is evidence that the New England States are included in the deal through the New Haven, which is seeking to control the Boston & Maine. Standard Oil men are in a position of commanding importance in the New Haven management, which is only nominally independent. Through the American Express Company they are striving to turn over the Boston & Maine to the New Haven. The New Haven is already in control of most of the Sound steamers.

Charles W. Morse is the agent of Rogers and his friends, and is building up a great coastwise steamship trust to connect the New Haven with all the coast cities and with Newport News, which is the terminal of the Deepwater and Tidewater. From Newport News to Seattle and Portland the new Rogers-Rockefeller system will be made up of the Virginia railway, from Newport News to the Ohio river opposite Ironton, O. The Virginia railroad is made up of the Deepwater and Tidewater roads.

These roads have been constructed entirely by money furnished by H. H. Rogers and William Rockefeller personally with the exception of the $12,000,000 recently borrowed by Rogers. This road is being built up to the Pennsylvania standard with bridging and ballasting that will last indefinitely. It is being constructed without regard to existing towns, the engineers having been instructed to select the shortest easy route between the points.

Looking for Small Roads.

According to present plans the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton will be used from Ironton north and west. There is a gap between Detroit and Chicago, but this can easily be supplied either by construction of a new line or by the purchase of some small road of which there are several in existence. From Chicago to the coast the St. Paul is to be used and that road is overwhelmingly dominated by Rogers and William Rockefeller.

The completed route will therefore be Boston to New York, New Haven; New York to Newport News, Consolidated Steamship Company; Newport News to Ironton, Virginia Railway; Ironton to Detroit, the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton; Detroit to Chicago, not selected; Chicago to the Pacific ocean, the St. Paul.

Contracts have been let for the entire mileage of the St. Paul. These call for a completion of the road in two years. Part of the money has been already provided and William Rockefeller and Mr. Rogers are snatching every available dollar in the money market and holding it for the use of this great ocean to ocean railroad scheme.

FENDER SAVES GIRL HIT BY TROLLEY CAR

Little One Has Thrilling Escape from Death on Dudley Street.

Six year old Madeline Gillis of No. 237 Dudley street was struck and knocked down by a surface car of the Boston Elevated in front of her home yesterday afternoon and had a narrow escape from death.

The fender saved her. Aside from a scalp wound she was uninjured.

CLEARS THE COMPLEXION BY SIMPLE METHOD

The large crowds at the toilet goods department of Houghton & Dutton's store the past week were occasioned by the sale of the wonderful beautifier, Madame Rupert's World Renowned Face Bleach, at the greatly reduced price of nineteen cents per bottle. At this figure any one can afford to be beautiful.

The sale will be continued this week. Face Bleach is the marvellous remedy which removes effectually all freckles, pimples, blackheads, sallowness, moth patches, wrinkles not caused by facial expression, and brightens and beautifies any muddy, rough skin.—Adv.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR WITH STANDARD OIL-RAILWAY TRUST.

State Organization on Record Against Merger—Fought It Bitterly in Legislature. Republicans Satisfied.

UXBRIDGE, June 22.—At the "Town Hall to-night," Henry M. Whitney, leading aspirant and probable nominee of the Democratic party for the Governorship of Massachusetts, told an audience that, notwithstanding the fact that he is a director of the Boston & Maine Railroad, the first he knew of the Mellen merger was after it had taken place.

At the same time Mr. Whitney made it plain that he has come to like the idea, and that he will be glad to cross swords in the political arena with anybody who says the consolidation of New England transportation companies is not to be about the best thing that ever happened.

Quincy Also Speaks.

Mr. Whitney read his speech. He told the audience of 250 men and boys that he was going to do so, and the manuscript appeared as soon as Judge Putnam had concluded a brief introduction. Mr. Whitney spoke under the auspices of the Board of Trade.

The candidate made the trip from Boston accompanied by the Hon. Josiah Quincy of that city, former Mayor and now of the Transit Commission. Mr. Quincy, who shares with William S. McNary the burden and honors of the Whitney management, followed Mr. Whitney briefly in the speaking.

Uxbridge was not unduly excited. Red fire was burned along the route from station to town hall, and the Uxbridge small boy had a glorious time with it. In the hall there was positively no enthusiasm, and from beginning to end of the speech there were no interruptions. Mr. Whitney was addressing himself to the State through the Sunday newspapers.

Mr. Whitney Was Shocked.

"I was not consulted by anyone," said Mr. Whitney. "I confess that when I first heard of it, it gave me something of a shock. But, when I came to consider the possible advantages, I could see no objection to it.

"Had I been consulted about it, I should have advised the parties in interest to go about it in a more open manner. I think it was a tactical mistake not to have so proceeded."

Then Mr. Whitney went on to characterize as a bogy the attempt to make political capital or a political question out of the merger issue.

In other words, the Boston-Cohasset millionaire publicly revealed the fact that the Democratic party in the Commonwealth is split wide open on the railroad consolidation question.

Mr. Whitney tonight exactly contravened the action of the Democratic State Committee, which through its executive committee, had placed the party organization on record as utterly opposed to the merger.

Audience Is Convulsed.

Less than two weeks ago, the legislative committee of the Democratic State Committee appeared before the Railroad Committee at the State House in favor of the most drastic anti-merger legislation.

Ten of the twelve Democrats in the Massachusetts Senate, by petition and by filing the first of the anti-merger bills, initiated the legislation which is now under way on Beacon Hill.

Two months before the State convention, therefore, the breach in the Democratic party appears to be beyond the power of political surgeons. Around the Cohasset candidate are grouped most of the powerful leaders of the party in Boston and throughout the State. Against him stand the State Committee and the legislative leaders.

Mr. Whitney's story of how the merger came upon him as a bewildering surprise party convulsed his Uxbridge audience. It was the hit of the night. It reminded the newspaper men of President Mellen's naive explanation to the Railroad Committee last week, of how he came to be in possession of Massachusetts street railway companies after he had promised the Commonwealth to be good, pending the decision of the courts.

"The Dear Old B. & M."

"We bought in the Rhode Island Company," President Mellen said, in effect—quite like the man who tells of finding a five-dollar bill in the trousers that he hung up last Summer—"and we found, to our great surprise, that that company owned a couple of small trolley lines in this State.

"So!"—with a shrug of his shoulders.

'Twas just like that Mr. Whitney explains, that he found this merger proposition in his stocking. He was sentimentally sorry, of course, at first to witness the passing of the old Boston & Maine, but, now, "the greatest good of the greatest number."

Singularly enough, Mr. Whitney seems to have selected for his first deli on the merger question the principal town on the Uxbridge & Blackstone. The taking over of this property by the New Haven was announced while Mr. Mellen was talking last week at the State House.

Uxbridge cast 537 votes for Governor

WOMAN ENDS LIFE BY INHALING GAS

Despondent, probably because of divorce proceedings which are pending in the courts, Mrs. Gertrude E. Edwards, thirty years of age, who had separated from her husband, was found dead, a suicide by inhaling gas, in her room at No. 700 Columbus avenue at 2 o'clock this morning.

A lodger found the woman. The gas had been turned on and she was dying when found. The woman was sent to the City Hospital, where she died in a few minutes.

Two letters, one of them addressed to her brother Lawrence Christensen, No. 14 Fifield street, Roxbury, were found in the room. Another note, to whom addressed the police refused to say, was also found.

BOY FATALLY HURT BY FALL OVER BANK

Walter Pope, five years of age, son of William Pope, of No. 134 Paris street, East Boston, while playing at the corner of Porter and Bremen streets, yesterday afternoon, fell from an embankment, fracturing his skull. He was taken to the Relief Hospital and will probably die.

SELL ICE CREAM TO-DAY--O'MEARA

The sellers of ice cream or the bakers of bread will not be molested by the police to-day.

Commissioner O'Meara yesterday declared that, following District Attorney Moran's freeing of forty-nine offenders of this kind, there would be no further arrests or prosecutions in either of these fields of activity.

So far as to-day is concerned you may remove theatrical baggage and scenery in the early hours, go to church, shovel snow, sell newspapers in the morning, buy ice cream at drug store or restaurant, work in the subway, make and deliver ice cream and bread late Sunday night, repair steam pipes if you're a steamfitter, have your baggage carted to the station, brew beer if you are a brewer, prepare flowers for a funeral, clean the streets, gather rubbish on the Common, sweep the post office sidewalk, cart sand for electric car tracks, handle through freight and distribute books in the Public Library.

But you may not load steamers, handle beef and provisions, rehearse for amateur theatricals, clean steam railroad cars, keep your bakery open between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., rent, wash, repair or demonstrate automobiles, handle local freight, wash or repair carriages, catch fish, play golf, work in factories or do repair work on a yacht.

K. OF C. TO RAISE LARGE CLUB FUND

Medford Council Arranges Field Day and Reunion at Combination Park.

HOSTS ARE EXPECTED

The first field day and reunion to be held by the Medford Council, No. 141, Knights of Columbus, at Combination Park, next Saturday, promises to be a notable affair, as many hundred of Knights from other councils, together with their ladies, have promised to help the success of the day. The receipts will go to swell the fund for the fitting up of the handsome new quarters of the council in the Medford Opera House.

Many Athletic Events.

The program, in addition to the regular field day features, includes horse racing, athletic sports, baseball, tug-of-war matches, amusement and children's races, a band concert in the afternoon and vaudeville in the evening.

As a special attraction a one and one-half mile race will take place between James J. F. Lee of the St. Alphonsus A. A., the two and ten mile champion of New England, and Thomas Reardon, the crack B. A. miler, who has distanced all local runners at that distance.

The regular card of field and track events open to local athletes in which valuable prizes will be awarded includes 100 yard dash, 440 yard run, mile, run, hop, step and jump, 100 yard dash for boys and 100 yard dash for girls under 15; 100-yard run for fat men, minimum weight 200 pounds, throwing [illegible] shot, running high jump, putting 16-pound shot and the broad jump.

Features [illegible] amusement races include the greased pig contest, barrel rolling race for boys, sack race, [illegible] race and pie eating contest.

Will Dance in Pavilion.

One of the warmest contests is the tug of war match is anticipated between Division 4, A. O. H., of this city, and Hiawatha Tribe, I. O. R. M., both of whom have met on the cleats at previous field days.

The horse racing program includes class races and a gentlemen's road race for four-wheeled vehicles. James F. Wallace, Dennis F. Wholley and William H. Casey are in charge.

The baseball fans will have an opportunity to witness one of the hottest league games of the Knights of Columbus series between Arlington and Concord Councils, both of whom have been pennant holders in the K. of C. League.

John F. McCurdy will be in charge of the dancing, which will take place in the pavilion during the afternoon and evening.

The committees are as follows:

WILL UNVEIL SHAFT TO CIVIL WAR HERO

The general committee in charge of the ceremonies attending the unveiling on Tuesday, at Mount Calvary, West Roxbury, of the granite shaft that will mark the grave of Colonel Bernard F. Finan, hero of the Civil War, will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the headquarters of the Ninth Regiment Veterans' Association, No. 1151 Washington street, to complete arrangements.

The unveiling of the monument will be marked by a parade of 2,000 men, speeches and banquet. The entire command of the "Fighting Ninth," led by Colonel William S. Donovan, and escorting the veterans of that gallant regiment, will march through the streets of Boston before taking special cars for the cemetery, where the oration will be delivered by Former Congressman William S. McNary, once a lieutenant in the Ninth.

In the evening a banquet will be held in Faneuil Hall, which will be attended by Governor Guild and staff, Mayor Fitzgerald, members of the Board of Aldermen, President Barrett of the Common Council, Chief of State Police Whitney, Brigadier-General Emery P. Clark and staff, Colonel William Donovan of the Ninth Regiment and staff, together with officers of the Rhode Island National Guard and Mayor McCarthy of Providence.

The erection of the monument is largely due to the Veterans' Association. That organization started a subscription list that grew rapidly. White Brothers of West Quincy designed and carved it.

MOTHER IS FRANTIC OVER MISSING GIRL

Missing from her home at Tremont and Waltham streets since last Tuesday afternoon, pretty fourteen-year-old Amy Wentworth, only child of Mrs. Carrie Wentworth, a demonstrator, is anxiously being sought by the frantic mother and the police.

Late Tuesday afternoon Amy was sent by her mother on an errand to a nearby store. Returning she left the purchase on the steps of the house and disappeared. After waiting a reasonable time the mother, becoming alarmed, notified the police of the Dedham street station. Several girl friends of the missing girl have since said that they had seen Amy on the Common, dressed entirely different than her custom.

The missing girl is about four feet tall, with gray eyes, and medium light hair, hanging in braids, and weighs about 115 pounds. She wore a plain black shirtwaist and short skirt, and was bareheaded. Mrs. Wentworth formerly lived at No. 3 Cortes street.

THIRD RAIL BELCHES FLAMES AND THUNDER

Short Circuiting on N. Y. Central Causes Strange Disturbance.

New York, June 22.—For half an hour this afternoon blinding flashes of light, accompanied with occasional roars like the discharge of artillery, poured from the third rail on the viaduct of the New York Central road at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Park avenue, for a time threatening the houses on both sides of the thoroughfare with destruction and resulting in one of the worst congestions of traffic in years. The cause of the trouble was the short circuiting of the third rail with two cables containing a three-inch strand of lead running between One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-eighth streets.

SEEK HIRED MURDERERS.

New York, June 22.—The police are investigating a clue that the murder of Julius T. Rosenheimer, the Pelham millionaire, who was killed on his estate Tuesday night, was instigated by thugs in the pay of a man prominent in Westchester county, the objects being robbery and revenge.

SECRET MARRIAGE STIRS SMART SET

Former Rhode Island Governor's Granddaughter Marries Young Clerk.

HER MOTHER PROSTRATED

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 22.—Never has Rhode Island society been more surprised than it was to-day, when the announcement was made that Henry W. Stiness, the only son of former Chief Justice John H. Stiness, and Miss Inez Sprague, daughter of Mrs. Avis Wheaton and granddaughter of former Governor William Sprague, were secretly married last evening in St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church by the Rev. Herbert William Barker, the new curate of the parish.

Judge and Mrs. Stiness are in Europe and the young people kept their plans to themselves. The bride is twenty-one years of age, while her husband is twenty-seven.

Waiting until night Stiness and Miss Sprague secured their marriage license at the home of the clerk of courts. They asked one of the Judges of the Supreme Court to tie the nuptial knot, but he refused, and then they hunted up Rev. Mr. Barker.

Mr. Stiness attended Brown University, then studied law in the Chicago University and is now one of the clerks in the Superior Court.

Miss Sprague is of the famous Sprague-Weed family and moves in Narragansett Pier society. She is a grand-daughter of Governor William Sprague and Kate Chase Sprague, for her father was William Sprague, Jr., who eloped with his stepmother's sister, Miss Avis Weed.

William Sprague, Jr., committed suicide and the widow married Gerritt S. Wheaton, one of the Standard Oil magnates. Wheaton died suddenly in Washington three or four years ago, and Mrs. Wheaton, mother of Inez Sprague and Lolita Wheaton, was left with a large income and handsome property at the pier.

But still another romance is connected with this elopement of last night. Inez Sprague, the bride, was engaged for a short time to Harold Windpenny, son of a well known Philadelphia family. On May 18 of last year she even visited the home of young Windpenny and immediately upon her return to her home the breaking of the engagement was announced.

Then came the attachment with Mr. Stiness, and the rumor that if they were not engaged they soon would be. Governor Sprague took a town house here last winter and Miss Sprague moved much in society.

News Prostrates Mother.

Mrs. William Sprague was prostrated when she learned of the marriage this morning, and is said to have taken to her bed. Judge and Mrs. Stiness are in Europe, where they have been attending The Hague Peace Conference, and Mrs. Avis Wheaton, mother of the bride, is spending a few days at Wilmington, Del.

It is said that Mrs. William Sprague has exerted every possible influence to prevent the match, as she was anxious that the young woman should marry a man [illegible] brought the young woman to Providence last Fall and took a house at No. 1?8 Waterman street in the fashionable district in order to introduce her into society. She was received very kindly and was welcome at every social function. It was not until very recently that the attentions of young Stiness became marked, and of late he has been a frequent visitor to Canonchet.

The Sprague family history presents many romantic features. It is essentially tragic. When William Sprague was elected Governor of Rhode Island, the firm of which he was a member was one of the most prosperous in the State. It controlled almost all the mills in Rhode Island and it was the boast of the old War Governor that he carried the State in his vest pocket. His power was absolute. He and his brother Amasa were the biggest men in Rhode Island and everywhere their will was law.

When in the zenith of his power he built the handsome race track at Narragansett Park, though this long since passed out of his hands. His print works at Cranston are monuments to the magnificence [illegible] everything, and the ruins of the old gas plant [illegible], where now stands a box factory, are shown with awe to the casual visitor, as a relic of brilliant days forever passed. At Swan Point, too, the Sprague plot is one of the grandest to be found in that place of handsome memorials, but like everything else bearing the name of Sprague it is fast showing the effect of lack of care and is falling into decay.

$1,000,000 Homestead.

The home at Canonchet is the only part of the immense undertakings carried out by his family which to-day presents the appearance of affluence. This homestead, said to have been erected at the cost of a million dollars, was all that Governor Sprague was able to save out of the wreck. The story of how he faced with a [illegible] the officers of the law who attempted to seize the property for the benefit of creditors is one of the most remarkable features in the history of this unusual man.

His life with Kate Chase, daughter of Salmon P. Chase, a former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, is equally interesting. While he was Governor, Sprague went to Columbus to take part in the unveiling of a monument to Perry. There he met the handsome young woman, and after a brief courtship married her. Their domestic life was not happy, and one occasion Governor Sprague pursued Roscoe Conkling, then a guest of his wife at Canonchet, from the house with a shotgun. Kate Chase secured a divorce in 1880, and after a short career on the stage was finally lost sight of. She died a few years ago after spending her last years quietly in Edgewood, a suburb of Washington.

The Derby medal was awarded to Joseph W. Finkel.

STRAINE IS STILL IN JAIL; MYSTERY GIRL FAILS HIM

Would-Be Abductor of Daughter Waits in Vain for Bondsmen She Promised to Find.

ROBERT F. STRAINE, popular member of many fashionable clubs, resident of Marlboro street, the Hotel Lenox and the Parker House, and the father of a beautiful girl, worth $80,000, spent his second night in jail in Salem last night. The mysterious young woman who visited him behind the bars yesterday, and who left Straine promising to get bail for him, failed in her efforts to free the former State street financier.

Straine, who tried to kidnap his daughter at Wellesley, where she was a student at Dana Hall, was released to the authorities of Essex County on Friday by Roland W. Boyden, guardian of his pretty daughter, Dorothy, on a charge of larceny preferred by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Very. The grand jury of Essex County had indicted him in September, 1905, and since then he has been out on $3,000 bail, furnished by Mr. Boyden.

When Straine, who was accompanied by a mysterious woman who gave her name as "Mary Smith" when arrested, attempted to abduct his daughter, Mr. Boyden was so incensed that he wrote to the authorities of Essex county stating that he would be responsible for the man no longer. Then Constable Craswell arrested Straine in Summer street, near the South Station, and for the first time in his life the man of luxury spent a night in jail.

Pretty Girl Comes to Him in Prison.

In the morning a ray of light came to the imprisoned man, through a pretty woman, not more than twenty years of age. She was handsomely gowned in a modish creation of navy blue, and when she was asked [illegible] to give her name, but insisted upon seeing Mr. Straine.

They met as though the greatest of friends and a long and earnest consultation followed in the shadows of the iron doors and barred window, where the man of the world and the beautiful woman seemed strangely out of place.

As she left him, she said:

"Don't be down-hearted. I'll be sure to get bail for you and come back this afternoon and get you out."

Salem Society Woman Accuser.

Straine was charged with larceny by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Very, of No. 96 Bridge street, Salem. Mrs. Very is seventy years of age and a member of one of Salem's oldest families. In the bill of particulars which she filed in her suit, which resulted in Straine's being indicted, she charged that he had obtained $1,750 from her June 18, 1901, when she bought sixty shares of stock in the United Telegram Company of Boston of which Straine was president. She alleged that she got no stock nor would Straine return her the money and the suit was the consequence.

"I know that Mr. Straine has become a neighbor of mine," said Mrs. Very with a laugh yesterday. "No, I don't think I shall call upon him nor send him any flowers nor delicacies. He must find jail life a different sort of existence from life in Marlboro street, the Lenox and the Parker House."

TINKHAM TAKES MAYOR TO TASK

Brought to task by prominent Republicans because of the statements attributed, presumably to him by Mayor Fitzgerald's organ, the Republic, in which he was made to disparage Postmaster George A. Hibbard as a Republican mayoralty candidate and make unkind remarks about Mr. Hibbard's being a tailor and simply having the ability to cut a vest properly, tell a good story and sign the postoffice payroll, former Alderman George Holden Tinkham last night indignantly denied using any such language.

The Mayor in his weekly said that Mr. Tinkham, presumably George Holden Tinkham, had said that Mr. Hibbard would be a "frost" as a mayoralty candidate.

"I never said any such thing," said George. "I never use slang under any circumstances. Furthermore, you may say that Mr. Tinkham believes that Postmaster Hibbard would make a very strong candidate."

Mayor Fitzgerald does not believe that Postmaster Hibbard is sincere in his statement that he does not desire to be Mayor, and accuses the postmaster of using his office for political ends.

The Republicans are admittedly all at sea over a candidate to oppose Mayor Fitzgerald although Acting Chairman William Berwin of the Board of Aldermen stands ready to answer the call.

MRS. BULL HOSTESS FOR 200 CHILDREN

The beautiful grounds of Mrs. Ole Bull at Channing and Brattle streets, Cambridge were thronged with Boston and Cambridge society folk yesterday afternoon when that charming hostess presided over an open-air play for the benefit of the Niagara movement in aid of colored children. Over two hundred colored boys and girls took part in the play, entitled "Peter's Pumpkin Patch," and handsome social leaders in gay attire applauded the work of the children to the echo.

Pumpkins and flowers formed a realistic picture to the play. The world-bed children, under the direction of Miss Margaret MacLaren Eager did excellent work. Miss Eager arranged the play.

Prominent among the society matrons present were Mrs. Jack Gardner, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., Mrs. Horace Bumstead, Miss Maria L. Baldwin, Mrs. F. H. Clement, Mrs. Samuel Crothers, Mrs. Richard H. Dana, Mrs. Mark R. DeMotte, Mrs. William B. Durrant, Mrs. Oliver Dufrell, Mrs. Arthur Foote, Mrs. Lillian Feurtado, Mrs. William Lloyd Garrison, Mrs. Silvio M. Gozzaldi, Mrs. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Mrs. N. P. Hallowell, Mrs. Mary M. Tehew, Miss Alice Longfellow, Mrs. Lucy A. Mead, Mrs. Edwin D. Mellen, Mrs. Charles R. Mitchell, Mrs. Walter A. McAdoo, Mrs. Estelle H. M. Merrill, Mrs. A. A. Rockwood, Mrs. Rezzenh C. Ransom, Mrs. A. A. Shaw, Mrs. Arcana C. Sparrow, Mrs. Walter C. Wardwell, Mrs. F. W. Whittemore, Mrs. Butler R. Wilson and Mrs. Roger Wolcott.

WHO WILL DECIDE THE EDDY SUIT?

Judge Chamberlain, It Is Reported, Will Name Master Within a Few Days.

Concord, N. H., June 22.—Interest in the Eddy case was increased to-day when it was reported that Judge Chamberlain will within a few days appoint the master to whose care he has announced that he will confide the work of passing upon [illegible] condition.

The withdrawal from the list of next friends [illegible] plaintiffs in the suit of [illegible] Baker, the only New Hampshire resident, has also caused a great deal of talk. Mr. Baker said to-day:

Doubts Justice of Suit.

"Yes, it is true that I have dropped out of the suit. I presume that my action will be criticised by those interested in either side. The defendants will ask why I went into the suit later to withdraw. I am not convinced of the entire justice of the suit and I have in a general way decided that it's none of my business.

"Mr. Frye has not treated me properly. When I was invited to visit Pleasant View by Mrs. Eddy herself he ought not to have prevented me from doing so. But Mrs. Eddy is not to blame for the conduct of Mr. Frye, and I do not feel that I ought to press the suit to her injury or the injury of Christian Science."

Counsel Ask for Allowance.

Counsel for the "next friends" filed a motion in which they make known their position on two important points.

They are anxious that all questions, including that of Mrs. Eddy's competency or incompetency, be passed upon by a jury.

They ask for an allowance from Mrs. Eddy's estate to defray the expenses incurred by the next friends in carrying on the suit.

RICH BREWER TO LIVE IN PALACE OF GOULD

Zach Tinker of St. Louis Negotiating For Georgian Court.

St. Louis, June 22.—Advices from New York state that Zach W. Tinker, a wealthy brewer of this city, is negotiating for George Gould's country seat, Georgian Court at Lakewood, N. J., which the Goulds abandoned four weeks ago and placed in the hands of agents for sale.

HE-ATE TOO FAST.

Pittsburg, June 22.—"Death from eating too fast," is the unusual verdict returned by the Coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Steve Solomon, inmate of the Western Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane at Dixmont, who, on May 29, choked on a piece of meat.

COLE'S BILL ON MERGER MUST BE EMASCULATED TO SATISFY MELLEN

New Haven's Head May Induce Legislators to Drop Clause Forbidding Multiple Directorship in Massachusetts Railroads.

POLITICIANS, statesmen, financiers, the great and the near great, who discussed the pending anti-merger bill last night, wondered, they said, whether the Legislature will quickly respond to the demand of President Charles Sanger Mellen of the New Haven road and seriously amend the Cole bill, so called, to suit Mr. Mellen's wishes.

President Mellen requests the Legislature to strike out of the pending bill this clause:

"No officer, agent, servant or employe of such corporation shall, prior to the first day of July, nineteen hundred and eight, be elected, appointed, or shall serve or act as an officer, agent, servant or employe of such domestic railroad company."

Mr. Mellen's dislike for this clause is due to the fact that at the present time the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company controls the following named Massachusetts roads:

Berkshire Railroad Company.
Boston & Providence Railroad.
Holyoke and Westfield Railroad.
Milford and Woonsocket Railroad.
Milford, Franklin & Providence.
The New England Railroad.
New Haven and Northampton.
Norwich & Worcester Railroad.
Old Colony Railroad Company.
Providence & Worcester Railroad.

The clause objectionable to Mr. Mellen in the Cole bill would prevent Mr. Mellen from continuing to serve as president or a director of several of these leased lines. Other officers, agents, servants and employes of the leased lines would be affected in like manner.

To-morrow afternoon, therefore, the House will be asked to amend the bill as Mr. Mellen wants it amended. Representatives will be urged to overlook [illegible] done the previous mergers of Massachusetts railroads and just keep their eye on the Boston & Maine. The other cases were such little ones.

Considerable sympathy was expressed for Speaker Cole, personally, in charge of what he calls the [illegible] who is thus to see the most [illegible] of his clauses rudely shattered. Perhaps the new clause will read like this:

"No officer, agent, servant or employe of such corporation shall, prior to the first day of July, nineteen hundred and eight, be elected, appointed or shall serve or act as an officer, agent, servant or employe of such domestic railroad company except in the case of the Berkshire Railroad Company, the Boston and Providence Railroad Corporation, the Holyoke and Westfield Railroad Company, the Milford and Woonsocket Railroad Company, the Milford, Franklin and Providence Railroad Company, the New England Railroad Company, the New Haven and Northampton Company, the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company and the Providence and Worcester Railroad Company."

With these ten exceptions have been [illegible] Mr. Mellen some of the ultra [illegible] in the House are expected to rise up and inquire: "Well, if it's all right for the New Haven to [illegible] and man ten Massachusetts railroads, how can it be wrong [illegible]"

To Make Bill Ridiculous.

The necessity for the proposed Mellen amendment to the bill, it was said last [illegible] purpose of making the [illegible] Which gave rise [illegible] Was [illegible] drawn by Colonel [illegible] for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad [illegible]

Speaker Cole has declined to answer [illegible] Sunday American [illegible] anti-merger [illegible] the House [illegible] amendment that Mr. Mellen [illegible] the Speaker's private [illegible] Mr. Mellen remained for an hour. He urged the Speaker to [illegible] the offensive clause. What else he urged has not been made public. It was said yesterday that the Hope for Adjournment This Week.

An effort will be made in both branches of the Legislature to dispose of the consolidation bill this week and adjourn sine die.

The first real effort to stop the railroad monopoly, however, will be made in the Senate. It is said that the merger bill is likely to go back to the House from the Senate in such shape that Speaker Cole will hardly be able to recognize it as the bill that now carries his name. The branches may yet send the problem to a conference committee.

The Senate will insist on removing from the bill each and every mention of the date "July 1, 1908." "There is no good reason in the world," a Senator said last night, "why any time limit should be set [illegible] legislation. If it is good legislation it should stand until it is repealed. [illegible] purpose to have the next Legislature [illegible] the question the present [illegible] should simply do its own part [illegible] and let the coming Legislature do with it as it pleases."

In [illegible] manner the Senate will insist [illegible] the first three lines of the [illegible] that [illegible] railroad company may not be [illegible] by a holding company," or a "trust" formed for the purpose.

Both of these weak places may be patched up in the House, where men like [illegible] of Somerville, Dean of Wakefield, White of Brookline and March G. Bennett of Boston have introduced amendments that would take care of them.

"The coming week," it was said last night, "will bring the real sensations of the merger crisis."

"The pending bill," says Attorney Louis Brandeis, for Boston & Maine minority interests opposed to the merger, "is all right as far as it goes. But it doesn't go far enough. It ought to be amended."

Meanwhile, everybody admits that the only way to find out what the public wants would be to adopt the bill offered by Representative John F. Sullivan of East Boston as a substitute for the "Cole" bill. Mr. Sullivan proposes that the voters of Massachusetts have a say on the question at the Fall elections. The referendum would be his solution of the problem.

"Submit the merger question to the people," he says. "They'll settle it."

YOUNG LEADER OF THE INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE IN CITY OF SOMERVILLE

Mr. Butterworth is trying to interest independent voters in work of the League and looks for a good showing in the city caucuses.

ASKS INDEPENDENTS TO JOIN THE LEAGUE

Young Leader Points Out the Need of Reform to Somerville Voters.

One of the leaders of the Independence League in Somerville is Charles E. Butterworth of Holland street. He is a young man, deeply interested in the public questions of the day and possessed of a strong faith that the dominant party of the future is the Independence League.

A peculiar condition obtains in Somerville relative to political duty. Although the city adopted the Boston caucus act, which provides for the enrollment of voters that attend caucuses, only a very small percentage of the voters have taken the trouble to attend caucuses and become enrolled. The people have come to the conclusion that a small clique of Republicans run the caucuses and that it would be useless to attempt to oppose the wishes of the bosses, and so they keep away from the primaries.

Mr. Butterworth is trying to interest those independent voters in the Independence League and hopes to have a large number of them vote the league tickets in the caucuses. Concerning political conditions and the league work in Somerville, Mr. Butterworth said to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American:

"At present there seems to be considerable enthusiasm among the voters of Somerville over the platform of the Independence League, many of them having decided to become Leaguers. In fact, because of the requests of workingmen who wished to [illegible] their party affiliations, the city clerk, Mr. Cook, decided to allow an hour last Wednesday evening for the purpose of enrollment. [illegible] will be an [illegible] opportunity to enroll in the evening and I believe that many who are too busy in the daytime to attend to this matter will take advantage of the chance.

"It is true that Somerville is an exceedingly strong Republican city, but it has been my experience to find many independent thinkers among the Republican voters. I was a Republican myself before the advent of the League.

"This city is badly in need of an overhauling of its municipal politics as many of its citizens will testify. There are several cases of mismanagement being brought to the attention of the people by the League. An instance of it is to be seen in the fact that, although we have the beginning of an incineration plant, it is not being used to anywhere near the extent that it should. It has been reported that up to date three or four cart loads of paper have been burned by it and that is all. Managed correctly it should be of great profit to the city.

"Time for Third Party."

"Yes, I think there is much good work to which the League can turn its attention in Somerville, as well as throughout the State, and, as we are now the third legal party in the State, our opportunity for being of use is very great, and our platform and principles should receive the careful consideration of all fair-minded men, irrespective of party.

"We believe the time is ripe for a third party to step in and stand fearlessly for those things that are fast becoming necessary for our future prosperity, and which both the old parties are combatting with all the strength that is in them. I agree with Archbishop Williams that young men should interest themselves in politics. The country needs their youthful energy in the great struggle for justice which has only just commenced. All Somerville citizens desiring to join the movement or in search of information concerning our plans may write to me at No. 122 Holland street, West Somerville."

SEES TOILERS' HOPE IN INDEPENDENCE

Waltham, June 22.—The City Clerk of Waltham will open his office next Tuesday evening between the hours of 7.30 and [illegible] for the enrolment of those voters who wish to change from the old parties to the Independence League but who have not the time to do so during the regular office hours of the day.

Members of the Waltham Independence League will be on hand to assist those who wish to change enrolment.

There is a feeling here among those citizens of independent thought that there is not much choice between the old parties except in name and that the time is now ripe for independents of all parties to join together and support men who will represent the will of the people and not of machine cliques.

Thomas Lady of No. 1 Day street said to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American: "I have always been an independent Democrat, but do not now believe that any man can claim to be really independent who adds Democrat or Republican to his politics. In the coming State election it looks as if there would be no choice for the independent or man who is in favor of measures which will be of benefit to the wage-earner. Between Whitney, Draper, Guild or men of similar political worth there is absolutely no choice, no matter if they do bear different party names. They all represent the lines upon which the wage-earner can expect the least.

"But with the Independence League it is different. The platform of that party represents the demands of the working man, no matter if he works in the street or in the store. The men that will be nominated by the League will all be pledged to principles which are fair to all alike, whether Democrat, Republican or Socialist, wage earner or employer.

"I shall do all I can to boom the League in Waltham, and my friends agree with me that it is the only salvation at the present time for the workingman in politics."

POPULAR CHELSEA MAN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE

JOHN W. KINNALLY.

URGES WORKERS TO JOIN LEAGUE

Frank A. Cox of Carpenters' Union Changes Enrolment to New Party.

For years one of the most active Democrats of South Boston and a prominent member of the Carpenters' Union, Frank A. Cox, of No. 143 West Sixth street, has enrolled in the Independence League.

Mr. Cox believes that every wage earner should be a member of the new party.

"The day for passing resolutions as trade unions and doing nothing else has gone by," he said. "The League offers in return for our support, candidates to our liking and support for our legislative demands.

"The recognition of labor unions, in legitimate efforts to regulate wages, hours and conditions; direct control of the law making power through the initiative and referendum; direct elections by the people of Senators and other officials, the power of recall, are some of the principles of the League which have impelled me to join and which, I trust, will cause many other wage earners to do the same thing.

"Therefore, I urge all wage earners to go at once to the office of the election commissioners, No. 1 Old Court House, back of City Hall, and change their enrolment to the Independence League. And go at once. After Wednesday it will be too late."

NEW INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE IN CHELSEA

John W. Kinnally Heads Young Men in Fight Against Graft and Bossism.

With John W. Kinnally, a popular member of the Winnisimmet Social and Athletic Association as their president, a number of Chelsea young men who take an active interest in politics, have formed a new branch of the Independence League in that city.

At a largely attended meeting in the [illegible] rooms last night, the new league was addressed by Robert F. Allen, chairman of the Boston Independence League City Committee, and President Kinnally on the principles and objects of the new party.

Other officers elected were Martin Flaherty, vice president, and Carl Nelson, secretary treasurer. The following affixed their names to the membership roll: Joseph O'Brien, Joseph Boyle, James Boyle, Frank Anderson, Frank Kinnally, Daniel Madden, George Hederson, Thomas Lynch, William Duggan, C. Coleman, Daniel Lehan, James Donavan, George DeShon, Daniel Sullivan, William Tower, Joseph Cromwell, A. Frazer, Charles La Faye, Thomas Madden and George Gross.

To-morrow evening, from 7 to 8 o'clock, the city clerk will meet voters at his office who wish to change their political party enrollment. Realizing that it is practically impossible for workingmen to visit his office during the regular hours of the day the city clerk of Chelsea has granted the request of the Independence League for an evening session in City Hall. Members of the Chelsea Independence League will be on hand at the city clerk's office to assist voters who wish to change enrolment. Old party voters who do not change their enrollment before next Wednesday will be unable to take part in the League primaries this year.

Speaking of the new organization, President Kinnally said: "The time has come when the young men of Chelsea should take a stand for their rights. I think the Independence League affords an opportunity to the young man which the old parties have denied. If a young man has been independent of the bosses he has no chance for public office. I think the League, which wants all men honestly interested in public affairs to join it, will give the young men a show. It is time a stand was taken against the graft and crookedness that enters into the politics of the [illegible] ones in the old parties, and this League will make the fight."

EDWARD B. BISHOP DIES AT HAVERHILL

Haverhill, June 22.—Edward B. Bishop, leading Essex County Republican, for twenty-one years one of its commissioners, is dead of cancer. He was stricken blind a year ago. Born in Brunswick, Me., in 1835, he came to Haverhill forty years ago and engaged in shoe manufacturing until he was appointed City Marshal. He served in the Common Council and was first elected County Commissioner in 1884, being re-elected for seven consecutive terms, serving for seven years as chairman of the board.

He served on many commissions about the State, abolishing grade crossings. A successor was elected to the county commission a year ago, but this news was never broken to him and up to the time of his death he planned county business. He was a prominent Mason.

last Fall. Guild got 298 of them and John B. Moran 239. Of these latter, forty appeared under the colors of the Independence League.

Judge A. A. Putnam presided at tonight's speechifying. Mr. Whitney was cordially received. After the speaking he held a reception at the Windsor. Subsequently he was banqueted in the vestry of the Congregational Church by the Ladies' Tourist Club.

HERE IS WHITNEY'S SPEECH DELIVERED AT UXBRIDGE

In opening his speech at Uxbridge town hall last night Mr. Whitney advocated tariff revision, asserting that a revision of the tariff would lighten the burden of workingmen of Massachusetts. If this were made plain, he declared, a move to bring this condition about would be supported by the mass of toilers.

Continuing, he said:

As the centre of trade has been steadily moving year by year farther away from us the people in charge of our transportation lines have by one means and another kept the mechanic and workingmen of New England in touch with their brethren in those distant regions to the mutual advantage of all concerned. The policy that has controlled the management of the railroads of the country, both east and west, has been a policy that has tended to the benefit of shippers of freight [illegible] And those shippers [illegible] farthest from the centres [illegible] received the greatest proportionate benefit from it. Any change [illegible] about by government [illegible] ment ownership would [illegible] seriously menace [illegible] New [illegible] dustries. There [illegible] freight carried 1000 [illegible] ten times as much [illegible] 100 miles. [illegible] rate to New England [illegible] nearly every [illegible] the State. There [illegible] business man in the State of Massachusetts who doesn't know [illegible] and who [illegible] over the [illegible] another [illegible] Mr. President [illegible] Boston & Maine [illegible] is the result of [illegible] different companies.

I wonder how many separate corporations are represented [illegible] lines leading from Boston [illegible] fields of the [illegible] of Kansas or Nebraska [illegible] the West and [illegible] separate [illegible] transportation from [illegible] West would have [illegible] mechanics of [illegible] westward nearer [illegible] tomers. It is possible [illegible] have been some communi[illegible] interest of the [illegible]

I am not a member of this executive committee. I was not consulted by any one in connection with this proposed exchange of stock, and I knew nothing [illegible] until the contract had actually been made. I confess that when I first heard of it [illegible] what of a shock [illegible] a strong sentiment [illegible] Boston & Maine [illegible] when I came to consider [illegible] advantages of such a consolidation I saw that under the same [illegible] policy that has governed the management of [illegible] in Massachusetts for the last seventy years, and because the [illegible] protected [illegible] I cannot see [illegible] but on the contrary [illegible] advantages. The [illegible] western part of the State of Massachusetts [illegible] New Hampshire [illegible] Maine, which [illegible] we are [illegible] freight [illegible] in Massachusetts [illegible] to the west of them. I regard it as of importance that [illegible] and western part of the State should be interested in the [illegible] of the districts located in the northern and eastern part.

I can conceive that it may become very important [illegible] of New England looking [illegible] possible combinations, that there [illegible] authorized to [illegible] transportation interests of New England [illegible] And I can well [illegible] operation of the [illegible] undertake the [illegible] transportation interests [illegible] to the whole of [illegible] understand how be[illegible] streams [illegible] into one com[illegible] both foreign and domestic com[illegible] by law I may be pro[illegible] My own small experience in con[illegible] transportation matters is in [illegible] with the views that I have ex[illegible] with this consolida[illegible] consolidation it would [illegible] for the West End [illegible] to have intro[illegible] I would [illegible] carried the people [illegible] for the fare [illegible] after the consolidation [illegible] of the two or three or four miles [illegible] carried previous to the con[illegible] that I say has been the result [illegible] of every consolidation [illegible] in the State of Massachusetts [illegible] the last seventy years. And if we can safely be guided by the light of experience, there is no reason for distrusting the effect of this proposed consolidation upon the interests of the people of the State of Massachusetts. I speak in this matter wholly as a citizen of Massachusetts.

I [illegible] that I had no part or lot in [illegible] the exchange of [illegible] had I been consulted about it, I [illegible] the parties in interest [illegible] more open manner. I [illegible] tactical mistake not to [illegible] But the real question is after all, whether this consolidation is or is not for the benefit of the people. I believe that the consensus of opinion on the part of the business men generally throughout the State would be well-nigh unanimous in its favor. I speak simply as a citizen of Massachusetts. I am sorry to say that the stock of the Boston & Maine railroad standing in my name on the books of the company was not my property, but the property of the American Express Company, and the certificates were in their possession and not in mine. I haven't exchanged a share of stock or made any agreement to deposit one. I am therefore as free from the bias of personal interest in connection with this matter as His Excellency. I am told that it is considered good policy on the part of some people to try to make this a dominant issue in the coming campaign, with a view of distracting the public attention from the questions of reciprocity and tariff revision.

It is proposed by some to treat this most important question vitally affecting the interests of every workingman in the State as a political football. It is whispered that since the people are showing a lively interest in the subject of the extension of their trade relations by means of reciprocity and tariff revision, this question of the merger can be worked with good effect to divide the leaders of reciprocity and tariff revision. Well, it may be that this bogey, like the bogey of the Dingley tariff, may deceive and scare the people of the State of Massachusetts, but I do not believe it will. You can fool all of the people some of the time, you can fool some of the people all of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time. As for myself, I propose [illegible] never shall [illegible] of my opinion that I [illegible] question, [illegible] very sorry [illegible] of my own connection with the matter, the righteous cause of reciprocity and tariff revision turned down at the present time. I hope [illegible] support of the people that are [illegible] as well also as the people of the whole State of Massachusetts. If anything is to be accomplished it can only be accomplished by a mandate of the people [illegible], and I devoutly hope that the people will be heard on this question in an unmistakable terms when the time comes that they may express themselves at the polls on this matter.

WHITNEY OPENS IN "THE BROTHER" ACT WITH SPEAKER COLE

Henry M. Whitney, who wants the Democratic nomination for Governor, and John N. Cole, Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, who has spoken for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor for next year, will do a brother act at Melrose to-morrow night.

They will be the star performers at the [illegible] banquet of the Melrose High School [illegible]. It is possible that [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] Boston & Maine into the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Whitney [illegible] it would be [illegible] and [illegible] Cole explaining [illegible] bill, which [illegible] Turtle, says is a good thing because it "holds things just as they are for a while."

Rally After Banquet.

Whitney's trip to Melrose has another interesting feature [illegible] Mayor [illegible] will preside [illegible] to be the [illegible] of that gallant [illegible] of the Democracy, General Charles W. Bartlett. It is explained that Mr. Bartlett is only appearing at the Whitney performance as a matter of courtesy.

It promises to be a very strenuous week for the [illegible] of asbestos-lined aspirant for the [illegible] nomination for governor. On W[illegible] he will beam on Salem [illegible] John [illegible] speaking will be [illegible] and [illegible] will be served at 6 in the Essex House.

Reciprocity and Monopoly.

Thursday evening Whitney will speak on reciprocity at Cambridge in Cypress Hall, No. 40 Prospect street. Senator Fred J. MacLeod will preside and John H. Corcoran is chairman of the reception committee. Hon. Charles S. Hamlin and Sullivan will be the other speakers, and, if Eugene N. Foss does not go to New York on that day, he will step to the front of the stage and say a few words for the cause of reciprocity and railroad monopoly.

The last booking for the week is at Clinton, Friday night. At 6.30 there will be a dinner at the Clinton House and at 8 o'clock Whitney will appear on the town hall platform. The other speakers will be local talent, William H. Deitzman and John F. O'Brien.

Josiah Quincy will be laid off next week in order to give John A. Sullivan, his old pal of the "mystic seven" of last year, the bunch that tried so hard and failed so dismally to wreck Moran's run for the nomination—a chance to be heard.

MERGER BILL SATISFIES REPUBLICANS, SAYS LODGE

United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge says that so far as he can see the Cole anti-merger bill is satisfactory to the Republican party, but he says he has not examined the bill thoroughly as yet, and hopes to do so the first of next week when he arrives at Nahant.

Senator Lodge was at the Hotel Touraine yesterday.

"Have you anything to say on the merger bill?" asked the reporter.

Satisfies the Party.

"I really had rather be excused from discussing that measure," said the Senator. "I have not examined the bill thoroughly and do not feel that I am conversant enough with it to talk for publication. I will say, however, that from what I know of the present bill it will probably be satisfactory to the Republican party of the State, as they are the party responsible for whatever legislation is passed. I shall be satisfied with it if they are."

"Have you had any conference with President Mellen in relation to the matter?"

"No? I have not seen President Mellen for some time, in fact, not since Speaker Cole introduced the bill."

"Do you think that a merger of the Boston and Maine and the New York, New Haven and Hartford would be of a benefit to Boston?"

"I don't care to be interviewed on that point. Boston is a city for whose welfare I am looking out and I am in hopes that if the merger is passed and the two lines shall become as one that the interests of Boston will be preserved to the greatest extent."

"What do you think of the Republican Presidential candidates?"

Will Stand by Party Nominee.

"I am not going to tell you what I think of the Presidential race, as I do not wish to be quoted upon the subject. Many good men have been mentioned, and they are all personal friends of mine. Of course I should favor nominating a man from the eastern part of the United States if possible, but you may rest assured that from whatever section of the United States he comes, the Republicans of Massachusetts, as a unit, will stand behind him."

Senator Lodge is being besieged at the Touraine by members of both factions on the merger question, but he has not changed his position since the first inception of the matter, and says that he will not.

TELEGRAPHERS ASK AID OF GOVERNOR

California Chief Executive May Take a Hand in Settling Operators' Strike.

San Francisco, June 22.—There is talk to-night that Governor Gillett will take a hand in the telegraphers' strike. It is known that he has been approached by President Small with a request for an arbitration conference with officials of the Western Union and Postal.

President Small gave out a statement to-night, in which he says in part:

"The statement of telegraph officials that they are waiting at any time to treat with their employes is [illegible]. Of course for the [illegible] ing matter and for the purpose of [illegible] ing up the weak position the companies occupy in this controversy [illegible] pickets.

Want but Living Wages.

"We are not fighting for recognition of our union by the Western Union. They have already recognized us. The reasons for calling the strike of all commercial telegraphers in this city and Oakland is because they have been compelled to work for a salary that will only pay living expenses when strictest economy is practised, and the operator works four, five and even ten hours a day overtime to earn enough to meet these expenses.

"We dare the Western Union and Postal companies to offer to arbitrate. We challenge them to issue a statement, one that the public can hold them to, to the effect that they will pay their telegraphers an advance of 25 per cent in San Francisco, Oakland and vicinity pending the restoration of normal living conditions; the company officials and representatives of their employes actually in their employ, to decide when normal conditions have been restored.

Strikers Claim They Gain.

"Such a declaration on the part of the companies, made in sincerity, would result in an immediate return to work of all the telegraphers on strike in San Francisco."

The following statement was issued late to-night by the press committee at the headquarters of the operators:

"Four division Western Union chiefs joined the strike to-day. The Postal operating force consists of General Superintendent Storer, Assistant General Superintendent Rose, Superintendent Hearn, Electrician Shaw, Traffic Chief Swain and Operator Neal Harrison. The Western Union have about half a dozen, including officials, working at the key. We are gaining recruits every day."

TELEGRAPH COMPANY HOPELESSLY TIED UP WITH MESSAGES

Chicago, June 22.—Dispatches received at a late hour from President Small of the Telegraphers' Union assert that the Western Union Company is hopelessly overwhelmed with accumulated business.

The following situations in the transmission of messages is reported:

"San Francisco and Oakland, 2,000 unsent messages; Los Angeles, 300 messages; Portland 400 messages; Seattle, 1,200 messages; Helena, Mont., 300 messages; Spokane, 400 messages; Salt Lake, 400 messages."

DIRECT OCEAN LINE, BOSTON TO HAMBURG

A direct passenger service between Boston and Hamburg is to be established by the Hamburg American Line within a few months.

This disclosure, which means that there will be an increase of from 25 to 35 per cent in the volume of immigration coming to this port, was made yesterday upon the arrival in Boston of the Hamburg American liner Bosnia.

Officers of that steamer said that all arrangements had been made by the company for the establishment of a passenger service, in which four ships of the Hamburg American line will be used, beginning before January next.

These vessels are the Pennsylvania, which will carry only steerage passengers, and the Graf Waldersee, the Pretoria and the Ibera, each of which will carry first, second and third class passengers.

SEND WIFE TO JOIN HUSBAND IN JAIL

Mrs. Edith Ball, one of the handsomest women that has ever appeared in the Municipal Court in this city, was sent to jail by Judge Burke in the Municipal Criminal Court yesterday in default of $1,200 bail.

She with her husband Arthur Le Roy Ball, who was locked up in the Charles street jail earlier in the week, is charged with having secured an automobile in Rochester, N. Y., under false pretenses. Her husband is charged with having given a worthless check for the machine.

Helen Ball, the pretty seven-year-old child of the prisoners, has been placed in the custody of friends at the New Winthrop Hotel in Winthrop. She thinks that her father is sick in New York and that her mother has gone there to care for him.

Two detectives from Rochester came to Boston yesterday to arrange for the extradition of Ball and his wife. Mrs. Ball's case was continued yesterday to June [illegible].

Before her marriage she was Queenie Sothern and played in the San Toy opera company both here and in England.

MYSTERYIN BLAZE THAT RUINS HOUSE

Mystery attaches to the fire that last night partially destroyed the three-story frame dwelling at No. 7 Benner street, Malden.

The fire originated on the second floor which, with the third floor, is occupied by Frank Backman and his family. The first floor is occupied by Charles Streck and his family. The Backman's left home early for a day's outing. They had not returned at 9.30 last night when the Strecks smelled smoke and turned in an alarm.

Within a few minutes the building was blazing to the roof, and the flames were extinguished only after $1,000 damage had been done. The firemen could not explain the origin of the fire. The building belongs to the Prescy estate.

TROLLEY'S WEALTHY VICTIM JUST DIVORCED

The Newton police are investigating the cause of the death of Nana Platen of No. 59 Crafts street, Newtonville, who was struck by an electric car on Friday night and who died in the Newton Hospital early yesterday. Platen is said to have been wealthy and is now retired from business. Recently he was granted a divorce from his wife, who is said to be living now in Boston.

STEPFATHER HELD FOR GIRL'S DEATH

Officials Say They Can Convict Lewis of Slaying Little Mary Newlin.

West Chester, Pa., June 22.—Irwin Lewis is held in jail at Avondale, near here, for the murder of his five-year-old stepchild, Mary R. Newlin, and the prosecuting officials believe that they will convict him of one of the most atrocious crimes on record.

The girl mysteriously disappeared while returning to her home near Landenberg last Sunday, and the story was that she had been kidnapped by tramps and held for ransom. A vigorous search was instituted which ended on Friday by the discovery of the girl's body buried near the barn on the stepfather's farm. The child had been brutally slain. Drawn tight about her throat was a piece of tarred rope such as is used in binding wheat.

Unearth Child's Body.

Two months ago Lewis had dug two holes for refuse. One of these he had filled up with the refuse several weeks ago, but the other was left open until about the time of the disappearance of the girl.

District Attorney McElree had had Lewis under suspicion for several days and he finally ordered his men to dig up again the ground over the second hole. There the child's body was found. Lewis was told of the finding of the body and then and there charged with the crime. He turned pale and broke down, but declared that he was innocent.

He swore that he had not been near the farm on the day of the girl's disappearance, and his father, Harry Lewis, corroborated this by insisting that the son and the latter's wife had visited him that day. But to-day the son admitted that he had been over to his farm alone about 5 on Sunday afternoon about the time the girl was last seen.

The District Attorney suspects that young Lewis was not alone in the crime, and he is prepared to make more arrests.

Pass Baby's Funeral.

After a sleepless night, during which he wept and prayed incessantly, Lewis was taken from the jail to-day and driven by the District Attorney to the hole in his farmyard where the child's body was found.

As they neared the house they were met by a mournful little funeral procession bearing the child to her grave.

"Before God it was not me who killed her," he cried. "I didn't do it."

"This murder was deliberately planned," said the district attorney after he had taken Lewis back to Avondale jail. "But Irwin Lewis did not furnish the brains. There was another back of it. I have entered into a deep family mystery."

Slain and Buried.

"Death had been caused by strangulation, but it is possible there was still a spark of life in the child's body when she was thrown into the grave. The physician asserts, however, that the little girl must have been dead when cast into the grave."

Lewis's first account of that tragic Sunday was this: Saturday night his home had been robbed and the larder emptied. For this reason he and his wife, who lived in their pretty home near Landenberg and about two miles south of Avondale, spent Sunday with his father, Harry H. Lewis, who lived a quarter of a mile away across the fields.

Mary, who had spent the afternoon with her grandfather, John Newlin, was sent back home with a loaf of bread. The little girl went along the road toward her mother's home at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. There, Lewis declared, in his defence, she was attacked by tramps.

JUNK DEALER RUN DOWN BY TROLLEY

Morris Abohr, a junk collector residing on Laurel avenue, Melrose, was run down by a Boston & Northern electric at the corner of Swain's Pond avenue and Grove street yesterday afternoon. Abohr was taken to the Melrose Hospital, where it was learned that he had sustained a broken leg and was generally shaken up.

U. S. DISPENSATORY

Describes the Principal Ingredients Contained in Pe-ru-na.

Are we claiming too much for Peruna when we claim it to be an effective remedy for chronic catarrh? Have we abundant proof that Peruna is in reality such a catarrh remedy? Let us see what the United States Dispensatory says of the principal ingredients of Peruna.

Take, for instance, the ingredient hydrastis canadensis, or golden seal. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, corydalis formosa, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic. So also is cubebs classed as a stomachic and as a tonic for the mucous membranes.

Cedron seeds is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. The seeds are to be found in very few drug stores. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a substitute for quinine.

Oil of copaiba, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensatory as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes. Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys.

Send to us for a free book of testimonials of what the people think of Peruna as a catarrh remedy. The best evidence is the testimony of those who have tried it.

WRECK OF FLYER BARELY AVERTED

Engineer's Discovery Saves 600 Express Passengers From Injury.

Discovery in the nick of time that a connecting rod was broken on the huge Baldwin compound locomotive selected to haul the midnight express on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at the South Station last night delayed the long train of eleven cars nearly an hour, but probably saved many of the six hundred passengers from death or injury.

Just as the train was starting for New York a connecting rod broke off [illegible] where the [illegible] the [illegible] wheel. At the point where the bar gave away the [illegible] the mass [illegible] piece of steel [illegible] opposite drive [illegible].

Had the [illegible] train [illegible] it is probable that the steel [illegible] would have thrown the locomotive from the track, dragging its long train of wooden passenger coaches after it. The locomotive was hauled to the repair shops and a new one secured to take out the train.

The train had started to leave the station when the bar suddenly snapped, gave way and dropped to the track. The engineer at once applied the emergency brakes and brought the train almost instantly to a stop.

A [illegible] investigation disclosed the startling discovery that the connecting rod had been cracked some time before and that the dirt and dust had so filled it as to hide the fracture. How the locomotive could [illegible] come to disaster while running at top speed is a mystery.

None of the passengers in the train knew anything [illegible] the train had been [illegible] they were all in their berths [illegible] at the time. The Midnight for New York is one of the most popular trains on the New Haven road and it is always well patronized. There were seven sleepers attached to the locomotive and four baggage and mail cars.

VANITY FAIR MECCA TO MANY THOUSANDS

Providence, June 22.—The one thing needed to insure the complete success, and incidentally an extraordinary attendance for Vanity Fair, the mammoth Summer amusement resort on the Providence River, was hot weather. That has come and all last week the clear skies and the heat brought thousands daily to the new amusement Mecca where, with Knabenshue and his airship as one of the crowning sensations, the business was record breaking.

Vanity Fair, in the light of present experience, with an average daily attendance of from 10,000 to 30,000 people, with automobiles crowding the garage every afternoon and evening and with the hundred and one attractions fringing the board walk, playing to capacity, is no longer an experiment. It's popularity is assured. All day yesterday the crowds of sightseers stormed the gates of pleasure's new Eldorado, the Sunday American coupon serving as a talisman for thousands [illegible] and those favored ones came not [illegible] from Providence but from Pawtucket, the Attleboros, Worcester, Fall River and a still wider field embraced in the American's New England circulation.

Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon has come to Boston to attend commencement. He will go to New London to see the boat races. Three of his sons are members of crews that will row.

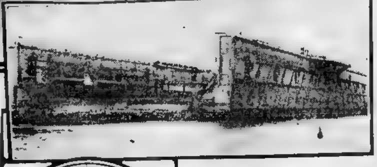
THRILLING SCENE AS HUGE DRY DOCK BURNS



Upper picture shows eager crowds at Point of Pines watching the flames as they were shooting up for hundreds of feet in the air. In the lower photograph is seen the dry dock as it appeared before the fire destroyed it last night. In the medallion is shown Miss Nora Butters, daughter of the man who bought the enormous structure for the copper, iron and lumber it contained. She was to set off the fire according to the original programme. Photographs taken last night by Boston American staff photographer.

THOUSANDS WATCH $1,000,000 FIRE

Dry Dock Built by Government 56 Years Ago Set Afire at Point of Pines.

With a mighty roar and an explosion that sent great showers of sparks and part of the heavy framework of logs high in the air, a million-dollar dry dock, which the government built fifty-six years ago at Portsmouth, N. H., and had sold to Samuel Butters as old junk, burst into flames at 7.45 o'clock last evening just to give thousands of people the thrill of their lives.

The match was to have been applied by Mr. Butters' daughter, Dora, at 9 o'clock, but E. A. Shea, a workman, accompanied by William Townsend and John O'Brien, dropped a match and in a trice the huge bonfire was on, and the men, racing for their lives, dropped into the boats alongside.

More than ten thousand people, perched on every vantage spot at Point of Pines, on the long board walk, in all sorts of boats, on the beaches and on available barges, saw the million-dollar bonfire blaze up like the eruption of a floating volcano.

As the flames mantled and fed upon the kerosene and powder-soaked drydock, they leaped higher and higher into the air and a huge cloud of smoke began to hang over the majestic scene. The flames, at times, lit the whole North Shore for many miles in every direction.

When the flames first started to consume the million-dollar structure the wind was blowing from the East. In a short time the wind veered around and began to blow from the West and a panic, or a near panic, was caused among thousands of people, who were driven back from the water's edge by the blinding heat and smoke. Pell mell they rushed and they tarried not in the order of their flight. It was each one for himself. Away scurried the crowd until they had placed a safer distance between themselves and the [illegible] avalanche [illegible].

Buildings Are in Danger.

A new danger appeared soon this time to a half dozen buildings used as work shops and storage houses. The flames were driven directly toward the houses. A scurry for lines of hose was made and the fifteen or more Revere firemen at hand were pressed into service soaking the frame structures to prevent their igniting and furnishing the crowd with more bonfires than they had paid to see.

Fortunately the wind was not strong or the hose and tiny streams of water would not have saved the buildings for Mr. Butters.

The estimated cost of the drydock when it was built is $1,000,000. It was built in 1851, and weighed 12,000 tons. It was 350 feet long and 107 feet in width. The superstructure mounted thirty to forty-five feet above the water. It is thought that the flames will be at least a week in consuming the dock unless a storm should extinguish the smoldering embers.

Butters says that the dock proved a good investment when he bought it for the old iron it contained. The copper sheathing was removed netting him 140 tons of the metal, which at its present price of twenty-two cents a pound, will net a tidy sum. There were, besides, 152 tons of iron and a million feet of lumber, mostly hard pine. The dock was towed to Point of Pines this Spring. The houses along the beach which were threatened by the fire had been built from lumber taken from the structure.

"LET STABBER GO," SAYS BOY'S FATHER

Medfield, June 22.—Declaring that his son, Calvert O. Freeman, was not seriously hurt when he was stabbed by Instructor Travers J. Edwards of Cheshire (Ct.) Academy, Daniel A. Freeman of Elm street tonight declared that the whole affair had been exaggerated and that so far as he was concerned nothing more would come of it, and that he will not prosecute the instructor.

"My boy will be brought home," said Mr. Freeman, "although I cannot say just when. He is not badly hurt. It is not serious. Too much has been made of this thing. I do not propose to do anything at all in the matter. I will allow it to blow over."

Despite this, in Cheshire, the stabbing of young Freeman is regarded as being one of the results of bitter feeling over [illegible] discords in the board of trustees. It is understood that Principal J. W. Harrison, who left for New York yesterday, went there to attend a meeting of the trustees.

The greatest secrecy is being maintained in the matter. Residents of Cheshire have said that ever since Headmaster Medford resigned last Spring discipline has declined in the school. [illegible] of the clerical members of the board of Trustees, including Bishops Brewster of Connecticut and Lines of Newark, N. J., resigned at the same time.

Instructor Edwards has left Cheshire, and probably has gone to New York. He said: "I do not know much about that affair. I certainly didn't intend to hurt any one. I thought that my time had come when those boys tumbled me down a steep bank and began to beat me."

WOMAN FIGURES IN MAINE MYSTERY

Officers Find Letter in Shanty of the Prisoner Held as Murder Suspect.

Norway, Me., June 22.—The name of a woman was to-day brought into the powder mill tragedy in connection with which Wallace Everett is locked up in jail here. Everett's shanty at the Brown mine on Paris Hill, near which Edward Ratcliff was killed June 13, was thoroughly searched to-day.

Letters addressed to Ratcliff, and said to have been written to him by a young woman who lives in this town, were found [illegible]. There was also found a [illegible] of one of the Maine newspapers [illegible] the story of the Robbins [illegible] case [illegible] Steven Mills.

[illegible] prisoner to-day [illegible] the death of Ratcliff was [illegible]. Both were in tears as they [illegible]. Everett still maintains that he is innocent.

It was said to-day that Everett had been particularly attentive to Ratcliff's sister. [illegible] is said to have caused trouble between the two men. It is said that Ratcliff did [illegible] think Everett suitable company for his sister.

BIG LOWELL CHURCH SWEPT AWAY BY FIRE

$100,000 Blaze in Heart of City Destroys Three Buildings; Four Firemen Hurt.

Lowell, June 22.—St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, which was destroyed in the $100,000 fire which visited Lowell today in which four firemen were hurt, several women overcome by smoke and several firemen had close calls for their lives, is to be rebuilt and be more beautiful than ever. This was decided by the trustees this afternoon.

The fire besides destroying the church, gutted D. A. Peabody's livery stable and the Rollaway building, in which Bunker & Hennessey conducted a bowling alley at Hurd and Water streets. The losses are partly covered by insurance.

The loss on St. Paul's Methodist Church is [illegible] $[illegible],000. The insurance was about $20,000. On the Rollaway building, of which Henry J. O'Dowd is the proprietor, the loss will be more than $15,000, while Bunker & Hennessey, the occupants of the building, will lose over $15,000.

D'ABRUZZI'S CREW ANDERSON GUESTS

While the Duke D'Abruzzi was being entertained last night at Hamilton by Postmaster General and Mrs. Von L. Meyer the officers and men of his flagship Varese were enjoying American hospitality at the Sailors' Haven, No. 48 Water street, Charlestown. It was a royal good time, the men of the Italian ship enjoyed with music and magic and fun and feasting, and the heartiest of welcomes from the minute they approached the Haven through long lines of fellow countrymen to the time of their return aboard ship.

The Haven, which is in the Italian quarter, was brilliantly illuminated in honor of the occasion and the uniforms of the men added to the gaiety of the scene.

GATES, M'CARREN HELD FOR SPEEDING

New York, June 22.—John W. Gates and Patrick H. McCarren were held up for speeding in an automobile to-day on Ocean Parkway at Great Neck road by a squad of bicycle policemen. Gates was No. 1. His chauffeur was going over the road at the rate of thirty-two miles an hour. He was in a hurry to get to the race track in order to be on time to make the killing he did on "Boots [illegible]."

As soon as Gates was held up he tossed a $1,000 bill to his chauffeur and hurried to the race track himself. His chauffeur gave his name as Frank Nyles of No. 153 West Fifty-seventh street.

A minute later Senator McCarren and former Senator Reynolds, anxious to get to the track in time to back Frank Farrell's colt that ran badly, were held up. They followed the example of Gates, gave the chauffeur money for bail and hurried to the track.

Electric artists and decorators have made the grounds a veritable fairyland, and the numerous pretty colored booths and electric lights add much to the beauty of the scene.

The booths will be in charge of pretty girls connected with St. Peter's Parish. Sports for the children will be held in the afternoon. Band concerts will take place both afternoon and evening.

FIRE WAGON HITS CAR; THREE DYING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 22.—Dashing through Dean street to a fire late to-night the truck of Salvage Corps No. 1 of the Brooklyn Fire Department was struck head-on by a Smith street trolley car speeding New Yorkward thirty miles an hour with a crowd from Coney Island.

At least three of the passengers and firemen are dying of their injuries in the Long Island College Hospital and twenty more were carried there seriously hurt.

ABRUZZI'S JACKIES ANNOYED BY BOYS

A squad of French sailors from the cruiser Chasseloup-Loubat and four men from the Duke of Abruzzi's flagship Varese met in Thompson square, Charlestown, late last night and began to swap stories of the sea. The foreign uniforms and strange tongues excited the boys and young men of the neighborhood, whose comments became more and more [illegible]. The sailors moved on, followed by the increasing crowd until there were [illegible] or four hundred noisy young sters in the wake of the excited foreigners. Petty officers from both ships [illegible] of growing war clouds [illegible], and ordered them to refrain from violence. Finally the police arrived and drove off the boys, to the great relief of the jackies.

HOTEL MEN DEMAND GARBAGE HEARING

The proprietors and managers of Boston hotels and restaurants are in a clash with the city officials because the right they have enjoyed for years of disposing of their garbage has been taken from them and the collecting is done by the city teams.

At a rousing meeting at Hotel Touraine yesterday the action of the city officials was vigorously denounced and a petition signed by all present, addressed to Sanitary Superintendent Daniel H. Gillespie, asking for a public hearing. The hotel men declare that if they do not get satisfaction from Superintendent Gillespie they will take the matter to the Mayor and go into court, if necessary.

HEARST COUNSEL TO ASK QUICK RECOUNT

New York, June 22.—Counsel for William Randolph Hearst will file their applications in the Supreme Court within the next few days for a recount of all the ballots cast for mayor in the city election in November, 1905.

Although they have until July 10 to file these applications they have been hard at work for two weeks, preparing to get the preliminary work done in order to appeal to the courts as quickly as possible.

They will first ask for the opening of the boxes in New York county. This step will be followed immediately with similar applications to the Supreme Court in Kings, Queens and Richmond counties for the opening of all of the boxes in those counties. Clarence J. Shearn, of counsel for Mr. Hearst, is contemplating his preparations for the application.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUERS TO HOLD BIG CONFERENCE

New York Men Prepare for Big Meeting—Movement Is Sweeping the Country.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 22.—It was announced at the Independence League headquarters this afternoon that a national conference for the purpose of extending the organization of the Independence League would be held in New York city this fall, probably in September. It is expected that representatives of all the States will be present.

Indications, it was stated at the league headquarters, show that the Independence sentiment is very strong throughout the country.

Charles A. Walsh, formerly Democratic National Committeeman from Iowa, who for eight years was secretary of the National Committee, and in large part conducted the national campaigns of 1896 and 1900, was a caller at the Gilsey House yesterday.

It will be recalled that Mr. Walsh, several months ago, resigned his membership in the Democratic National Committee in a letter which attracted much attention. Mr. Walsh left the Democratic National Committee, as explained in this letter, because he could see no hope for the Democratic party while controlled in its machinery by the predatory corporations.

Money Controls Democrats.

He did not see how it was possible to shake off this incubus. He called attention to the fact that the management of the party is in the hands of men never commissioned by any body of Democrats. He referred to the executive committee, composed of seven members, all of whom, with possibly one exception, were corporationists, four of the seven being not even members of the National Committee.

Mr. Walsh pointed out in this letter that in violation of all Democratic precedents, this executive committee had been made up with a majority of members not members of the National Committee, and solely selected to put the control of the party in the hands of a coterie of privileged and franchise grabbing capitalists.

Corporation Men on Committee.

The executive committee that Mr. Walsh complained of is headed by William F. Sheehan (not a member of the National Committee), August Belmont (not a member of the National Committee), both of New York city; James Smith of New Jersey (not a member of the National Committee), who for years has served the public service corporations of New Jersey and adjacent States; Senator Martin of Virginia, a former Chesapeake & Ohio attorney (not a member of the National Committee); James Guffey of Pennsylvania, Standard Oil representative; John R. McLean of Washington, D. C., and Timothy Ryan of Waukesha, Wis.

Mr. Walsh said to-day that his business during the last three months had called him to the various States in the South and West, and he was amazed at the extent of the independent sentiment among the people of the States he visited.

"I found that there was in all quarters a demand that the Independence League of New York should extend the organization throughout the United States," said Mr. Walsh. "The victories achieved by the League during the past two years in New York city and State have created a profound impression. The voters see that the League has exerted a tremendous moral force.

People Believe in Hearst.

"The people with whom I came in contact were as much impressed by the effect that the League's doctrines have had upon other parties. I find that a Roosevelt declaration, or a Hughes declaration, for a William Randolph Hearst or League proposition has served to advertise the particular principle involved, while it has not at all convinced the dissatisfied members of the old parties that the machinery of these parties intends to permanently stand behind this principle.

"The people of the country realize that it was Mr. Hearst who blazed the way in all the sound reforms that are being discussed; they realize that it was Mr. Hearst's fight on the Coal Trust, the Beef Trust, the Ice Trust, the Sugar Trust and numerous other trusts, that has compelled Federal action. It was the evidence secured by Mr. Hearst that brought the Coal Trust into court, that secured an injunction against the Beef Trust, that broke up the Ice Trust, that punished criminal conspirators of the Sugar Trust, and it was evidence he secured that brought about the Federal action against the unlawful discrimination of railroads through rebate giving.

"The people do not forget that it was a Hearst bill that was the basis of the present railroad regulation law, although many of the good features of the Hearst bill were eliminated."

Livermore Falls, Me., June 22.—Workmen while shoveling sand in a field back of an old foundry here unearthed a large wooden box containing bones, believed to be those of a human being. The cover of the box was securely fastened. No one has offered any explanation of the mystery, which is now being investigated by the police.

CATHOLICS HOLD BIG GARDEN PARTY

Thousands Attend Reunion of St. Lawrence Church in Brookline.

Several thousand parishioners and friends crowded the parish grounds of St. Lawrence's Roman Catholic Church, Chestnut Hill, Brookline, yesterday in attendance at the annual garden party and reunion of the church.

In view of the exceptionally fair weather and the interest taken in the party by the church members the affair was the most successful ever held. Attractions of many kinds were offered for the delectation of those present. Dancing was enjoyed during the afternoon and evening and all the other features of such a fete, as gayly decorated tables and amusement booths of all descriptions, were there.

The tables were in charge of Mrs. M. McGreall, Mrs. B. Dwyer, Mrs. M. Monahan, Boylston street district, Mrs. Frank Haney, Mrs. P. J. PEOPLE SHOT DOWN IN LISBON UPRISING

Government by Decree Arouses Popular Anger and Serious Revolt Is Expected.

Paris, June 22.—Dispatches from Lisbon report violent outbreaks and rioting in which numbers of people have been killed by the soldiers. The strict censorship of news by the authorities makes it difficult to secure details, but indications that Portugal is on the eve of a serious revolt are multiplying.

The city to-day is draped with mourning for the dead victims of the street fights of the week, and a sullen undertone of anger and defiance in the bearing and conversation of the citizens keeps the authorities on the alert for a further demonstration.

Government by Decree.

The cause of the trouble is due to the act of Prime Minister Franco, who, after the dismissal of the Parliament early in May, instituted a government by decree, the King sanctioning the measure.

The following account is given of the latest outbreak.

The Premier, who is now universally styled dictator, made a journey to Oporto in the hope of securing a popular indorsement of his policy. At every station between Lisbon and Oporto crowds hooted and hissed as his train passed. At one point shots were fired.

At Oporto Senhor Franco was bowled down when he tried to speak. The police and troops protecting him had to charge the mob and use their weapons. Scores were wounded and several were killed. Hundreds were arrested.

Women Add Voters.

When Senhor Franco was returning to Lisbon at night there was a furious riot outside the railway station in that city. The cavalry charged the mob and the infantry fired into it. The officers' commands were drowned in cries of "Death to the Dictator."

Women with their aprons filled with stones supplied missiles to the men and urged them on. Flagstones were torn from the pavement and furiously hurled against the troops. At one moment the mob clamored "To the palace!" desisting only because they remembered that the royal family were at Cintra. Republican leaders harangued the people to revolt. Barricades were formed. Cafes were invaded, the people breaking up their furniture for extempore fortifications. The principal cafe in Lisbon was completely destroyed.

$60,000 IS RAISED FOR OLD HOME WEEK

Societies Prepare to Give a Cordial Welcome to All Home Comers.

Sixty thousand dollars has already been raised for the Boston Old Home celebration during the week of July 28 to August 3. The mark of $100,000 originally set as the amount to be raised has now been lowered, and Mayor Fitzgerald and Director Thomas F. Anderson of the Committee of One Thousand figure that $15,000 more will be all the money necessary to carry out the plans.

With $75,000 to expend the committee believes that the celebration will be the greatest that Boston has ever witnessed. Besides this amount, the citizens of Dorchester, East Boston and West Roxbury have raised money for their own celebrations, and Alderman William H. Woods expects to get a special appropriation from the City Council for the celebration of Brighton Day, August 3. Alderman Woods himself will donate $500 for this celebration.

Plan One More Sign.

Besides the big electrical sign of welcome on the front of City Hall, which was put in commission Friday evening, Chairman John Campbell of the illumination committee is planning for a big gas light arch at the entrance to the Public Gardens.

The home comers will receive a hearty welcome in Symphony Hall, Tuesday, July 30. Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will probably preside and speeches will be made by Governor Guild and Mayor Fitzgerald.

The Fairbanks Family Association, which is to have its reunion here during Old Home week, will have headquarters at the Berkeley Temple, and on Saturday evening, July 28, Hon. J. Wilder Fairbanks will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Memories of the past Boston and the Old Homestead."

Open House Will Be the Rule.

The Grand Lodge of Good Templars will give a reception and entertainment on Wednesday evening, July 31, and open house will be kept through the week for the benefit of present and former members.

The big reunion of the veteran baseball players and "fans," in charge of a special committee headed by "Tim" Murnane, probably will take place at the American League grounds, Thursday, August 1. An outing down the harbor is also planned.

Roxbury council, Knights of Columbus, has appointed an Old Home Week committee and will keep open house.

The barbers have voted to have a special observance on Wednesday, July 31, and [illegible] the barber shops of the city probably will be closed on the afternoon of that day.

Dorah Sampson chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will entertain at headquarters in the Pierce building, Copley square, on Thursday of Old Home week.

The offical banquet to the Mayors of New England and Canadian cities and other distinguished guests will be held on Wednesday evening, July 31, at either the Algonquin Club or the Hotel Somerset. Mayor Fitzgerald and Director Anderson are in charge of this feature.

Post Cards Held Up.

One million and fifty thousand of the "Beanpot" and "Faneuil Hall" Old Home Week stickers have been distributed by the committee, and most of them are by this time spread broadcast throughout the country, nearly every merchant in the city using them on his correspondence.

Five thousand bright red Boston Old Home week souvenir postal cards, which the Old Home Week committee had printed, will have to be thrown away. Instead of the words "post card," which the Government prescribes shall be the designation on such cards, the Old Home Week committee inadvertently used the words "postal card," which is the Government's own trade mark for the regulation cards. The fact that the Old Home Week card was an infringement was discovered in the Boston post office when the first lot came into the mail. They were held up. The Old Home Week committee is not issuing any more until a decision is received from the postal authorities at Washington as to whether or not they will be allowed to dispose of the 5,000 printed.

A public meeting will be held in Dorchester some evening this week to promote interest in the local celebration for that section.

The keynote of the celebration will be the effective design emblematic of the three hills of old "Trimount," as far as the outdoor phase of the observance is concerned.

UNCLE SAM OBJECTS TO THESE

Old Home Week advertising scheme fails through printing of the words "Postal Card" instead of "Post Card" as required by the Post-office authorities.

HELD FOR GIRL'S DEATH BY AUTO

Charged with causing the death of twelve-year-old Annie Fupiano, Herbert R. Huntley, twenty-three years old of Swampscott, whose auto touring car knocked down and crushed the little girl on Ocean avenue, Revere, Friday, waived the reading of the charge in Chelsea Police Court yesterday, pleaded not guilty and was held in $300 bonds for a hearing on July 10. Huntley furnished bail.

NOT PAUL'S FAULT.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, June 22.—A stranger giving his name as Thomas Blankfor, and found wandering in Boker's Creek Township, has been jailed here for safe keeping. He believes he is the spirit of the Apostle Paul. He carried a shoe box full of tracts.

SCHMITZ, IN CELL, VETOES BUDGET

San Francisco, June 22.—From his cell in the county jail Mayor Schmitz returned to the Board of Supervisors last evening the municipal budget and a message vetoing the appropriation of $720,000 for the reconstruction of the Geary Street Railroad.

Acting Mayor Gallagher says that Schmitz's right to pass upon the budget is not questioned by the board.

The first actual clash between Chief of Police Dinan and Acting Mayor Gallagher came yesterday, when Dinan refused to recognize Gallagher's signature as that of the Mayor of San Francisco. The application of Schmitz for a writ of habeas corpus and bail is under advisement by the judges of the Appellate Court.

In the party were Mr. Allen, David T. Hanner of Beverly, C. F. Byers of Salem, W. H. Pratt of Worcester, C. H. McAllister of Malden, M. F. Flood of Taunton, F. W. Bellew of Woburn, H. W. Talks on Teeth

By G. GORDON MARTIN,
(INCORPORATED.)

ABOUT "FALSE" TEETH

"False Teeth," so-called, are better than no teeth at all, but that is about all that can be said for them.

A great many people are wearing partial plates in lieu of anything better who could do without these plates entirely and have all the teeth placed in their jaws by our Alveolar method, if they but knew about it.

And the purpose of these talks is to tell them about this—the most remarkable of all the discoveries in the science of dentistry.

If we can excite their curiosity up to the point where they will come to one of our offices (see addresses below) for proofs, the rest will be easy. (Consultation and examination of teeth absolutely free.)

A plate is an abomination, and no man or woman would wear one for a moment if they knew of a substitute.

But the average dentist can't suggest anything different.

THERE IS ONLY ONE ALVEOLAR METHOD OF SUPPLYING MISSING TEETH, AND WE OWN THE RIGHTS TO USE IT.

All we ask is that there be two or more teeth in either jaw—tight or loose ones. If they are loose we will tighten them—another process known only to us. That dreaded disease, Pyorrhea—commonly known as "Riggs disease," which causes teeth to become loose, has no terrors for us. We cure it.

Did you ever hear of another dentist who would guarantee to cure it? We never have.

The Alveolar Method is entirely different from anything ever thought of before in dental practice.

By it thousands of patients of ours have had full sets of artificial teeth, upper and lower, placed in their jaws without plates, which look, feel and are practically NATURAL teeth. They will testify that the method we use is practical and a godsend to a plate victim.

Make your own investigation of this Alveolar Method—don't say it cannot be true.

Every step that science has undertaken has been blocked by the scoffers. But "The World Do Move."

Dental science has advanced slowly, more's the pity, for in no other branch has there been greater need of advancement.

Men eat that they may live, but they can't eat without the proper tools.

If you wear a plate and are tired of the miserable thing and have a few teeth left, WE ARE AT YOUR SERVICE.

"Try us and be convinced" is a well-worn saying, but it fits this case exactly.

Dr. Martin has published a book entitled ALVEOLAR DENTISTRY. It is worth reading by anybody, but to one who has teeth trouble it is invaluable.

If you cannot come to the offices send for this book, which is free to you.

The reading of it has brought us patients from the four corners of this continent.

Write today.

Holds the Baby for a Stranger; Waits Long for Her Return

While Daniel O'Connell of No. 39 Park street, Malden, was standing at the corner of Blackstone and Hanover streets about eight o'clock last night a well dressed, middle aged woman stepped up and asked if he would hold her little nine-months baby girl while she went around the corner to partake of refreshments with friends.

Daniel took the sleeping baby in his arms remarking at the same time, "That's a fine baby."

Daniel waited. He waited long. One hour passed, then another before Daniel got tired of his job and began to look for the woman. After a vain half-hour's search, Daniel finally brought the baby around to Station No. 1 and told his story to Lieutenant Carl, who in turn notified the Chardon Street Home. Daniel waited to see the child safe in other hands.

Just as the child was to be taken from the station house the mother came rushing in and made a desperate leap at O'Connell. When she calmed down, she seized her child saying: "I'll know who I leave you with the next time."

The woman refused to tell her name, and insisted that O'Connell be arrested. Lieutenant Carl let her take the baby but did not arrest O'Connell.

WILL HARVARD SENIOR POET YET BE AMERICA'S LAUREATE?

Hermann Hagedorn, Jr., Class Day Revelation, Praised by All Critics.

If for no other reason, the class of 1907, Harvard, may some day be famous as giving to the United States a real and great American poet.

The Harvard Class Poem of '07 has already made a sensation.

Wherever men read its stirring measure it kindles a responsive chord in their hearts. Critics declare it the finest work of the kind in the history of college poetry; laymen simply recognize it as strangely beautiful and true—and Hermann Hagedorn, Jr., the scarce twenty-five-year-old poet, who awoke yesterday to find himself famous, must smile to himself as he recalls the line

"Poets are born, not made."

For Hermann Hagedorn, Jr., is a made poet, in the sense that he deliberately threw over all other considerations, all past ambitions with the sole idea of perfecting the talent that asserted itself in no unusual way in childhood, but steadily grew when given opportunity.

May Upset Tradition.

Hermann Hagedorn, Jr., if he becomes the great poet that men predict of him, will, in his life story, upset several traditions. He was not a prodigy and he is not poor. He did not develop unsuspected genius in rhyming while studying something else, but deliberately went to college to become a poet if it were in him, or a prose writer, or a teacher. Even now with scores of interesting verses to show the growth of his Muse and with the plaudits of cultured men ringing in his ears for a work of unusual virility and remarkable promise he is going to Germany, the land of his father, to study "teaching or literature, I am not yet decided which," he explained yesterday.

Business Too Prosaic.

Young Hagedorn after a high school training deliberately went into business, the dry good business, because he thought he would be a successful merchant. His father was a successful business man who learned the ins and outs of prosaic cotton, made a fortune and retired. The boy kept at the work for two years, then he announced that he had made a mistake. He had written some fiction that had been printed. He calmly announced that he was not a success at dry goods and would pursue his bent.

He secured a position on the staff of the Reader, a literary periodical then published in New York. He learned there practical criticism and applied the practice to himself. His prose gradually gave way to verse, to which he applied with all coolness the rules he had learned. He did not think it great verse, he thought it might be developed into good verse if he knew more of the development of poetry and studied its history and analysis.

And so he went to Harvard to develop himself as he might have gone there to become an engineer or a theologist. His record at college was brilliant. He graduates Wednesday with the highest honors. He holds the coveted position of editor-in-chief of the "Monthly" and is on the board of the "Advocate." But he is still coolly watching himself.

CONGRESSMAN OUT FOR BOYS' PLAYFIELD

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, in aid of the boys of the Savin Hill district of Dorchester in their campaign to secure an appropriation of $5,000 from the city government for improving their playground, last night addressed a letter to every Democratic member of the Board of Aldermen asking him to vote for the $5,000 loan at the meeting of the Board to-morrow afternoon. The order passed the Council and if it passes the Board the Mayor says he will sign it. Congressman O'Connell's letter is in short:

"The land for this playground was purchased eight years ago, during the administration of Mayor Quincy. Since that time practically nothing has been done to improve the land and so far as the original purchase goes, it might just as well have remained in the hands of the original property owners.

"To-day Dorchester provides no opportunity for boys to play baseball or to engage in other sports except on the few playgrounds situated in widely separated sections of the district. Savin Hill is the natural spot for a playground, and the land purchased eight years ago is admirably located inasmuch as it adjoins Savin Hill beach, where there is a public bath house.

"It is a great injustice to the boys of the Savin Hill section of Dorchester that they have no opportunity to enjoy the playground privileges."

RAISE FUNDS FOR CHARITY BY CIRCUS

Tickets are on sale for reserved seats in the main tent for the six performances at No. 200 Huntington avenue.

LILLIAN RUSSELL'S FIANCE UNDER KNIFE

New York, June 22.—Jesse Lewisohn is in the Mt. Sinai Hospital. It was reported last evening that an early recovery was looked for.

Mr. Lewisohn was taken to the hospital Friday evening in his big touring car. He was accompanied by Lillian Russell and his chauffeur. Mr. Lewisohn waited until after the suburban to undergo the operation.

Miss Russell was informed over the telephone as to the result of the operation, and told she might visit the patient to-day.

ETHEL ROOSEVELT'S PUPILS TAKE SAIL

Oyster Bay, L. I., June 22.—Four little boys who are learning their catechism from Miss Ethel Roosevelt were taken for a ride in the bay in the launch of the naval yacht Sylph.

The vessel will be in the bay during the President's vacation, at his orders, for the pleasure of the commander-in-chief of the navy and his family.

MOTHER GETS BAIL FOR SENTENCED BOY

After a day of agony Mrs. Patrick O'Toole of No. 182 Gold street succeeded last night in bailing out her thirteen-year-old son Thomas, and so avoided what appeared to be a terrible catastrophe, for little Tommy, in spite of his youth, is one of the mainstays of the family of ten.

The O'Toole boy and Thomas Thornton, aged fourteen, of No. 150 Sixth street, were yesterday sentenced in the South Boston Juvenile Court to indefinite terms in the Suffolk School for Boys on Rainsford Island, because two witnesses swore that they had shattered the windows of a store with giant firecrackers and fired revolvers through the broken panes on Bunker Hill Day.

In vain the parents of the boys pleaded their innocence. The Thorntons were so vociferous that they were put out of court. Mrs. P. O'Toole tried to tell Judge Fallon that her boy was in the house at the time.

"I don't know what we would do without Tommy," she said to an American reporter last night. He is the eldest of eight children, and the $5 a week that he earns in a barrel factory is a large part of what we live on, although his father is a teamster."

Up to a late hour the Thornton boy had not been bailed.

HUSBAND DIVORCES PRETTY NORA BAYES

Young Pittsburg Millionaire Was Named by Salesman in His Suit.

Boston friends of Nora Bayes, a widely known vaudeville entertainer, were astonished yesterday to learn that her husband, A. O. Gressing, a traveling salesman, had secured a divorce from her in Chicago, and that in the divorce proceedings letters written by the son of a Pittsburg millionaire had figured conspicuously.

Frank Graham McKelvy, son of W. H. McKelvy, the multi-millionaire president of the Alpha Portland Cement Company, is the rich Pittsburger whose letters to Nora Bayes were read in court.

One of them was as follows:

"Now when you go to London, dear, don't get that English accent. Be plain like I am. When you get back I'll buy you some pretty clothes to wear on the stage so that you will make a hit. Understand?

"When I heard your little voice over the long distance the other day it seemed like old times. You don't know how much better I felt. You little dear."

Photographs taken at Monte Carlo and in Paris, showing McKelvy and the young woman together, were shown to Judge McEwen, who granted the decree.

The husband said: "My wife has a marvellous contralto voice. Her mother and others urged her to go to Paris and study for the stage. I helped pay her expenses and she went. When she came back she went on the stage. It was through the stage that she met young McKelvy."

"It is wrong," said Judge McEwen, "to allow a woman of this temperament to run loose in Paris with a Pittsburg millionaire at her heels.

"It is customary to have a corroborative witness in these cases, but where a Pittsburg millionaire or a scion of one of those families is mentioned in a divorce case I believe that this is sufficient to convince the court that a decree should be given."

Judge McEwen granted the decree. Nora Bayes is thought to be abroad.

BOSTON GIRL WEDS INTO ASTOR FAMILY

Miss Laura Wilson, Member of Vincent Club, Marries Oglesby Paul of Philadelphia.

In Trinity Church at noon yesterday Miss Laura Wilson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Cecil P. Wilson, was married to Oglesby Paul of Philadelphia, son of Frank W. Paul, a member of the Astor family. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, bay trees and a profusion of pink roses.

The bride, who is one of the most beautiful dancers of the Vincent Club, wore an exquisite gown of heavy white satin, elaborately trimmed with Brussels lace. Her veil was of tulle and she carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies. Dr. Wilson gave his daughter in marriage. Mrs. James Purdon, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and was exceptionally pretty and youthful in her gown of white chiffon cloth, made semi-empire and trimmed with heavy lace. She wore large white plumes and carried pink sweet peas.

Robert Hare Davis of Philadelphia, a fellow member with the groom of the exclusive Markham Club of that city, was best man. The ushers were John Kent Kane, Frank W. Paul, Jr., and Joseph Oglesby, all of Philadelphia; Richard Howard Bland of Baltimore, a brother-in-law of the groom, and H. de W. Fuller and Arthur Shurtleff, both of Boston.

Only intimate friends and relatives attended the ceremony at the church, but a large reception and breakfast followed at the Wilson home on Exeter street.

After an extended honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Paul will live in their beautifully appointed new home at Villa Nova.

STAYED SINGLE SIX HOURS.

York, Pa., June 22.—Receiving a divorce from his former wife at 10 o'clock this morning Grant G. Shoemaker, a prominent politician, was married at 4 o'clock this evening to Miss Oressa May Dewalt. Shoemaker's former wife was Elizabeth M. Hamme.

NEGLECT OF SIGNALS CAUSE B. & M. WRECK

Through Absence of Block System Express Train Crashes Into Freight.

Littleton, June 22.—Absence of block signals made it possible for the American Express Company's special train on the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine to crash into a freight train just after rounding a sharp curve here to-day.

Three men were injured, two freight cars were demolished, the engine of the express train was damaged and traffic on the line was crippled for most of the day.

Near the scene of the wreck lay the framework of a block system which the railroad company was putting into shape. The company had been frightened into this improvement by another wreck which occurred near the same curve a month ago.

It will be some time before the semaphores are put into position and before the track will be safe.

Injured in the wreck to-day were John Guino, the conductor, and Allen Crosby, the engineer, of the express train and a clerk who was riding in one of the five cars which made up the express.

The express was Boston bound. The freight, which was also bound for Boston, was to wait at a siding here that the express might pass. The freight train passed the siding. In backing up it did not get far enough to take it out of the way of the express, which came round the curve at high speed.

The engine of the express train buried itself in the caboose of the freight and hurled two freight cars from the track. One of these cars was loaded with lumber, the other with hay and both of them were reduced to wreckage.

Wrecking trains were hurried here from Fitchburg and South Acton. After working for hours they succeeded in clearing the track.

ANARCHISTS PLAN WORLD'S CONGRESS

Part of Program Is to Draw List of Monarch Victims for Assassination.

Amsterdam, June 22.—A menacing cloud which has cast a shadow over every throne in Europe has appeared in the form of a summons to the anarchists of the world to send delegates to the International Congress to be held here from August 26 to 31.

The purposes of the congress are: The promotion of anarchy among civilized nations. The drawing of a list of condemned monarchs whose assassination is held to be desirable in the interest of humanity. The perfection of the secret department of the movement. The education of the world to the teachings of anarchy. The choice of leaders and the drawing of lots to determine the "honor" of assassinating those whose death has been decreed.

As a result of the forthcoming congress the bodyguards and secret police attached to every throne in Europe are being reinforced and urged to greater vigilance. It is known that the anarchists have planned two or three assassinations, to be executed just before the convening of the anarchists to arouse enthusiasm in the meeting. During the present week a plot to slay King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was discovered and frustrated. So complete has been the plans, however, of the executioners that the two men delegated for the work were able to make their escape through a strong net of Swiss police and secret service men.

A provisional list of those to be executed is said to have been drawn up already which embraces the names of Czar Nicholas, Kaiser Wilhelm, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, King Carlos of Portugal and King Leopold of Belgium.

CHICAGO-NEW YORK

Electric Air Line Begins Operating Cars

The stock of the Railroad now selling for $48 a share, par value $100, will advance to $50 June 29th.

The Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad has now assumed an entirely new position before the public. Not only is it a railroad in the building, it is a railroad in profitable operation. Saturday, June 15th, cars were started on a half hour schedule, over the first five miles of completed track between LaPorte and South LaPorte, Indiana. On that occasion, which attracted thousands of visitors,

MAYOR BECKER OF MILWAUKEE said:

"There are thousands of stockholders throughout the country who are satisfied; there will be thousands more....It differs from a mine, or an oil well, as a legitimate investment, in that it improves with age. It can never be exhausted."

MAYOR DAHLMAN OF OMAHA said:

"I believe it is the duty of every man, woman and child in this great country of ours to give to these gentlemen who are engaged in this great enterprise every single bit of endorsement that can be given them."

Strong words these, but merited every one of them. Within 60 days eight miles of main line track will be laid and 23 miles of main line practically graded. The short stretch in operation is earning more than anticipated. For the first time in history a railroad begins operating with a surplus in its treasury and not a dollar of bonds or other indebtedness.

This is the railroad which is being financed by the people. Stock is now selling at $48 a share, par value $100. Price will advance to $50 June 29th. The time to buy is now, before it goes to par. Go to LaPorte, Indiana, and see for yourself. For Further Information Address

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Baked beans tasted good to the 9,000 spectators who saw the Boston Americans wipe the grounds with the New York Highlanders yesterday afternoon. "Happy Jack" Chesbro, the genial Mr. Hogg and "Old Fox" Griffith were equally easy for "Deacon" McGuire's men, and the locals rolled up twelve runs with fourteen hits for a total of nineteen.

Uncle "Cy" Young was in the box for the Pilgrims and he didn't need help from any other pitcher. The old gent was right in his element and simply revelled in the hot going. He [illegible] Griff's gang for eight innings, [illegible] in the ninth he let up on the New Yorks, for they are good fellows after all is said and done, and allowed them to earn a couple of runs in order that their Sunday might be more pleasantly passed.

It was a long feast for fair and in the eighth when the locals scored eight runs twelve men faced Griff, who essayed to fool the locals. Boston had disposed of Chesbro and Hogg for four runs. The gentleman with the porcine name seemed to be doing well, but Griff deluded himself into the belief that he could do better himself.

Griff's Delirious Inning.

The foxey old fellow spat on his hands and ignoring the jibes of the bleacherites glared scornfully at Unglaub, the first man up. Sir Robert returned the glare with interest and rolled an easy grounder to Moriarty. Griff then leered horribly at Ferris who pasted the ball to centre for a single.

Well, to make a long story still longer, Griff became angry at this and put Ferris on second with a wild pitch. He chewed his gum vigorously for a moment and tried to pull himself together, but he couldn't

New York, June 22.—One of the greatest uphill games that ever was fought on the Polo Grounds was that between the Giants and the Bostons to-day. It was uphill, because the Giants, with a [illegible] and a wooden leg, and a phoney arm, and with the score 6 to 1 against them, crept up [illegible], with pitchers knocked [illegible] were for Sunday out of the box and with men [illegible] the base [illegible] and with other men playing strange positions, until they footed the game out of the mud in the twelfth inning.

That is a long sentence, but it is written in the enthusiasm of the moment, and goes as it lays. Now go and get the book for the squealers.

It was a game between a cripple and a hungry anaconda, and in truth our legs and almost all the rest of our anatomy was down the reptile's throat at one time. But odds and gadzocks, we are still on earth.

HANNIFIN WAS THE STAR.

And right here we want to apologize to Mr. Hannifin for the note we made on the margin of our score card. It was to the effect that Mr. Hannifin made a serious error of judgment when he ran out after Bridwell's grounder in the fourth inning, leaving first base uncovered. But Hannifin is accustomed to go out after everything and first base is strange to him.

In view of what happened subsequently, we wish to extend our distinguished consideration to Mr. Hannifin.

In the tenth inning Mr. Hannifin landed a three-bagger scoring the tying run. Then as the battle continued in the twelfth inning it was Hannifin who came to the front, scoring the winning run. So you will observe that Mr. Hannifin is all to the good.

In many an uptown cafe to-night many a man too full of emotion and [illegible] for utterance were [illegible] the name of Mr. Hannihan and Nannifan and so forth for saving the game.

Neither must Sammy Strang be forgot

COUNT ARRIVES TO WED MISS THAYER

Von Moltke Will Carry Popular Boston Girl to Danish Ministry at Rome.

Count von Moltke, the Danish diplomat, who on Saturday next is to marry Miss Cornelia Thayer, daughter of Nathaniel Thayer, the Boston millionaire, will spend to-day with the Thayers at their estate in Lancaster.

He arrived yesterday from New York, where landed Friday from Rome, where he is charge de affaires at the Danish legation.

Arrangements for the wedding have been completed.

Bishop Lawrence will perform the ceremony, which will occur at the Thayer homestead at Lancaster.

The bride will be attended by her sister Miss Sallie Thayer, and by her cousin Miss Susan Thayer, the daughter of E. V. R. Thayer. Mr. Thayer will give his daughter away.

The bridegroom will be attended by his cousin, Baron Rosenkrantz. There will be no ushers.

A reception will be held on the beautiful grounds of the estate immediately after the ceremony.

The bride will be gowned in white brocade. Her sister and her cousin will wear white embroidered muslin with [illegible] and will wear white hats trimmed with pink. They will carry pink sweet peas.

After the ceremony the count and the countess will sail for Italy.

Miss Thayer and Count von Moltke first met in Rome three years ago.

Mr. Thayer, who yesterday gave the Boston Sunday American the first statement concerning his daughter's wedding, said:

"I take the members of my family to Europe each Winter. Three years ago my daughter Cornelia, and Count von Moltke met when we were in Rome upon one of these Winter journeys.

"Last Fall the count came over to us. He stayed with us in Lancaster, we had a most pleasant visit."

When Miss Cornelia Thayer becomes the Countess von Moltke and leaves Lancaster, she will be greatly missed by all those members of Boston society who enjoy out of door life. She and her sister are enthusiastic horsewomen.

YALE AND HARVARD CREWS ON EDGE FOR ANNUAL RACE ON THE THAMES THURSDAY

Crimson's Admirers Say Their Eight Will Repeat Last Year's Victory Over the Blue

GALES FERRY, Ct., June 22.—Yale and Harvard to-night wound up their rowing programme as far as time spins are concerned. With a long evening tryout, the oarsmen were told that their drill from now till their paddle to the starting line next Thursday will consist of simply a limbering up process of a couple of miles daily in short [illegible].

The close of time rowing finds the backers of the varsity eights red in face from shouting that their favorite will win. Never before have the camp followers of each set of oarsmen come here so cock sure that their particular style will finish ahead. Every argument is settled by a visit to the stakeholder, and the sums that have gone up on the race have been [illegible] loftiest ever wagered.

Yale feels certain to win and is losing no sleep over it. Harvard [illegible] the race won before it is started, and is willing to back her [illegible] any amount.

[illegible] die out at first. Criger scored on the hit and the bases were full again. "Bunk" Congalton laced a dandy single to right and Young and Sullivan crossed the plate.

A Regular "Merry-Go-Round."

Griff smiled wearily when Barrett hit an easy one to him and he threw to Moriarty, forcing Parent, but became delirious again and issued transportation to Knight, filling the bags once more. Unglaub stepped to the plate for the second time, but Griff had lost all his ginger. He tossed Bob an outcurve waist high which that worthy promptly drove between Hoffman and Keeler.

At the crack of the bat a regular "merry-go-round" started up on the bases and things looked very much Revere for a minute. Congalton, Barrett and Knight made tracks for the plate and all raced merrily across the rubber while Unglaub rested on second.

The crowd was simply hilarious by this time, but there was more to come. Ferris drove a liner to centre and Captain Bob crossed the plate with the eighth run. Criger wanted to get home to supper, so he popped up a fly for Williams for the third out.

In the ninth Uncle Cy allowed Elberfeld and Keeler to hit for singles. Chase and Kleinow flied to the outfield, but Williams came to the front with a double, sending the New York bantams home with the only runs the team was able to gather. Moriarty, who had struck out three times running, then grounded to Parent and the game was over.

Bunk Congalton's Batting.

Every man on the Boston team except Barrett got in one or more safeties. Bunk Congalton led his side with two singles and a triple. Unglaub was next with a single and a double, while Sullivan, Parent and Ferris got in two safe hits each. For New York, Williams (with two doubles), Elberfeld and Keeler did all the batting except for a single by Hoffman.

The locals put up a perfect fielding game, though the infielders had very little to do. Congalton gathered in four flies and one of them, a foul, was a dandy. Sullivan made a couple of good catches and Knight got in two swell assists. Criger caught a star game and Uncle Cy was all to the merry in the box. He fanned eight men and up to the ninth only four hits had been made off his delivery.

The New Yorkers looked rather dangerous at the start. Conroy lifted a fly to Barrett and Elberfeld and Keeler followed with safeties. The Kid got to third on Wee Willie's single and then, after Chase had popped to Parent, they thought they would put Uncle Cy and Criger on the bum right off. Keeler made a dash for second while Cy was holding the ball. He turned and made a bluff to throw to Parent and as his arm went back Elberfeld started for the plate. But Cy didn't throw to second. Instead he tossed the ball to Criger and the discomfited Kid found it waiting for him when he slid.

Chesbro Looked Good.

"Happy Jack" Chesbro began as though he had something. He fooled Sullivan into striking out and Parent was retired on a hit to the box which Chesbro deflected to Elberfeld, who threw Freddie out on a very close play. Congalton got to second on Williams's fumble and a wild pitch, but was left when Barrett struck out.

New York went out in order in the second, but Boston got in a run on Knight's single, Unglaub's sacrifice and Criger's three-bagger, which bounded over Conroy's hand.

In the third Young struck out Hoffman and Chesbro and Conroy flied to Congalton. Chesbro was knocked out of the box in Boston's half. With one down Parent singled and went to third on Congalton's drive to right. Barrett hit to Moriarty and Parent was caught between third and home. He kept the enemy busy until Congalton has reached third and Barrett was on second when he got back to third in safety. But Congalton also occupied the bag and Bunk was declared out.

Unglaub Drives in Two Runs.

Unglaub was Johnny-on-the-job with a liner to left which scored Parent and Barrett and took second himself on the throw in. Chesbro was sent to the bench and Hogg was trotted out. He succeeded in making Ferris roll him an easy grounder for the third out.

There was nothing doing in the fourth except a single by Sullivan with two down, but he was out trying to steal.

Williams doubled in the fifth with one down, but a strikeout and a grounder to Parent retired the side. In Boston's half it looked like a run when Parent was safe on Conroy's muff. Congalton advanced him with a sacrifice and then Freddie made a clean steal of third. Barrett drew a pass and Knight lined to Elberfeld. On a double steal Parent was out at the plate.

Cy struck out Hogg and Conroy in the sixth and Elberfeld flied to Sullivan. For Boston Unglaub got to second on Elberfeld's muff of a hard fly. Ferris walked, but was forced by Young after Criger was retired on a foul. On a double steal Unglaub was run down between third and home.

Congalton's Fierce Triple.

Keeler walked in the seventh, but the next three men went out on flies. Boston got in another run in its half. With one down Parent walked and scored on Congalton's drive to the left field corner for three bases. The next two men flied to Conroy.

In the eighth Hoffman singled with one out, but Rigby, who batted for Hogg, retired on a foul which Congalton took in style. Bunk then gathered in Conroy's life. What the Bostons did to Griffith, who came in for the eighth, has already been told. Score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Ferris's stop of Elberfeld's rap in the first was a dandy, but the ball got away from him.

Criger's drive in the second should have been stopped for a single, but it took a bound over Conroy's hand and Lou made three bags by hard sprinting.

Happy Jack Chesbro looked natural in the box. The old sport seemed to suffer from the heat. Also he suffered from base hits.

During the third inning the management let the kids in through the centre field gate. For a few moments there was a wild scramble for the best seats in the outfield bleachers.

Umpire Jack Sheridan is thrice welcome. There has been some bum work in Boston lately and we are glad to see him.

The crowd cheered Knight for two fine plays off Keeler and Chase, which retired the side in the fourth.

Uncle Cy cut the corners in fine style. Sheridan missed one or two of them, whereat the old gentleman let out a snarl.

The last of the fifth was a thriller. Parent was safe on Conroy's muff. After Congalton's sacrifice Freddie made a clean steal of third. Barrett walked, but would have been doubled on Knight's liner to Elberfeld, but Chase muffed the throw. Then on an attempted double steal, Parent was caught at the plate.

Sheridan's voice does not improve with age, but everybody understands his decisions.

"Schmalz" Armbruster has developed into the noisiest coacher on the Boston bunch.

Manager McGuire wore a sweater on the coaching lines. "Deacon" Jim must be a cold proposition.

Hogg's cap is too small for him. There is no reference to swell-headedness in this statement.

With Congalton on third in the seventh Barrett lifted a fly to Conroy. Moriarty deliberately put his arms around "Bunk" and held him so that he couldn't score. Sheridan didn't see it and wouldn't allow McGuire's strenuous protest. Moriarty was hissed by the crowd. He was the first man up in the eighth and how the fans jeered when he struck out for the third time.

Congalton's catch of Rickey's foul fly was a corker.

Griff doesn't hesitate to change pitchers.

"First time I've seen 'em win this year, and I'm going to see it out," said a fat man.

Unglaub drove in five runs—two with his single in the third and three more with his double in the eighth.

The Boston management has received word from Hildebrand that he will not report.

There will be a double-header on Monday, the first game starting at 2 o'clock.

"Take him out" yelled the crowd to Griff as soon as he began pitching. The advice was good, as things turned out.

None of New York's fielding errors counted in the scoring.

Parent's stealing of third base looked good. Let us have some more of the same kind.

Barrett's throwing is grand. He is rounding to in good shape and will be valuable when he gets his eye on the ball a little better.

Sullivan covered a lot of ground and backed up well.

Ferris got in two singles in one inning. He is getting more foxey on those wide curves nowadays. If he keeps away from them he will get many a base on balls for all the pitchers feed him benders.

WHITE SOX 4; TIGERS 3.

Detroit, June 22.—Chicago won a close game from Detroit to-day, 4 to 3, through the poor pitching of Killian, who started the contest. Chicago secured six hits off his delivery in the first three innings for a total of three runs. Siever, who followed, was hit unluckily in the ninth, the crowd on the field making it impossible for D. Jones to handle Quillin's long fly, which went for a ground rule two-bagger and scored the winning run after Detroit had made up its initial handicap and tied the score by hard hitting. The largest crowd of the season attended. The score:

Chesbro has not been himself since he worked so hard for the Yankees three years ago.

Haverhill Doesn't Get a Run in Game With Jesse Burkett's Boys

Worcester, Mass., June 22.—Worcester defeated Haverhill in the best contested game of the season this afternoon 3 to 0. Pitchers Wormwood and Hilbert were in the points for the teams and both worked to great advantage. The local slabman had a shade on his adversary, but poor fielding detracted from Hilbert's fine work. Wormwood had seven strike outs, gave two free passes, got a hit and allowed but five singles. Hilbert allowed six hits, one a three bagger, struck out four and gave no free passes. In five of the nine innings only fifteen men faced Hilbert. Haverhill's errors were untimely and they cost two runs. Score:

FALL RIVER 5; LAWRENCE 4.

Fall River, June 22.—Reiss's wildness came within an ace of proving very costly to the home team this afternoon, but Fall River managed to defeat Lawrence 5 to 4 by bunching hits off Lee. The unsteadiness of Reiss, however, kept the result in doubt until the last man had been retired. Austin carried off the batting honors by driving in most of the Fall River runs, and spectacular catches were made by Billet, Higgins, Messenger and Lee, all of which materially checked the rallies of either side. Abbott was substituted, and the batting streak was kept up, eight hits being made off him. Lowell after the first inning began to do some stick work and had men on bases in innings when runs looked pretty certain, but the home club played an errorless game. Score:

OUTFIELDER RANDALL, NEW PLAYER OF DOVES, HURT SLIDING FOR HOME PLATE

ten. He did not seem to do very well against Umpire Klem in the first few innings. Then finding that he was expected to hit at balls that were shy of the plate, he cut loose. To his bat may be attributed a large share of the victory. He knocked out a double in the fifth. He singled in the sixth [illegible] doubled in the [illegible] when [illegible] became so afraid of him that he [illegible] to get him out of [illegible] made a most wonderful kangaroo catch.

MATHEWSON DEPOSED.

Mathewson was knocked out of the box and so was "Cy" Young. Wiltse replaced Mathewson and signalized the event by having a veritable wrestling match with Devlin over a grounder in the fifth inning. Young hit a slow one out toward them. Both Devlin and Wiltse ran for it.

They came together with the ball in Wiltse's possession. Neither could get around the other. Wiltse secured a firm neck lock on Devlin and apparently attempted to throw him over his head. Devlin then secured a half Nelson, and it looked like a drawn battle, when for some occult reason Wiltse threw the ball away out into centre field, and some Boston man improved the opportunity to score.

But this fight showed an earnestness of purpose that was not to be trifled with. If the Giants could not fight anybody else successfully, they were willing to fight each other for the possession of the ball. The score:

PIRATES, 6; REDS, 2.

Pittsburg, June 22.—Pittsburg won the first game of the series from Cincinnati to-day by the score of 6 to 2. "Del" Mason started to pitch for the visitors but lasted only six innings, Hall relieving him in the seventh. No runs were scored after Hall went in. Vic Willis pitched fine ball for the locals and kept his opponents' hits well scattered. An injured leg kept Wagner out of the game and Storke played short for Pittsburg. A feature was the work of the locals on the bases. The score:

Chicago, June 22.—The Chicago Cubs had another easy victory over the St. Louis Cardinals to-day, shutting them out by the score of 3 to 0. DAVE DESHER NO MATCH FOR LEWIS

Bout Stopped in Second Round to Save Hub Boy a Knockout.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 22.—Harry Lewis of this city won in short order from Dave Deshler of Boston, at the National A. C. last night. Lewis proved so superior to his opponent that Referee McGuigan stopped the bout about the middle of the second round. Deshler was the receiver general for as many blows as Harry could hand out.

In the first round Deshler took the count once and bled from the nose and mouth. During the second round Lewis hammered Deshler at will and had him so groggy before two minutes had expired that in order to avoid a knockout the settle was stopped.

Deshler scarcely landed a blow during the bout. Lewis was right on top of him all the time after the starting out with well placed left jabs began swinging for Dave's body and jaw and never gave him a moment's rest.

WATERVILLE HAS EASY TIME WINNING

Waterville, Me., June 22.—Cox and Butler were hit hard in this afternoon's game, but Waterville batted the ball at times when hits meant runs and had no difficulty in winning the game, 5 to 2. Some fine plays were seen and the fielding was fast. A one handed stop by O'Neil and a one handed catch of a hard fly by Gregory were features. Score by innings:

BOXING MIKE "TWIN" NOW AFTER JOE GANS TROTTING GOOD SPORT ON SPEEDWAY AMATEURS MANY TEAMS WANT GAMES GOLF

SHRUBB, ENGLISHRUNNER, MAKES FAST TIME IN THREE MILE RUN IN "PRO" GAMES

Alfred Shrubb, the English runner, holder of records up to ten miles, was the big attraction at the professional track games held on Locust street grounds yesterday afternoon, and his performance in the three-mile run was one of the most remarkable ever seen on the cinder path in this vicinity.

It was the first apearance of the British wonder in the Hub, but his reputation was well known and he was announced as the champion of the world.

That he is a world beater no one would dispute after seeing him run rings around the men he faced.

Shrubb the Whole Thing Here.

Arrayed against the foreigner were Tom Williams of Somerville, Sam Meyers, E. H. McLean of East Boston and Sam Crooks of Fall River, but the only one really in the race was Shrubb.

At the crack of the gun he went away as if running a quarter dash and opened a gap immediately.

His style was perfect for getting over the ground with the least effort yet developing terrific speed. He barely lifted his feet from the ground, but glided along much like Longboat, the swift Indian who ran the Marathon.

He had $200 he wanted to bet before the race that he would win by a lap, but could not find no takers among the several hundred spectators.

At the two-mile mark he had made up his lap catching Williams who was then in second position. For the last mile he took things easier, but when the final lap was called he let out a few kinks and came to the finish line flying.

His time of 14 minutes 57 2-5 seconds was very fast for the distance and he calculated to go within fifteen minutes. His ability to gauge distance was shown in the time credited to him.

Kanally Didn't Run Against Shrubb.

Frank Kanally of Cambridge, the best runner in New England for distance, did not run against Shrubb as they have a match race on later at New York, but he won the mile handily.

In the half mile Bart Sullivan beat Kanally out in a fine sprint in the stretch of the last lap.

Louis Guertin, the well-known champion jumper, was the big prize winner as he captured the hundred yard dash, high jump and running hop, step and jump.

Tom Keene, who has won Sheffield handicaps, and was considered the best sprinter in America, was beaten in the dash by a couple of yards. Keene said it was the first scratch race in seven years in which he had been defeated and it was owing to poor form that he did not do better. The summaries:

100 yard dash—Won by Louis Guertin, East Weymouth; second, Tom Keene, Boston; third, Eddie Hynes, Boston; fourth, Manning, Watertown. Time, 10 1-5s.

Mile run—Won by Frank Kanally, Cambridge; second, Bart Sullivan, Cambridge; third, Floyd Doughty, Providence. Time, 4m. 36 2-5s.

880 yard run—Won by Bart Sullivan, Cambridge; second, F. S. Kanally, Cambridge; third, Floyd Doughty, Providence. Time, 2m. 8 2-5s.

High jump—Won by Louis Guertin, East Weymouth, 5 ft. 9½ in.; second McDonald, Fall River, 5 ft. 8½ in.; third, Jack Smith, East Boston, 5 ft. 5½ in.

440 yard dash—Won by Tom Keene, Boston; second, Floyd Doughty, Providence; third, Manning. Time, 57 3-5s.

Three mile run—Won by Alfred Shrubb, England; Sam Meyers, second; Williams, third. Time, 14m. 57 2-5s.

Running hop, step and jump—Won by Louis Guertin, 46 ft. 4 in.; second, Cameron, 42 ft.; third, Smith, 41 ft. 6 in.

BURNS IN FORM FOR BOUT WITH SQUIRES

He Will Likely Weigh 180 Pounds on July 4; His Opponent Four Pounds More.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

Harbin Springs, California, June 22.—"We are to fight under straight Marquis of Queensberry rules, and if each follows these rules to the letter there will be no occasion for Referee Jim Jeffries to open his mouth or lay a hand on us."

This was Tommy Burns's reply when asked if there was a complete understanding as to the style of warfare to be adopted in the world's championship contest at Colma between Bill Squires and himself.

If Squires reading of "straight rules," chimes with Burns's views on the subject there is promise of a determined battle between a brace of evenly matched heavyweights. Each man takes pride in his bodily strength, and there is not likely to be more than a couple of pounds difference in the weight of the men when they enter the ring. Burns will probably be near 180 pounds on the afternoon of July 4, while Squires weighed about 184 pounds a week ago.

Burns has certainly had the preparation of his life this trip. He has said frequently since he began work that his legs and hips were his principal care and those portions of his make-up have had special attention. He has reduced his lower limbs to the desired dimensions and is as proud of the fact as Jim Jeffries used to be when he fancied he noticed a slimness in his under pinning after a hard spell of road work.

Burns did his last mountain work yesterday. During the rest of his stay at Harbin, he will make a daily pilgrimage to a natural swimming tank that he has located at a point about five miles from here in the foothills.

AT THORNTON'S MERCY.

Waltham defeated the Makuras of Quincy on Lowell field, Waltham, yesterday afternoon by the score of 6 to 4 in one of the best games seen here this year. Pat Thornton of Jamaica Plain pitched for Waltham and had the visitors at his mercy. Not a hit was made off his delivery for eight innings, when the Makuras got two singles, their only hits of the game. Besides this fourteen of the Makura batsmen fell before Thornton's curves. He had a fast drop ball and a wicked cross-fire ball working to perfection yesterday. Escheibach, the catcher for the winners, ran forty yards, and after hurdling two or three dress suit cases pulled down a foul fly. The losers would have been shut out were it not for two or three bad infield errors on account of the bad field.

MADISONS WON EASILY.

The Madison A. C. played their second scheduled game of the Boston Central League yesterday afternoon, playing the Hillsides of South Boston at McNary Park, coming out victorious. The feature playing was the fielding of Kelly and Horne and the batting of Loughlin and McGinnis. Harvey would have pitched a no-hit, no-run game only for some slow fielding of his teammates. Score:

Madison A. C.	8 0 0 1 0 0 7 4 0—15

CONCORD KNIGHTS WIN.

At Woburn yesterday, Concord K. of C. defeated Woburn K. of C. in a league game 3 to 2 in ten innings. Errors filled the bases in the ten innings and Moloy forced in the winning run with a base on balls. The score:

Concord K. of C.	0100100001—374
Woburn K. of C.	0000002000—266

Batteries—Concord, Jenna and Hanlon, Woburn, Moloy and Hearn.

GROVELANDS' GAME.

The Grovelands defeated the Bowdoins of Quincy yesterday afternoon in an exciting game at Mattapan in the Boston Suburban League series. Bonvie, the deaf mute, was pitching for the home team and kept the hits well scattered. The features of the game were the fielding of Beck and the backstop work of Ochs for the home team, and Fallon for the visitors. The score:

Grovelands	0 2 0 1 0 2 2 1 x—8
Bowdoins	0 0 0 2 0 0 0 1 4—7

Batteries—Bonvie and Ochs for Groveland; Michaels and Rogers for Bowdoin.

VICTORS MISNAMED.

The crack Winn A. A. of Woburn met and defeated the Victors of Quincy yesterday. The feature of the game was the batting of McGovern for the Winn. The score:

CRIMSONS ARE SURE OF BEATING YALE AT NEW HAVEN TUESDAY.

Captain Dexter Shakes Up the Batting Order and Expects Good Results.

PAUL COBURN PRAISES THE HARVARD TEAM

The Harvard varsity baseball team will leave to-morrow afternoon for New Haven to play a return game with Yale on Tuesday. The regulars and all the subs will go, accompanied by Coach Pieper, "Al" Castle and "Pouch" Donovan. The undergraduates who still remain in Cambridge will give the team a rousing send-off in Harvard square.

The team held a long and hard batting and fielding practice yesterday on the varsity diamond in Soldiers' Field. Brennan, Hartford and Slater brushed up on speed and curves. The practice was spirited and the men warmed up well to the work. Coach Pieper was away playing with the Rockland team of which he is manager, and the ball tossers were coached by "Pouch" Donovan.

Dexter Hits Hard.

Dexter knocked some hot ones into left garden and in general the Crimson captain seemed to be fast getting back to his usual good form after his recent illness. Slater was tried at first base, but it is understood that he will not be placed in this position at the Yale game and will probably warm the bench.

Pritchett's playing at third was poor as he muffed several easy flies and let many slow grounders slip past. Leonard, the regular third baseman, is bothered yet by his lame tendon so as to be dangerously slow at running bases, but he will start the Yale game. Pounds showed up remarkably well at the practice and several times duplicated his performances of last year by lifting the spheroid into the box at left for what would have been a three bagger in a regular game. His chances of playing in right field in the Yale game are excellent. Paul Coburn, last year's coach, pitched a few swift and puzzling ones for the youngsters.

Coburn Praises Team.

"On account of the erratic playing during the season I didn't take as much interest in the team as I usually do," said Coburn. "But when I saw the game with Yale last Thursday with that timely bing of Pounds's I asked to be forgiven for my sins. Honestly, I haven't seen a Harvard team for many years with more grit and sand and better rallying powers than this one. The way the bunch stuck together to the last made me sweat blood. Each and everyone on the team was on to his individual job every minute, and that's baseball. Will the team beat Yale next Tuesday? You can take my money."

This same confidence is shared by all the collegiate fans, and Harvard men are offering odds of 2 to 1.

The most important change in the team at the Yale game will be a change in the batting order definitely announced yesterday by Captain Dexter. Coach Pieper and the Crimson captain have observed the way in which the team has filled all the bases and struck out or popped out. This happened four times in the Yale games, and Pieper and Dexter have doped out a cure by a change in the batting order.

"The batting order will be changed before the Yale game so as to bring all the heavy hitters together," said Captain Dexter. "Harvey, who is reckoned among the sure batters, will be put ninth on the list so as to bring him together with Leonard at the head. Pounds has done such good work that we have decided to put him in at right field in place of Dana. Briggs has hitherto been second on the list because he was a good bunter, but bunting is comparatively speaking child's play and he will probably go below McCall in the batting order. Hartford will start the game in the box for Harvard, but if he gets in a tight place Brennan will go in.

Dexter Expects to Win.

"I think our chances of winning the next game with Yale are much better than they were of winning the last game. The victory has given the men fine spirit and they are playing better ball than ever. We are extremely confident of winning, for we understand that Yale intends to put Moyer in the box in place of Van Vleck, who pitched the last game. Moyer is, in my opinion, greatly inferior to the other twirler of the Elis."

The following list shows the change in the batting order which will go into effect at the Yale game:

OLD ORDER.	NEW ORDER.
Leonard, 3b.	Leonard, 3b.
Briggs, 1b.	Currier, c.
Currier, c.	Dexter, l. f.
Dexter, l. f.	Pounds, r. f.
McCall, b.	McCall, 2b.
Simons, ss.	Briggs, 1b.
Harvey, c. f.	Simons, ss.
Dana, r. f.	Hartford, p.
Hartford, p.	Harvey, c. f.

HARVARD CREWS CLOSE TRAINING WITH TIME ROW

Red Top, Ct., June 22.—Harvard crews closed their three weeks' training on the Thames to-night with a short time row for all three boats. The Varsity eight chased down stream with the Thames smooth as a mill pond for two miles unpaced, the time not being made public.

The freshman eight made the most satisfactory record of the day in a dashing half mile trial, without pace, going it in 2 minutes 28 seconds.

The Varsity four closed its training with a mile spin with the freshman four in 5 minutes 30 seconds, defeating the freshmen by three lengths.

In the Varsity four the final change has been made, Burchard being dropped from seat No. 3. The four as finally chosen by Coach Wray is as follows: Stroke [illegible], No. 3, Lunt, No. 2, Swaim, and [illegible].

The Sylph steamed over from [illegible] Bay to-day and anchored off Red Top. It has been placed at the disposal of the Harvard crews for to-morrow [illegible] sail on Long Island Sound. It will be kept here till after the Harvard-Yale regatta, to act as harbormaster's boat and Government revenue cutter. The boat was secured from Oyster Bay by Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., the Harvard assistant manager.

The Varsity eight was taken in tow by the launch tonight five miles to the draw bridge to start a time row up stream. The oarsmen were alighting from the launch into the shell when they discovered that Captain Bacon had forgotten his seat. This compelled the oarsmen to get back into the launch and take the shell in tow back to the boat house. It was then too late for [illegible] [illegible] rowing and nothing was done except to take a twilight row down stream in about eleven minutes.

NO MORE CHANGES LIKELY TO BE MADE IN YALE CREW

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 22.—None of the Yale crews went out upon the Thames this morning because of the hot weather, but Yale's two leading rowing advisors, Julien W. Curtiss and George St. John Sheffield, went by invitation of the Harvard Navy out in the launch John Harvard to witness the rowing of the Crimson oarsmen. They were delighted at the form showed by Harvard and the courtesy extended to them by Captain Bacon of Harvard.

This evening Coach Kennedy of Yale kept his word not to send the varsity eight over the course this week, which means that Yale will not try to cover the four miles till the Harvard race, as both Yale and Harvard rowing managers announced to-night that there would be no more time rowing.

This evening the Yale varsity and freshman eights raced two miles down stream, the varsity winning by three lengths. No changes have been made in any of the Yale crews this week, and Coach Kennedy says that barring accidents, no more are possible.

VALLEYS' EIGHTH WIN.

The Valley A. C. of Everett scored their eighth victory yesterday of the season through defeating the Columbias of Cambridge by a score of 13 to 4. The feature of the game was the batting of Captain Gagon. The batteries were Mulledy and Gagon for the Valleys; Corrion and Craige for the Columbias.

Speedy Wilkesbrino Made Bunker Hill Do His Best to Win on the Speedway

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

It was well worth the trip to Franklin field speedway yesterday just to see the [illegible] between the two fast pacers Bunker Hill and Wilkesbrino, so that the scratching of about half the horses entered in the matinee of the Dorchester Driving Club only marred the sport [illegible] number of events scheduled from 57 [illegible] down [illegible] [illegible] his fitness by giving the speedway [illegible] champion all that he could attend to in order to head the summary.

Real Battle in Second.

While Wilkesbrino took the opening heat, the real battle did not begin till the [illegible], as then it was Crosby saw he had [illegible] [illegible] kicked [illegible] [illegible] additional pull down on his head [illegible] reins over Bunker Hill [illegible] determination to do or die in his [illegible] [illegible] J. W. L. over Nina, and trotted [illegible] heats in 34¼ seconds. He is [illegible] for the Cranberry Circuit. Captain [illegible] [illegible] lost one before [illegible].

La Gazelle Wins Again.

La Gazelle is a busy mare these days, yesterday being her second start of the week, but it seemed to agree with her, as she was steady as a clock, winning in straight heats.

Bly Wilkes had a trifle the speed of her opponents after dropping the initial heat. Good Boy appeared to have his event [illegible] at the end of the second heat, but then Rex suddenly got all to the good, reeling off the next three. The trotter Rex was pitted against a pacer, but that did not disturb Johnson any, for he secured the blue ribbon after a heard struggle of four heats.

[illegible] F. Swedeman of the [illegible] likes his recent purchase, [illegible] more he sees of her [illegible] trotted a half [illegible] [illegible] Park in [illegible] in 34½ seconds [illegible] accomplish the [illegible] her more declared a heat in [illegible] or better is within her capacity right now. BANK OFFICERS HAVE BIG DAY OF SPORT

Riverside Is the Scene of Many Interesting Events on Land and Water.

Over two thousand members and friends of the Bank Officers' Association assembled at the Riverside Recreation grounds yesterday and enjoyed what all declare the most successful field day ever held in the history of the association.

Long before 2 o'clock the crowd began to gather at the South Station, and Teel's Band made that structure fairly ring with music until the special trains took the happy gathering away.

The ball game between the teams of the National banks and the Trust companies, the first of the entertainments, was full of interesting features. The band played continuously throughout the game and was at times drowned out by the cheering. The scene was indeed an inspiring one.

At 4 o'clock on the tennis courts there were interesting exhibitions by Johnson and others, now State champions. F. H. Hovey, Seaver Warland, N. W. Niles, F. J. Sulloway, R. Bishop, C. Bishop and Gardner Beals.

Canoe enthusiasts enjoyed themselves all the day and night, and the launches carried others about the beautiful Charles.

The Brookline Swimming Club, captained by L. G. Rich, kept the entire gathering in constant amusement and laughter. The fancy swimming of J. B. Greene, who was thrown fully dressed into the pool and came to the surface in his swimming outfit, while all the spectators held their breath in wonderment, called forth much applause. The Monte Christo Sack Dive in which Mr. Rich is tied firmly in a sack and hurled from a thirty foot elevation into the pool and extracting himself before being seen again, was another sensational event. The other aquatic events were illustration of different strokes, plunge for distance, 25 yard scratch race, 25 yards exhibition by L. G. Rich, fancy diving, tub race, 100 yards handicap race, hurry scurry race, fancy costume race, duck hunt, canoe tilting, water baseball.

An excellant collation followed the water sports. Then there were fireworks and both halls of the pavilion were thrown open to dancing at 8 o'clock.

About 11 o'clock the tired, happy crowd started on their return home. All echoing thanks to the committees for a most enjoyable day.

The ball game lasted only six innings, with the following result.

MARBLEHEAD BEST IN SONDER CLASS

America's Candidate for Kaiser Cup Shows Heels in Open Regatta.

Marblehead, Mass., June 22.—The Corinthian Yacht Club sailed its second club race of the season this afternoon in a light southeast breeze and the light weather boats had their innings. There were four classes to start, but the interest was in the class Q and sonder class E boats. In class Q there were five starters, all new boats this year, the Eleanor, which is her first race here, the Little Rhody, Sally VIII, Essex and Dorothy Q. It was just the chance for the Little Rhody and she was a winner over the Eleanor by over two minutes, with the Sally VIII, eighteen seconds behind the Eleanor.

The Essex and Dorothy Q. were about five and six minutes behind the leaders, with the Dorothy Q last.

In the sonder class race the Marblehead, which has been selected to go to Germany and Spain was a winner over five of last year's boats, the Windeim Kid, Hayseed III, Corinthian, Sally VIII, and Auk. The Windeim Kid was her nearest competitor, being about one minute three seconds behind.

For the most of the race it was a drifting match and the Marblehead showed her ability to drift faster than the others. The Secret had a walkover in class R.

In the handicap class, the Carina II and the Peter Pan had it out, the former winning by about fifteen seconds. The summary:

Cambridge Boys Beaten for Second Time by a Score of 10 to 5.

Somerville High defeated Rindge Training School in the Interscholastic League championship series at Cambridge yesterday by the score of 10 to 5.

It was the second time that the two teams have met and the second defeat for the Cambridge boys.

Somerville outbatted their rivals and won on that score. Some fine fielding was done by both teams and Sharry contributed a double play unassisted.

When the Somerville boys had the game on ice Coach Cuddy let some of the substitutes get in the contest to earn their "S's." The score:

GILCHRISTS START WELL.

In the opening game of the Retail Dry Goods League played at Chestnut Hill playgrounds yesterday, the Gilchrist team defeated Houghton & Dutton nine by the score of 5 to 4.

As the score denotes it was one of the fastest exhibitions ever given by mercantile teams and the result hung in the balance till the final bell.

There was a lot of excitement among the rooters of both teams who came out to yell their favorites to victory.

Both teams were prepared for a warm contest but under the strain made costly misplays. Pitcher Cross for Gilchrist was steady throughout, and his strength in the box helped to win out.

Gilchrist managed to squeeze a run out in the ninth and won the game. Score by innings:

The Varsity Crews.

By Julian Hawthorne.

THERE will be an interesting race at Poughkeepsie this week and another not less so at New London; but, if you read the comments of the expert observers at the river side, you will get no clear notion of which crew will win in either event. Yet all are amateur crews, and if the amateur spirit prevailed, there should not be any essential doubt about the matter.

At New London, indeed, there has appeared a mighty uplifting of spirit this year, in that both Yale and Harvard have shown self respect and dignity enough to forego that secrecy as to what they can do in the boat which has vulgarized and debased the tone of our college rowing until it is indistinguishable from mere professionalism, without the professional excuse for such conduct. We are told what "times" in practice the two rivals have made hitherto, and it seems that Harvard is a few seconds better than Yale; and although, in consequence of the varying conditions of wind and tide, not to mention the disposition of the crews themselves at any given moment, this is by no means decisive as to the success or failure of either on the day of the race.

It looks like a fairly close race, that is all, and that is as much as an amateur spectator should desire. At Poughkeepsie, however, the old professional taint still obscures the atmosphere, and it was amusing to hear the remark of one of the oldest and least commendable (from the ethical standpoint) of the college coaches, that it was no use for him to say anything about the chances of his crew, because nobody would believe him. That is ever the consequence of systematic lying; but professional liars will nevertheless stick to their lies, from some confused notion that there is money in it. An amateur crew which has permitted false reports as to their condition and proficiency to be disseminated should be disqualified by the judges at the finish, no matter where they come out in the race. We have no right to complain of our being shut out from English regattas while we persist in these dishonorable practices. We should rather be thankful to Englishmen for persisting in maintaining the amateur standard of ethics, and for my part I rejoice in the discomfiture of our oarsmen in this regard, and hope it may continue until the managers of our amateur rowing clubs come to their senses in the matter. At present, the slimy trail of the amateur-professional has disabled honest oarsmen from getting their rights.

But doubts as to who will win are the result, not only of lying, but also of ignorance on the part of our "experts" as to what good rowing is. There have been so many theories on the subject that no one knows any longer what the real principles are. Each year a new theory appears; and none is tried long enough to determine what its actual merits or demerits may be. The English system may or may not be the ideal; but at any rate it has been practiced so many ages that it has the advantage of defeating all others that have been brought against it—with one or two trifling exceptions. It has not seldom happened that some special crew, rowing what is held to be a faulty stroke, has won against crews which row in "good form." This year the Annapolis crew, composed of heavy and powerful men, rows a short stroke, and is therefore thought to be out of the running. Yet they may win, because they row together and their stroke suits them; another crew rowing their stroke, or the same crew next year, might fail. Such exceptions prove nothing; and yet, should Annapolis win, we would probably have theorists next year declaring that theirs was the long-sought winning stroke after all.

Sanity and constancy are what we need in rowing, and the honesty and decency of gentlemen dealing with one another.

Julian Hawthorne.

ARLINGTON HIGH HAD GOOD SEASON

Captain Taylor Did Clever Work Behind Bat and With Stick.

Good work was done the past school season by the baseball team of the Arlington High School. The team was captained by J. "Mac" Taylor, whose work behind the bat was excellent. Taylor's hitting was the feature of many a game.

Soderquid and Sloane alternated in the box and right field, and both did good work. Dineen covered the initial bag in fine style and did good work with the stick. The second cushion was well taken care of by Scannell, and Kelley at shortstop put up a fast game. At the third sack Smith put up a snappy game.

In the field "Slugger" Clifford at left and Murray and Roale in centre, took care of the outer garden in fine style and did good work with the willow.

Arlington high took two out of three games in a series with Gloucester High, defeated Reading High 4-3 in a 14-inning game, and also defeated Winchester High. The team was not a member of any league.

GLENDALE, 4; MATTAPAN, 1.

In the Suburban League series Mattapan lost to Glendale A. C. yesterday at Franklin Park, 4 to 1. In the eighth inning McCarthy changed from one batters' box to the other and should have been out, but Desmond, of the Norfolks, who was umpiring, overlooked it. After much wrangling, Mattapan decided to continue the game under protest. The features of the game were the batting of Linberg and Hannaford, the battery work of the winners, and the fielding of the Nash brothers. But for timely hitting the game would have been lost to Mattapan through Hannaford's poor playing on third base. The score.

STATE HOUSE PAGES WIN ON DIAMOND

Best Labor Bureau Clerks 12 to 7 at the South End Grounds.

In a loosely played game, marked by poor fielding and weak hitting, the pages from the Massachusetts House of Representatives won their annual game from the clerks of from the Bureau of Labor Statistics at the South End grounds yesterday afternoon by a score of 12 to 7. In spite of the fact that nearly every member of both branches of the Legislature had purchased a ticket for the game less than one hundred spectators were present and of these hardly one was connected with the State House. It was rumored round before the game that the Solons had seen the two teams practicing and had decided almost unanimously that home would be the best place to enjoy the game.

Outside of the errors and loose fielding the features of the game were the pitching of both Grant and Smith and the batting and fielding of Howe. The score:

Neponset-Dorchester Wins Eighth Straight Game by Clay's Great Pitching.

Yesterday afternoon the Neponset-Dorchesters won their eighth straight victory, when they defeated the strong Queen Quality team of Roxbury in a well-played game by a score of 5 to 0. Max Clay, the noted schoolboy twirler, was in the points for the winners and pitched a very effective game, allowing only three hits, and fanning ten batters. His teammates backed him up in faultless style, playing an errorless game, Massey and Callahan covering a lot of territory, while Hanson ma[illegible] stealing. At the bat Clay led his team, getting three hits. For Queen Quality, Cota and Putnam excelled. The score:

PIERCE SCHOOL WINS 5 TO 3

Teams Which Played 28 Innings Two Weeks Ago Meet Again.

In a far poorer exhibition than marked their first game, the teams of the Henry L. Pierce grammar school of Dorchester and the Bennett grammar school of Brighton, met yesterday afternoon at Rogers Park, Brighton, the former team winning by a score of 5 to 3.

The game was in sharp contrast to the first game, two weeks ago, which went twenty-eight innings, when finally the Dorchester schoolboys won out by a 4 to 3 score.

The Bennett boys took the lead at the start of the contest yesterday, getting three runs in the first three innings, but the boys from Dorchester soon evened this up and took a lead of one run in the fifth. They scored their second additional tally in the eighth, but Bennett school was unable to score again after the third.

Many errors, particularly on the part of Poole, the Bennett school second baseman, who made three, marked the game throughout. Both pitchers, O'Connor of the Bennett school and Goodale of the Pierce, were in good condition and played clever ball. O'Connor gave seven hits and Goodale only five, while O'Connor struck out fourteen and Goodale six. The catching of Emery of the Pierce team was also a feature. The score:

KNICK KNACK WON HULL YACHT RACE

Was Then rotested for Being Drawn Out of Water Without Permission.

Hull, June 22.—Light winds from the eastward and a sea that stretched away with a mirror-like surface were the conditions which the Boston Yacht Club had for the races for the 15-footers, off Hull this afternoon. Thirteen boats competed in the races which began promptly at three o'clock over the Strawberry Hill course. The race was one of the best seen by yachtsmen for some time.

The Knick Knack, owned by E. W. Holmes, finished only a minute and a half before the Boniface, George W. Wightman, the Smelt coming a close third. Twelve seconds later came the Eagle, F. W. Cordew.

Because the Knick Knack had been drawn out of water for a period of four days without the permission of the club, a protest was entered against her. The rule of the Boston Yacht Club in regard to drawing boats out of water is that the boat may only be drawn out after the club has given permission and only for a period of twelve hours.

A hearing will be given and it is very probable that the Knick Knack will be debarred from the prize. Handsome silver steins were presented by the club to those winning first, second or third places. The result:

DIFFERENTIALS HANDICAP RACERS

While it is generally known that a number of racing cars are and have been built without differentials, the reasons for the practice are not generally known. Perhaps the chief of these is that the use of the differential entails considerable waste of power at high speeds besides tending to make the engines race. The reason for this is that when running at extreme speed one or both of the hind whels are off the ground for a large proportion of the time, actually skipping over the road instead of adhering firmly to it. Where a differential is employed whenever one wheel leaves the ground even for an instant the resistance of the other causes it to be driven through the differential at tremendous speed. When it again comes to earth, therefore, it is running at a much greater surface velocity than is required by the speed of the car, and the slipping action brought about as it is again reduced to the required sped tends to set up skidding or to tear the tire according to circumstances and the nature of the road. Purely mechanical considerations also come under notice.

USE SPEEDOMETERS.

Among the cars to be equipped with Hoffecker speedometers during the past week were the Matheson of Harlan W. Whipple, the Packard of Peter B. Bradley and the C., G. & V., belonging to Lars Anderson.

Fast Harness Horses in Readville's First Matinee

The Gentlemen's Driving Club of Boston will open at Readville next Saturday what promises to be the most successful matinee racing season in the history of the club, rattling good racing being assured from the start.

Two notable additions to the ranks of the club's horses this year are Chase, 2 07¼, owned by C. H. Belleden, and George Graves's Mack Mack, 2 08. Both have worked miles around 2 16.

Arnold Lawson will start four, Milady O'Dreamwold, wagon record 2 18¼, Maid O'Dreamwold, wagon record 2 17¾, Dreamwold Towerkeeper, wagon record 2 26¾, and Dreamwold Prioress, all of whom are working out very well.

The Hall's Good String.

George and Frank Hall have Lexington, with a mark of 2 22 to wagon, that consistent matinee performer, Cora Wilkes, 2 23¼, to a wagon, and another new one, Dividend, with a mark of 2 29. Also in the Hall stable is the well known pacer, Cinch, with a mark of 2 08¼, who is fit to race for his life when an opponent can be found.

Peter B. Bradley has his two well-known matinee horses, King Clay, Peter B. and that very promising young stallion, Border Knight.

J. R. Peck has again Remsen Robinson, who kept Mr. Bradley's gray gelding, King Clay, going his limit to land the blue ribbon last year.

Mr. Leonard's good mare Chimes Bell, 2 14¼, has been working so well this season that it is thought she will be able to give Chase and Mack Mack quite an argument at the opening matinee.

Charles Saunders, with his old favorite, Silver Crow, 2 12¾, and a new one, should add to the sport. The dean of the road, John Shepard, has a fine looking five-year-old colt by Bingen.

Another familiar figure with an old favorite will be Mr. Finley with his first love, Mrs. Jack, and Arthur Parker has promised some good ones from the Bedford farm.

With these horses to pick from, Boston should be able to send to Cleveland for the Intercity Matinee in September a string of horses that will make a better showing than has been made by the club for years, and the present outlook should make them favorites for the majority of the blue ribbons at that meeting.

Opening a Gala Day.

The opening is to be made a gala day and the Salem Cadet Band will attend as usual. The grandstand will be thrown open and the public given a hearty welcome to enjoy some good racing. Starting at the wire opposite the grandstand, instead of at the clubhouse, was found to be such a success last year that it will be continued.

A new rule will be in force which will afford the heavyweight members of the club an equal chance with those of lesser displacement. Every driver will carry 175 pounds. This handicap should bring closer finishes.

NO "AUTO WEEK" AT BRETTON WOODS

The automobile week, which for the past four or five years, has been one of the fixtures of Bretton Woods, has been abandoned this season. Heretofore, Anderson & Price, those men known to the motorists who keep in touch with affairs, have been the mainstay of the climb to the clouds, and the week of motoring. They have shouldered the greater burden of expense and done the most to foster automobiling in the White Mountains. This year they are willing to step aside and let others take up the burden, but as yet no others have come forth. Hence the retirement, as it were, of the White Mountain carnival.

By this time it must not be supposed that Bretton Woods will be without attractions to the motorists. Far from it. The tourists will as heretofore find cheer and comfort in the heart of the mountains, but so far as there being any set program of entertainment for a special week, that has been abandoned.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO SEND AUTO

To travel in a special train is a distinction enjoyed by but few people and one hardly to be thought of in connection with an automobile. However strange it may seem, it is a fact that on Wednesday last a special train was made up at the Grand Central Station, New York, for the sole purpose of transporting an automobile as quickly as possible to Stockbridge, Mass. This car was the fifty-horsepower Matheson owned by Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Early Wednesday morning Mr. Mellen received word at his estate at Stockbridge in the Berkshire Mountains from the Matheson Company of New York that his car was ready for delivery. He wired to have the car taken to the Grand Central Station and placed aboard the special train which he had arranged for.

NEW RULES FOR GRADING CYCLES

Doubtless the most notable hill-climbing event for motorcycles that has yet been held in the country, was the one conducted by the New York and Brooklyn Motorcycle clubs on Decoration Day, for the reason that horsepower actual or alleged was not taken into account, the grading being based upon the piston displacement of the different wheels competing. That this is an equitable basis for giving the machines a rating must be apparent to anyone who will figure out the details involved. In the event referred to there were four classes.

These were, respectively, for machines not displacing to exceed 21.20 cubic inch, machines not exceeding 33.67 cubic inch, "doubles" not exceeding 61 cubic inch, with the fourth class a "free for all." That the actual meaning of the measurements may be made more clear to the layman it may be explained that the first class will take in machines having a 3x3 inch cylinder, the second 3½x3½ and the third class 3⅝x3⅝ inches.

SIMPLE TROUBLES STOP MOTORS

Probably the time is nearly if not quite past when the average motorist attempts to start his motor without retarding the sparks or with the gasolene cut off from the carburetor, or even when he attempts to fill his gasolene tank without first straining the fuel. In fact, most drivers are most particular to carry a strainer funnel with them at all times, and to use it religiously wherever occasion arises.

A curious commentary on this habitual precaution is the fact that notwithstanding this careful treatment motors continue to stop through clogged carburetor jets, and from other equally simple and to be deplored causes. Perhaps the most live and general cause for this is the treatment which the funnel receives as a general thing when not in use. However carefully the fuel may be strained, the care is of no avail while the lower part of the funnel is dirty.

FORD "SOUND LOGIC" TALKS

Can Primitive Methods Compete In Price and Quality With a Highly Specialized Factory

CONCERNS THAT HAVE FACILITIES—equipment, system, organization and experience—for producing in large quantities, are also able to maintain a higher standard of quality—can, and invariably do.

IN ANY BRANCH OF MECHANICAL ART that has reached the manufacturing stage, it will be found that the concern which leads in the matter of large output also sets the pace in quality.

FUNDAMENTALLY THIS MUST BE SO—the very magnitude of its operation enables it to adopt methods, inaugurate systems, to buy and sell, and in a thousand other ways do things that are impossible or impractical to its less fortunate rivals. Its resources make possible, and its need for a reputation to back up its immense output makes imperative, higher standards of quality than are necessary or attainable to smaller producers.

THE FORD MOTOR COMPANY NOW BUILDS more than twice as many motor cars as any other automobile factory in the world

HERE ARE SOME FIGURES that show how complete has been the Ford conquest—how fully the Ford promise of a year ago has been fulfilled.

FORD NOW BUILDS 60 CARS A DAY on an average. In March, shipped 887; in April, 1,033; and in May, touched high water mark with 1,209 four-cylinder runabouts (Models N & R) and 127 six-cylinder touring cars and roadsters.

CAN SMALL PRODUCERS COMPETE WITH FORD CARS in price and quality? Can they give the buyer anything like the same value as Ford, with his magnificent organization, his highly specialized machinery and his splendid technical force—the best known to the industry—can give?

WE HEAR A LOT OF BOSH about "hand made" stuff; and rival concerns—making a virtue of necessity or in extenuation of putting a ridiculously high price on a really mediocre product—argue that quantity production is incompatible with quality work. Let's see:—

DO YOU KNOW ANY OTHER RIFLE that can excel the Remington? Yet the Remington Arms Co. makes hundreds of high-class guns every day. Would you buy a watch from some small concern in preference to the world famous product of the Waltham Co., the concern that, by the application of highly specialized automatic machinery and "Yankee" methods, made a timepiece so much more accurately and economically that the Swiss National Industry was undermined, and the watch trade of the world transferred to America?

IS THERE IN THE WHOLE WORLD a better adding machine than the Burroughs? As good a cash register as the National? The Singer Co. stitches the clothes of the nations—and builds a sewing machine every time a Waltham watch ticks. Every salesman tries to make you believe his music box is "just as good as a Steinway."

WE MIGHT GO ON INDEFINITELY citing concerns whose reputation for quantity production is equalled only by the quality of their product; and when we had finished we would have named all the best as well as the largest manufacturers in their respective lines—Baldwin Locomotive, General Electric, Brown & Sharpe, E. P. Allis, Carnegie Steel, Westinghouse Electric, Elgin Watch Tool, U. S. Standard Voting Machine, Bailey-Jones Table, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Hoe Printing Press, Remington Typewriter, Stromberg-Carlson Telephone, Yale Lock, Landis Grinding Tools, Michilin Tires, Brewster Carriages, Hall's Safes, and—Ford Cars.

FORD IS NOW ACKNOWLEDGED LEADER in the automobile industry—but he controls no trust, has no monopoly save on brains, no "corner" save on intelligence, and no advantage save that which experience and foresight give.

WHEN OTHERS WERE MAKING "ONE LUNGERS" Ford introduced "doubles," and he led in each successive step in four-cylinder runabouts and six-cylinder touring cars. Ford foresight seems to be infallible—so much so that it has become a proverb of the trade, "They criticise, but they copy while they criticise Ford."

COMPILE A LIST OF ALL the prominent automobile concerns. Subtract three. The remainder will make sixes for 1908—they follow Ford—two years behind. Here are a few: Thomas, Peerless, Premier, Stearns, Pierce, Winton, Olds, Stoddard-Dayton, Pope, Royal, and a whole troupe of lesser lights, besides those who saw the light this year, Stevens-Duryea, National, etc.

TALKING OF PACE SETTING—that six-cylinder roadster is breaking all records. Mr. Ford called it a "brain storm" at first—said it was extravagant—too much power—too much car—for two persons. Finally agreed to build 25. Sold as soon as announced. 25 more went the same way. Then 50, and now we are going to build another 50—no more; can't possibly do it. If order comes in at once you'll be able to get one. It represents finality—perfection—in high-powered runabout class—never has been defeated in race or hill climb.

EUROPEAN MAKERS, ESPECIALLY IN ENGLAND, are now adopting the Ford system of planetary transmission. They call it "the epicyclic" over there, but it's identical. Other American makers have blindly copied the errors of French and German makers even to that "mechanical crime," the sliding gear.

THEY HAVE NOT COPIED THE 4-CYLINDER RUNABOUT yet—and for a good reason; they have not the capital, the design or facilities for making it at the price. By the time they catch up we'll show them another trick worth two of that. So it has always gone—so it will always go.

BY THE WAY—that was a fine bunch of Ford rear axles 10,000 people saw at the Cleveland Hill Climb last week. Ford sixes and fours trimmed everything in the stock car classes—did it in the usual Ford way—"Easily." A White Steamer, a Pope-Hartford, a Stoddard-Dayton and a couple of Jacksons went down before the "silent cyclone" Ford Six. Of course the "S-40" Roadster and the little $600 Model N had everything their own way, as they always have.

A Word to Agents

All the world knows the Ford Company has been behind orders for the last two years. All the world knows the demand for Ford cars has always exceeded the supply—but that's a tale of the past, so we need not repeat it.

We have shown above what our facilities are to-day. You will observe each month exceeds the previous month. We are adding factory equipment daily—we are building the largest automobile factory in the world, where we will make every part of our car—wheels, body and tires, electric apparatus as well as the forgings, castings and even the steel that enters into them. That means there will be no more delays—no more sales lost because of late or uncertain delivery. We can promise you ten days' delivery, and if it's a case of "got to have it now or lose the sale" we can generally manage it on an hour's notice.

So we are now ready to establish an agency in every city, town and hamlet in the United States. We are prepared to build 3,000 extra cars between now and September 1st, to take care of their requirements.

There are a few things we'll insist on: In towns large enough to justify it the agent must maintain a repair shop, must carry a stock of small parts for replacements, must treat his customers liberally, fairly and courteously—we've had enough of those short-sighted "penny wise and pound foolish" fellows, who charge a good customer for adjusting his carburetor or cleaning a plug—they never get anywhere and they misrepresent Ford policy.

WE WANT MEN OF GOOD REPUTE IN THEIR HOME TOWNS—good, reliable hustlers—mechanics preferred—who will properly represent "Ford Courtesy" as well as Ford cars. We want men who will go into the automobile business in earnest, who will lay plans for the future—men who appreciate that the motor car is no longer a luxury, but an everyday necessity to every business man who isn't rooted to one spot all day. We'll treat you right—copy that in your dealings with customers and you'll win. At present the discount is not so large as on some other cars—but Fords sell themselves, and you'll easily place five Fords while trying to force one of the others on an unwilling customer.

After October 1st those agents who will sign up now and show their fitness and ability meantime, will receive liberal terms—will be placed on the same footing as our old agents.

Large capital is not necessary to obtain this agency—we don't tie you up with a big contract for a large deposit or insist on your disposing of a definite number of cars—we know you will sell as many as we'll give you, and we'll give you all you can sell, promptly. Good reputation and good intentions, backed by hustle and cash to pay for cars as you order them, are the only requisites. The 1908 Ford line will be the most complete, the most comprehensive and the best value ever offered by any maker in the history of the industry.

Write to-day for list of towns that are open in your State. Do it to-day—if you delay some more enterprising man or concern will have "sewed up" your territory.

Keene, N. H., Likely to Be Turning Point in Bay State A. A. Long Run

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Touring Committee of the Bay State Automobile Association is making arrangements for the holding of an endurance contest of over 200 miles on July 8 next. This is rather out of the usual method of touring, but the committee believing that such a contest would prove of material benefit to all who motor and make no end of interest it has taken a step forward and planned for the contest.

The contest will be an endurance test in every sense of the word. Speeding and reckless driving will have no place whatever in the run, as the conditions are such that nothing can be gained by any such actions on the part of the several operators. The cars are divided into two classes, one for runabouts and the other for touring cars, each car to carry its full complement of passengers. Although the route has not been definitely determined there is every reason to believe the turning point will be Keene, N. H. The start and finish will be at the clubhouse in Boston, Keene being made the noonday stop. The committee, consisting of J. C. Kerrison, Harry Fosdick and Colonel Horace G. Kemp had determined upon these conditions.

Conditions of Contest.

"Contestants in the endurance run of the Bay State Automobile Association, to be held July 8, will be required to cover the route on a definite time schedule. An observer will be assigned to each car to take note of all adjustments, repairs and replacements, and to inflict penalties accordingly.

"The route of the endurance run commences at the clubhouse, No. 282 Dartmouth street and proceeds to Keene, N. H., and from that point to Boston. The total distance is slightly in excess of 200 miles, all of which is to be covered in one day. A pilot car will precede the contestants to distribute confetti to mark the route.

"The cars will be divided into two classes. Class A will include all touring cars. Class B will include cars having seating capacity for either two or three persons. The cars entered in each class must be of stock pattern, such as regularly offered for sale. A catalog, describing the type of cars to be entered, must accompany each entry.

Certificates for Cars.

"A suitable certificate will be awarded to each car which finishes with a perfect score. In the event of a single car finishing the run with less penalization than any other car in its class, it will be awarded a silver trophy.

"Each entry for this contest must be accompanied by the entrance fee—$25. The time for receiving entries will expire on July 3, at 6 p. m., at the office of J. C. Kerrison, chairman of the committee, No. 80-82 Summer street, Boston. The club reserves the right to refuse any entry and to return the entrance fee sent in connection therewith. Each entrant shall, on his entry blank, nominate a competent observer, who will be assigned for duty on a car of some other make.

"Each observer shall keep a written record of all adjustments, repairs and replacements made on the car in which he is riding, and the exact time so spent. A penalty of two points shall be inflicted for each minute or fraction thereof spent in making adjustments, repairs or replacements. No penalty shall be inflicted for work of any kind done on tires, but the time spent in repairs shall not be deducted from the running time allowed between the various controls. Contestants will be allowed, without penalization, to fill with water, gasolene and lubricant, to turn up grease cups and to oil the machinery, but everything else done on the car, aside from the normal operations of starting and of operating, shall involve penalties as above stated.

Duties of Observers.

"In addition to the surveillance of the cars in which they are riding, observers will be expected, in so far as it is possible, to make note of all other cars which are laid up along the road, and whether the work being done on them appears to be on the tires or on the machinery.

"Immediately after the entries have closed, a drawing will be made to determine the order of starting. The results of this drawing will immediately be announced and numbers will be assigned to all the cars corresponding with the order of starting. The first car will be started at 6 a. m., or as soon thereafter as the committee may determine, and the other cars will be started at such regular intervals as will be announced beforehand by the committee. Each car will be marked as having started at the time which is assigned to it for starting, regardless of whether or not is is ready to start at such time.

"The committee will establish such checking [illegible] as it may deem proper, and will place a checker at each of these points. A schedule will be furnished to each contestant, fixing the exact time, in hours [illegible] minutes allowed him for passing [illegible] to the next. A car failing to pass [illegible] control at the time fixed by the schedule shall be penalized one point for each minute said car is behind its schedule, and two points for each minute it is ahead of its schedule.

"The time allowed a car for reaching each control shall be reckoned from the time it actually passed the preceding control. This means that [illegible] by control [illegible] the time allowed [illegible] hour and [illegible] reaching [illegible] one hour and twenty minutes [illegible] for the trip from the first control to the second control. A car which started at 6 30 a. m. would be due at the first control at 8 a. m., and, if it were on time here, would be due at the second control at 9 20. If the car, instead of arriving at the first control at 8 a. m., should arrive at 8 05 a. m., the running time allowed to it from the first to the second control would not be changed and the time at which it would be due at the second control would be 9 25 a. m. (This is a variation from the checking system employed in previous contests of the kind in this country, and is believed to be an improvement on the plan which requires a car, if it loses time in one control, to make up such lost time in other controls. The old plan is unfair in that a car which is delayed in an early control is apt to suffer more penalties than a car having the same amount of delay on one of the later controls of the day.)

Checking System.

"Under the checking system employed in this contest, a car which has been late at any control falls back at all the other controls from the order in which it originally started. For example, should the first car be late at any control it will thereafter not be the first car to check in at the other controls, and the number of places which it falls back will be proportionate to its penalization.

"Similarly, a car which passes a control ahead of its schedule will be due at the other controls earlier than had it adhered to schedule.

"In the event of a checker not being at his post of duty when any car is due to pass him it shall become the duty of the observer on the car to make note of the time at which the car passes such checking station.

Flags at Stations.

"Checkers will be placed at such points as may be established by the committee. Each checking station will be designated by a proper flag. The sole duty of the checker will be to mark down the exact time at which each car passes. It shall not be a part of his duty to state when any car may be due to pass him, but, on request, he shall call out the time, in order that there may be no misunderstanding caused by a difference in the watches of the checker and the passengers in the car.

"In the middle of the day, a suitable period will be allowed for luncheon at one of the controls. After checking in at this control, cars must be driven to a parking space, which will be designated by the committee. The cars must at once be vacated by all of their passengers and left within the custody of an official appointed for that purpose. Each car will be due to start from this control on the expiration of the period allowed for luncheon. If, for example, forty minutes is allowed for luncheon, each car will be marked as starting exactly forty minutes after its arrival at this control, whether or not it be ready to start at such time. No repairs on machinery or on tires, no replenishments of gasolene, water, or oil will be permitted within the period allowed for luncheon. Luncheon will be provided at a fixed price, and will be ready when the cars arrive.

"The committee will undertake to have a supply of gasolene ready for contestants at a control which will be approximately half way between the start and the finish. An official of the run will be on duty here, and will supply gasolene at cost without entailing any delay on the part of contestants. Contestants are advised to carry their own funnels.

"If contestants wish to take on gasolene at any other point, they must make their own arrangements for same.

"In all questions concerning the interpretation of the rules or the conduct of the test, the decision of the endurance run committee shall be final. The committee reserves the right to amend these rules as may be expedient for the better management of the test, but, in the event of such amendment, all entrants and other interested parties will receive proper notification.

"Any car which, at any stage of the test, departs from the route marked out by the pilot, will render itself liable to disqualification.

How Cars Must Be Equipped.

"Cars must at all times during the tour carry mufflers, mud-guards and be equipped as per manufacturers' catalog specifications. Cars in class A shall carry not less than four passengers of an average weight of 125 pounds, or their equivalent in ballast, and shall have touring car bodies in the general acceptance of that term. Cars in class B shall carry their full complement of passengers, either two or three persons, of an average of 125 pounds, or their equivalent in ballast.

"Each car shall have the official number which is assigned to it by the committee prominently displayed at all times on each side. No record of any previous performance nor sign, or other indications of the maker's name, other than the nameplate attached to the vehicle as sold to private owners, shall be displayed on any car during the test.

"Contestants must conform to all laws and ordinances and the rules of the road, and any entrant violating any of the provisions of these rules or other rules adopted by the committee, or who shall fail to show due consideration toward other participants in the run, or other users of the highway, may be disqualified by the committee. Any car whose owner or driver shall be arrested for violation of the speed limit laws or any law or ordinance, may, in the discretion of the committee, be disqualified.

"It will be assumed that every entrant is acquainted with these rules, and by entering for the contest, agrees to abide thereby, agrees to accept the official records and authorizes the Bay State Automobile Association to publish them in such manner as it shall determine. Each member shall hold the club harmless and indemnify it against all loss or damage resulting directly or indirectly from, or growing out of the operation, management or control of the car entered by him.

"The club shall not be responsible for any damage that may be done to any car, its passengers or contents during the tour, nor for the theft of any car or any of its accessories or contents."

VALUABLE POINTERS FOR LOCOMOBILISTS

The Locomobile Company of America has issued a neat book of instructions, which should be in the hands of every man who drives a Locomobile. It is written clearly, concisely and to the point, does away with technical terms, telling one how to care for his car in such plain language as not to be misunderstood. The instruction book is enclosed with a neat leather case, with two compartments, such as can be used for the carrying of pamphlets, small maps and various miscellaneous matter regarding automobiles.

CHICAGO EXPERT TO MEND HUB STREETS

Mayor Has Been Out There and He Says Theirs Are Worse Than Boston.

Richard T. Fox of Chicago, comes to Boston to-day to see if he can solve the problem of the citizens' committee of three, of which Banker John F. Moors is chairman, why there is occasional mad activity in repairing the breaks in certain of Boston's streets and why most of the other more useful thoroughfares are neglected and allowed to become full of deep holes and ruts.

If he can find the solution to the riddle, he is to report the facts to the committee and if he fails he will probably make a report and tell why the problem is beyond his ken.

Mr. Fox is Chicago's most famous street expert and he comes here to tell Boston's citizens something about how thoroughfares should be kept up and how much it costs to do this work. He is to be here six weeks and the committee has pledged itself to give him $2,000 for the work.

Mayor Is Amused.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald affects to be amused at the idea of bringing the Chicago expert on street to Boston. The Executive made a flying trip to Chicago himself recently and he says that he found the streets there worse than Boston's.

The Mayor says that a Boston expert should be sent to Chicago rather than a Chicago expert come here. He goes so far as to insist that Boston's streets should be made a standard for excellence rather than Chicago's.

"It's perfectly rediculous," says the Mayor. "Somebody must have been imposed upon."

Mr. Moors, however, does not think that there is anything ridiculous about it. "Because there is a city in the country which has worse streets than Boston has is not a good reason why the citizens of Boston should be complacent," he says.

Thinks It Politics.

Mayor Fitzgerald believes that the whole thing is inspired by the Good Government Association and is part of carefully defined attack upon his administration. Mr. Moors, however, says that there is no politics in it.

"The facts that Mr. Fox's report discloses will determine our subsequent action," says Mr. Moors. "The work has been undertaken at the season furthest removed from political agitation."

Mr. Fox is engaged in doing similar work for a committee of Chicago business men which takes care of certain congested streets in that city. Through his efforts, Mr. Moors says, the street employees are spurred to alert and honest work.

Mr. Moors says that Mr. Fox is to make a thorough investigation of the conditions prevailing in regard to Boston's streets.

LONG TEST FOR THE FISK TIRE

A combined demonstration and test tour will take place this week in the interests of the Fisk tire under the direction of F. A. Drake, New York manager of the Fisk Rubber Company. Mr. Drake has had a Locomobile touring car equipped with the Fisk heavy car type tire and the new removable rim. The car is to be sent by boat to Albany; from that city it will be driven to Buffalo by way of Troy, Schenectady, Binghamton, Elmira, Syracuse, Utica and Rochester.

In each city stops will be made for the purpose of interviewing the various automobilists interested in the Fisk product. On arrival in Buffalo the car will be turned over to Mr. Zimmerman, the Chicago representative of the Fisk Rubber Company, who will drive it to Cleveland preparatory to its entry in the Glidden tour.

THREE DRAGONS IN RELIABILITY RUN

Three Dragon cars have been entered in the Chicago Motor Club reliability run by the Branstetter Motor Company. The run, which is to be held on June 28, will go to Waukegan via Libertyville, Half Day, Wauconda and McHenry. The route has been laid out so as to make cars in the touring and roadster class travel 170 miles, and the runabouts and small cars 140 miles.

The contest already has a large number of entries, among whom are many high-priced, high-class cars, and the test promises to be one of marked interest. H. P. Branstetter, who ought to know, says that if there are to be any clean scores in the run the Dragons will have at least two of them.

AUTO-CARNIVAL AT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City has arranged for a grand automobile carnival, to take place during the week commencing August 5, when the city by the sea will have its annual crowd, and the management of the affair has already [illegible] the support of the city officials of Atlantic City and although the news of the carnival has only been sent out through the local papers of that city, entries for the various events of the week are already coming into the headquarters of the company.

CAMBRIDGE LAWYER AND HEIRESS WED

Cyres Brewer Leads Daughter of Millionaire Harry Whitin to the Altar.

Whitinsville, June 22.—Miss Marion Lovett Whitin, youngest daughter of millionaire Harry T. Whitin, and Cyrus Brewer, a Harvard graduate and attorney of Cambridge, were married at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the village Congregational Church before hundreds of society folk of Boston, New York and Worcester. The bride has been a leader of the smart set and her wedding to-day brought forth an array of wealth and pomp such as this quaint town has rarely ever witnessed.

Rev. A. P. Maxwell of Canton, a former pastor in Northbridge, the home of the bride, officiated, using the Episcopal service.

The church decorations of Easter lilies, palms and laurel, with green predominating, was the work of Mrs. John C. Whitin, aunt of the bride, a famous woman horticulturist. Aside from the bride's costume of white, her attendants wore green silk. The bridesmaids wore green plumes, set off with dainty silver bows on their head dress.

The bride wore a handsome creation of white liberty satin trimmed with imported Irish point lace. She wore orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white orchids.

The bride was given away by her father, Harry T. Whitin, president of the big manufacturing firm of that name in Whitinsville. The maid of honor was Miss Marjorie Whitin, sister of the bride. James Hunnewell of Boston was the best man. The bridesmaids were Florence Smith, Lancaster, Pa.; Elizabeth Crane, Westfield; Helen Hutchins, Westfield, and Elsa Whitin, cousin of the bride, of Whitinsville.

The ushers were Sidney St. Francis Paxter, Portland, Me.; Wilfried Saeger, Saegertown, Pa.; Julian A. Rice, Springfield; Arthur Hutchins, Springfield; Paul Whitin, Northbridge and Elijah Kent Swist, Whittinsville.

Following the church ceremony the bridal party and guests were driven to the "Wayside," the country estate of the bride's father at Northbridge, where the wedding breakfast was served to over 500 guests in a massive tent erected on the lawn.

FLOOD SWEEPS AWAY NEW MEXICO HAMLET

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., June 22.—The Rio Grande, swollen by rains in New Mexico, has passed the danger stage along the valley south of this city and thousands of dollars' worth of damage is being done. Guadalajara, a small hamlet of 700 people in Socoroco County, is reported entirely washed away and the natives homeless.

BOBBY WALTHOUR TO RACE HUGH M'LEAN

Bobby Walthour, the champion pace rider of the world, will make his first appearance in this country since his trip abroad at the Revere track next Saturday night in a twenty-five mile match race with Hugh McLean of Revere.

The blonde-headed Southerner is the whirlwind of the bike track, and had no trouble in defeating the foreigners on the continent behind the big machines. It will be a different matter for him to beat MacLean behind the four house power engines. MacLean won the right to meet Walthour by taking the hour race on Bunker Hill Day from Moran and Collins, and is in shape now and ready to repeat his wonderful successes of the last two years when he beat all the American riders.

Walthour will also be one of the contestants in the fifty-mile race on July 4 for the Boston American diamond medal, which has been won once by McLean, and the Atlanta flyer will have to beat the field in order to win a leg on the valuable championship trophy.

LOWELL AUTO CLUB WILL HOLD RACES

Mr. Heinz of Lowell was in Boston yesterday endeavoring to interest the local trade in the auto races to be held on the highway by the Lowell Automobile Club on July 4. The club has secured permission from the town authorities to use the highway between Lowell and Kingsbury for auto races on that day.

Two five mile events have already been carded. It is possible that the club will hold special mile trials which will give those "crazy with the heat," an opportunity to test the speed of their cars at short distances.

The course is so arranged that the cars can get a two mile start and a two mile finish, and will be so thoroughly policed as to eliminate all danger of accident to pedestrians.

WHITE STEAMER WINS HONORS

Walter White, with his stripped 30-horsepower Model "G" White steamer, captured the honors at the annual hill-climb of the Cleveland Automobile Club, quite as decisively as he did at Wilkes-Barre on Memorial Day. In the Cleveland contest the White steamer not only made the fast est time of the day, 47 2-5 seconds, but also won the two most important events—the free-for-all and the Class A cars weighing from 1,432 to 2,204 pounds.

VOTERS ANGERED BY MAYOR WARDWELL

East Cambridge People Claim Their Needs Are Neglected for Rich Owners.

East Cambridge people will go gunning for the scalp of Mayor Walter C. Wardwell this Fall. They are particularly angry at the reappointment of George Howland Cox, chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners, who has been named for three more years by the Mayor. Too many specimens of a certain citronous fruit commonly called the lemon, it is claimed, have been handed the East Cambridge voters by Mr. Cox.

Mayor Walter C. Wardwell is a non-partisan, yet it is a well-known fact that Democratic votes elected him. The greater part of these votes, over 900, came from Wards 1, 2 and 3, East Cambridge. Under harmonious conditions the Democrats usually reverse these figures.

Commissioners Change Mind.

Some few weeks ago, an order was introduced in the city council asking that suitable playgrounds be established in East Cambridge. This order was referred to the Board of Park Commissioners, and that body reported that the city could not afford to spend any money for such purposes. This was not the opinion of the Park Commissioners last March, when the voters of East Cambridge wanted a playground for the poor children in the most thickly populated portion of the city. But in a few months the commissioners have experienced a sudden change of mind.

A petition has been presented to the city council asking that $200,000 be spent to widen De Wolf street. Harvard graduates and wealthy property owners in the aristocratic section of the city favor this project, for which there is no apparent public necessity, and it is a peculiarly significant fact that all the park commissioners signed the petition.

George Howland Cox, chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners, admitted on the witness stand that he circulated the petition and that he got a large number of his friends to sign it.

East Cambridge Neglected.

Should the De Wolf street widening meet with the approval of the city council, it is certain that the tax rate will be pushed up a few notches. East Cambridge people do not favor the scheme to connect Harvard College with the river parkways.

There is but one athletic field in East Cambridge, and here the children have no chance whatever to enjoy themselves. The field is generally occupied by baseball enthusiasts, who crowd the youngsters out.

North Cambridge is well taken care of by the Rindge Field playground. There are baseball and athletic fields, an outdoor gymnasium, swings, tilts, sand pits and plenty of roaming space. Cambridgeport has the Magazine street bathing beach and playground, and the Broadway common, an excellent breathing space for mothers and sick children. Above Harvard square there is the Cambridge common, where hundreds of mothers and children may be seen on pleasant days.

Mothers and sick children of East Cambridge have been neglected by the politicians who prefer to "stand in" with wealthy property owners rather than listen to the cries of poor children.

Glidden Entries Few Now, but Many Will Likely Send in Names Later

There is a great variation in the estimate of the number of cars that will compete in the forthcoming Glidden tour. The chairman of the A. A. A. Touring Committee places the number at 100 cars, while the secretary of the committee increases the figures 25 per cent., and one writer, who was most pronounced in his condemnation of the tour of a year ago, but who since has been appointed official photographer and general boomer of the tour, says the list will exceed 150 in number.

So it is pretty difficult for one to do any conjecturing as to the full list. It is rather significant, however, that with the start of the tour but three weeks away the combined list of entries for the Glidden and Hower trophies does not exceed thirty in number. Entries are, however, always late in coming in.

Object to Rules.

At present there are those makers who object to certain of the rules, but this is always the case in big touring competitive events and at the final moment a majority decide to take part. This is done for their own good. In the second place, entries always come in late. Many remain in the background to see whether others are going to enter and at the close come in like a flock of sheep. This was so in the "Sealed Bonnet" contest of the Automobile Club of America. Of the nearly fifty entries received in this contest half came in within the last few days. Men with good cars did not care to be left out of the running in that event when other cars of the same class were all entered.

Former great tours have been arranged in such manner that the competitors were in reality upon a mere pleasure jaunt. The touring board of 1907 has combined both the pleasure and competition in such a manner that those who participate will be proud of their performance and pleased with their trip. The travelling is good. There is a variety of it and the scenery is grand.

From the very fact that the Pathfinders made the trip for the most part in hard rains, and in the time which will be scheduled, it may be seen that in July, when the roads are dry, the cars will be able to maintain their schedule.

Route Changed.

Some alterations in the routing of the Glidden Tour had to be made. From Canton to Pittsburg has been resurveyed and a route of slightly less than 100 miles via Beaver Falls has been named, saving the rough travelling and terrible hills encountered by the Pathfinders when they went over the route in May in the six-cylindered Arrow. Another route from Baltimore to Philadelphia has also been arranged to avoid the crossing of the river at Havre de Grace by railroad ferry. The tourists will travel 172 miles by the new route, but will follow new toll roads via York and Lancaster and will have no complaint to make over the increase of the distance.

EIGHT FORD CARS IN GLIDDEN TOUR

No fewer than eight Ford cars will compete in the Glidden and Hower contest. For two years past Ford cars, without which no race, hill climb or other event used to be considered complete, have been conspicuous by their absence. This was because the rapid growth of the company's business demanded the undivided time and attention of Henry Ford and his engineering force, and it was more imperative that cars be gotten out to meet urgent demand than that new records be made.

This season we will see and hear much of Fords, for already these cars have won several races and hill climbs—in fact, so far they have won practically every event in which they have been enlisted. Last week two sixes and a four won everything in their respective classes in the Cleveland hill climb.

"A flock of Fords," consisting of six of the famous four-cylinder runabouts and two six-cylinder touring cars, will compete in the two branches of the Glidden—the sixes in the tour and the runabouts in the Hower trophy contest. Ford proposes to settle for all time the erroneous idea which some folks hold, that the light runabouts are capable only of "Brussels carpet" performances. The recent record from Boston to Bretton Woods, in the White Mountains, was one feather in the Ford cap—he now covets the Glidden.

THOMAS FLYER GETS NO. 13

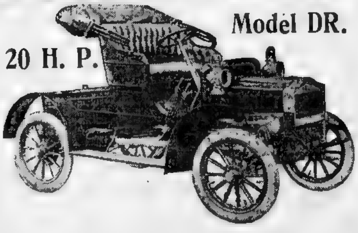
Although they represent the same parent body, the touring and the racing boards of the American Automobile Association are not guided by each other in their actions. Perhaps the most marked evidence of this is in the numbers assigned to cars in contests under their control. The racing board has always avoided the use of No. 13, owing to the superstitions [illegible] that attach to that number. In one year a large X was used instead [illegible] the 1906 race the number [illegible] altogether. The touring board [illegible] has never recognized the fears of the superstitious ones, and has always dealt out the supposedly fateful numeral to the car that drew it.

This year 13 goes to the Thomas Flyer entered by George M. Davis through the Automobile Club of Buffalo. No effort was made to have any change made, although it is considered probable that the touring board would have given the car some other number had a change been requested. In a way this car will be in a contest all its own, that of Thomas reliability against the hoodooistic qualities of 13, and there is little doubt that its progress through the tour will be watched with a good deal of interest.

The "Maxwell"

Model DR.

20 H. P.



A state of Maine doctor recently wrote a Boston gentleman asking his advice as to the purchase of an automobile; he replied as follows:

"I cannot urge you too strongly to buy a Maxwell car, because I know that the Maxwell Touring Car taken dollar for dollar offers the greatest value of any car I have ever seen.

"The Maxwell is not a luxury—it is a distinct utility—a strong, reliable, economical and trouble-proof motor car. I own a 20 H. P. Maxwell Touring Car which cost me with equipment $1610.00, two of my neighbors own cars which cost respectively $2500.00 and $2750. I go anywhere they go just as comfortably and much more economically."

(Name furnished if wanted.)

The Maxwell Car is in a class by itself. We can prove it to you.

REVERE SELECTMEN CLOSE OCEAN AVENUE TO MOTORISTS.

The selectmen of the Town of Revere have decreed that on and after July 1 next Ocean avenue, between Shirley and Revere streets, in that town, shall be closed to automobile traffic. This decision was taken after the automobile accident of Friday last.

This takes away from the motorists all opportunity to get their cars within gun shot of the beach boulevard, between those two points, and operates decidedly against the motorists. It is rather a drastic act on the part of the board, and will cause those motorists who have heretofore used Ocean avenue, during the closed season on the boulevard, as the connecting link between Lynn and Boston, to go around the horn.

The avenue is a poorly paved thoroughfare at its best, but at that it is a little better than the Lynn turnpike. Hereafter motorists who have been prone to use the thoroughfare in going to Lynn will turn off the boulevard at Broadway, Revere, and continue thence to Revere street, where the right turn can be made in order to reach the boulevard north of Revere street. In closing this avenue at all hours to the motor vehicles the board goes even further than the Metropolitan Park Commissioners. They permit the use of the boulevard roads before 11 a. m. and after 2 p. m.

While there might be some justice in this recent act of the Selectmen of Revere, as Ocean avenue, at the best, is a most dangerous place during the Summer season, it might have gone still further and prohibited horse-drawn vehicles from using the same thoroughfare, as under the conditions that always exist on that avenue, and especially in the vicinity of the State Bath House, where hundreds endeavor to crowd on to one and the same car the chances of accident are most numerous. The street railroad might as well have the entire and uninterrupted use of that thoroughfare. There would be as much justice in the elimination of horse-drawn vehicles from Ocean avenue as there is in the case of motor vehicles. The former would, however, have a decided advantage, as they are free to use the boulevard roads at all times, while the motorist, the man who goes around with death in his eye, ever on the alert for an opportunity to kill or maim, must preforce use the back roads.

HAD WRONG MEASURE.

A man of noted shrewdness in financial circles had his chauffeur with him examining a foreign car he contemplated buying. The question of the clearance from the ground was being discussed, and the financier got down to measure the space beneath with a pocket rule. The chauffeur exclaimed: "But you can't measure a French car with an American rule, you know!" The smart employer said, "That's so," and straightened up. A moment later his mind cleared and he spoke unprintably.

BAY STATE A. A. TO HOLD BIG OUTING

Autoists Will Make Merry at the Wentworth Saturday and Sunday.

The second outing of the Bay State Automobile Asociation, to be held at the Wentworth, Newcastle, netx Saturday and Sunday, should prove most attractive. The success which greeted the first run of the season to Gloucester was such as to cause the touring committee to believe that the coming outing will be most popular. The hotel is pleasingly situated, within an afternoon's ride of Boston proper, and with the attractions offered there should certainly be a large attendance. The majority of the participants will leave Boston at the close of business Saturday, making an easy run to Newcastle, reaching there in season for dinner. Then in the evening hours will come the ball, and the bridge whist. Sunday morning will be spent in and around the hotel, where it will be remembered the peace treaty was signed. The return home will be made as the individual members may elect.

As the Wentworth is managed by Frank Hall, a popular member of the club, there is reason to believe that the outpouring of members will be in keeping with the long distance runs of previous years. Those who have not already announced their intention of participating in this outing should immediately notify the chairman of the committee, as it is necessary to know the number of participants in order to make proper reservations.

BIG ROAD RACE JULY 4.

The fifty-mile road cycling race, for the championship of the United States and Canada, will be run on July 4th, and the large number of entries indicates that this event is growing in popularity each year. The contest will be over the Valley Stream course on Long Island, starting at 9 a. m from West's Hotel. Entries have been received from the New England States and as far west as Chicago. The prizes will be many and valuable, consisting of high-grade bicycles, gold watches, silver tea sets, etc.

HOW BIG AUTOS ARE DESIGNED

"Few people realize the enormous amount of work necessary to produce a new model of automobile," says F. C. Gilbert, sales manager of the Pope Motor Car Company.

"The general idea is, that one man with a couple of assistants do the work, but this is not so at the Pope-Toledo factory. Here we have a group of specialists, each an expert on the particular part of the car of which he is in charge. That is, we have a specialist in charge of the engine, another the transmission, another the running gear, another the body, and so on; even have a designer who specializes on mud guards. Each specialist has several assistants. In charge of this group of specialists is the chief draftsman, who works with the consulting engineer, and under the direction of the general manager Mr. Schaaf. This is far more expensive than if we had one general designer, but the result is much more satisfactory, as this corps of specialists gives us the combined result from many brains."

BERLIET'S GOOD RECORD.

In figuring out the all-around showing of the cars in the New York to Albany endurance run it is found that the Berliet was the only make of which three started and three finished. One Berliet carried eight persons another seven and the third five, although the rules required only four to be carried in a car, and all went through without any mechanical troubles. The competing car did not so much as have its hood raised during the 208-mile drive through the rain and mud.

MAXWELL-BRISCOE CO.'S NEW PLANT

Newcastle, Ind., June 22.—Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks to-day paid tribute to the young industrial giant of automobile manufacture and to one of the most prominent exponents of the industry by being the chief figure and delivering the principal address at the laying of the cornerstone of the immense new plant being erected here by the Maxwell Briscoe Company of New York.

That Newcastle was chosen as the site for this new factory which will employ 2,500 workmen, at a time when it seemed that the manufacturers had ceased to expand, means everything to the future of the town and the whole place was in festival dress to-day, with flags flying everywhere. A holiday was declared for the occation and hundreds came from many directions.

Fine weather favored, and ten thousand persons stood in the open to hear the address of the Vice-President of the United States, who predicted the certain supremacy of the American motor car, and declared that the erection of such a plant by such a firm as the Maxwell Briscoe Company to build cars for the people, rather than the classes, marks an important epoch in automobile history. Other speakers were Judge E. H. Bundy, the Hon. C. B. Hernley and the Hon. Mark E. Foraker.

Benjamin Briscoe handed a silver trowel to Vice-President Fairbanks, and he laid the cornerstone, assisted by the Junior Order of American Mechanics. The Knights of Pythias acted as escort, and there were twenty odd orders in uniform in attendance.

A parchment scroll bearing two thousand names was among the papers laid away in the cornerstone. Special trains bringing visitors were run here for the event from New York, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and Indianapolis. The new plant is expected to be in operation by December.

FORD MOTOR CO. BRANCHING OUT

A deal of more than ordinary magnitude and one that means much for the future of the Detroit motor car industry was consummated recently when the Ford Motor Company purchased the entire assets of the Ford Manufacturing Company in that city. This deal is another [illegible] in the chain of Henry Ford's cherished plans to incorporate in one mammoth concern and under one roof all the Ford interests, and this, it is said, contemplates the building of the largest motor car factory in the world.

This plant will at once be commenced on the Highland Park property, consisting of sixty acres recently purchased by the Ford Motor Company from the S[illegible]en's estate, and as rapidly as possible the various departments will be installed there.

The Ford Manufacturing Company was organized in November 1905. It was incorporated for the purpose of manufacturing under contract with the Ford Motor Company, motors, transmissions, axles and other parts of the Ford runabout.

It owns one of the most complete and modern manufacturing plants known to the industry. Practically all of its machinery is less than fifteen months old and of a highly specialized automatic type.

Recently the plant, which had been held under lease, was purchased outright by the Ford Motor Company.

Its location being about four miles from the Ford Motor Company's plant caused considerable inconvenience in the transportation of parts to the assembling factory. It was also it possible for Mr. Ford the engineering head of the concern, to give us as much of his personal attention to the manufacture of parts as he deemed necessary.

OLD HOME WEEK IN AUTO WORLD

Committeee Has $1,000 for Prizes, and a Good Card Will Be Arranged.

With something like $1,000 at its command, the committee on the automobile celebrations connected with Old Home Week should be able to offer prizes and trophies that will bring the best cars of the country to compete for honor and glory in whatever events may be determined upon.

The composition of the committee is such as to insure success in whatever it undertakes. The idea of holding gymkhana games, a parade and hill-climbing contest is recognized as most excellent, as at least two of these events always appeal to those who are thorough believers in the rational use of motor vehicles.

A parade while spectacular in the extreme is always objectionable to those who participate therein, as the speed attained is always such as to place a great tax upon the engines and no small amount of strain on the nerves of the operators. By all means let us have the games and the hill climb.

MIKE TWIN IS HOT AFTER JOE GANS

Cambridge Boxer is Seeking Match with Black Wonder for Revenge.

Mike Twin Sullivan is getting restless again to get in the ring and beat some of the welterweights who think that he has not got a rightful claim to the title since he beat Honey Mellody and Jimmy Gardner, and came into the Boston American office yesterday to hurl a world wide defi.

He will meet anybody in the country in his class, and is especially anxious to meet Joe Gans at 142 pounds, weigh in at 3 o'clock.

Tom McCary of the Pacific A. C. of Los Angeles has announced that he will make an offer of a $10,000 purse for the match between Gans and Mike Twin.

Mike is determined that he will wipe out the defeat that Gans holds over him, and claims that when they last met that Joe double-crossed him, as the fight had previously been declared off and then was put on at short notice. Gans, being aware of the conditions, trained carefully, while Sullivan laid off, but went into the ring in order to save his forfeit.

Mike was never in better condition in his life, and weighs to-day stripped 148 pounds.

24 HOUR DERBY WILL BE HELD AT BRIGHTON TRACK.

The Long Island Automobile Club has become associated with the United States Motor Racing Association in the running of the twenty-four-hour automobile endurance Derby to be held at Brighton Beach track on August 9 and 10. The well-known Brooklyn organization will appoint all the officials for the contest and otherwise generally supervise it. R. G. Kelsey, chairman of the contest committee of the Long Island Automobile Club, is taking a very active part in arranging the details.

It has been demonstrated in previous long distance races that a track can be lighted so that the contestants can drive as fast and as safely during the night as they can in the day time. In view of this plans have been made to include a fifty and a one hundred mile race in the Brighton Beach program, holding these events on the afternoon and early evening of August 9, and starting the twenty-four-hour race later the same evening. The entry blanks will be sent out shortly.

PREMIER ENGINE RAN 384 HOURS

4,017 Miles Have Been Covered in Non-stop Run of Bridgeport Auto Club.

Four thousand and seventeen is the number of miles which the official odometer indicated when last heard from that the 24-horsepower Premier touring car had covered in the non-stop run now being promoted under the auspices of the Bridgeport Automobile Club. The engine of this car had run continuously for 384 hours without a single adjustment having been made, and bore every evidence of being in as perfect running condition as when the non-stop run begun on June 3.

More than local interest is being exhibited among autoists as to the outcome of what promises to be a formidable rival for the longest non-stop record yet made, both in point of hours run continuously, as well as in the number of miles covered. As many as ten passengers have been carried in the car at one time to demonstrate the power, reliability and superior staying qualities of this car.

THE DIAGRAM "ILLUSTRATES" A SNAPPY PLAY BY THE DOCTORS. IT TOOK NINE MEN TO STOP THE BALL

With the sun shining brightly on 2,500 spectators and a confused mass of fantastically garbed contestants, once Medford's most prominent and dignified citizens, the much advertised "Who's Who" baseball game between the business and professional men of historic old Medford was called at the close of the fifth inning on account of darkness yesterday afternoon.

As ex-Mayor Michael F. Dwyer, the [illegible] umpire, called the game, scores of excited players gathered about Herman [illegible], the official scorer, and clamored for the score. [illegible] beneath [illegible] score cards about four feet square, [illegible] announced that he thought the score stood nine to seven in favor of the [illegible]. He wasn't sure whether it was nineteen to seven or seventeen [illegible] in favor of either side. Both sides [illegible] victory and, formed in line [illegible] amateur band, [illegible] marched to City Hall, where [illegible].

Game Cleared $2,000.

Nearly $2,000 is estimated to have been raised as the result of "Who's Who at baseball" in Medford. The proceeds are to be equally divided between the Home for Aged Men and Women and the High School [illegible] Association. The idea originated by M. M. Converse, president of the Medford Citizens' Association. The game was called at 3:00 o'clock when the players on both sides, headed by Field Marshal John D. Street and staff and the Mystic Music Makers, marched twice about the High School [illegible] park.

Field Marshal Street was mounted on "Maud." As soon as the procession started, "Maud" balked, and Field Marshal [illegible] dressed in a [illegible] jumper with [illegible] of the [illegible] the size of a wash [illegible], com[illegible] a retreat. "Maud" refused to go [illegible] and insisted on kicking the length of the field. The marshal was finally rescued by the [illegible] police men.

Field Marshal Street was followed, or was to have been, by the two umpires, Mayor Clifford M. Brewer and ex-Mayor Michael F. Dwyer. The two umpires wore judges' wigs and robes, and carried imposing looking books under their arms.

Then came the amateur band, called the "Mystic Music Makers," followed by the business men with the professional men last. Each party carried banners.

As the game started Frank S. Gilkey, leader of the [illegible] started to sing. John E. Gates, the hardware dealer, dressed as an Italian organ grinder with handorgan and monkey, also started up. He had hardly got a good start when the band interrupted. For a few minutes each strove to drown the other, until the band finally triumphed.

The business men with a team of forty-one [illegible] were the first at the bat. J. O. Wright, New England superintendent of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, was the first man up. He [illegible] and scored the first run a few minutes later on a hit by Winton B. [illegible]. W[illegible] no sooner crossed the plate when he was arrested for exceeding the speed limit. Umpire Dwyer [illegible] him out anyway because he didn't touch third base. [illegible] a [illegible] ball whereupon a red cross ambulance with two attendants hurried on to the field and carried [illegible] off.

In the last of the first inning Rev. Leon Yorke, was the batter for the Professionals. The first [illegible] pitched was a high one, but the Reverend [illegible] for it and sent it along the ground [illegible] the field. He sprinted like a [illegible] for second, but was ruled out.

New Batch of Players.

As each succeeding inning was played a new batch of players was called to the bat. In the second Alderman [illegible], president of the Medford Club, was hit by a pitched ball [illegible] was carried off in the ambulance. Alderman [illegible] criticized the decision of an umpire and was arrested by the officers.

In the last of the second Dr. J. W. Bean of the Board of Health stepped to the bat and [illegible] to disrobe. He removed his trousers and was taken arrested for improper conduct by the police. He came to the bat again and hit to the centre field fence. The little rotund doctor, weight about 250, ran like a deer although he was puffing like a tow boat when he reached the bases a few minutes later on a base hit by Dr. C. W. McPherson, the dentist.

In the third Alderman Crosw[illegible] fanned and ran for first. The ball reached first before he started, but when he finally reached the base he made a beautiful slide. He was ruled out but refused to leave the base. The ambulance was called and the two attendants placed him on a stretcher. Dr. Smith was [illegible] and gave him an inspection with [illegible].

[illegible] W[illegible] had been pitching for the business men, [illegible] the fourth he was replaced by [illegible] Wa[illegible], the 300-pound expressman. When Wa[illegible] came to bat in the next inning he connected with the ball for the first and only home run in the game. He carried his 300 pounds around the bases like a young [illegible] and was rewarded with a drink of Moxie when he completed the circuit.

Six Men on Three Bases.

In the fifth inning the bases were occupied with at least two runners the greater part of the time. Edward P. Boynton, commodore of the Boston Yacht Club, got a base hit for the business men. When the Professionals came to the bat the mixup began. [illegible] Brewster, of the High School, hit a foul about forty feet to the right of first base. It was ruled fair. A few minutes later he was forced by Dr. Draper, who in turn was forced by City Solicitor Edward E. Elder. Although all were ruled out they refused to leave the bases and a little later there were six Professionals occupying three bases.

About this time ex-Alderman Tom Smith found occasion to speak to Umpire Mayor Brewer criticising his decision. He was ordered off the field. In a minute he came back with several confederates in an automobile. Mayor Brewer saw them coming and started to run. They overtook him and, in spite of his struggles, threw him into the auto and drove off. During the kidnapping, Mayor Brewer held back using Alderman Papsee's coat to hold on by. The coat gave way, and ripped up the seam to the collar.

TWO ARE INJURED IN MAD RUNAWAY

Whitman, June 22.—Frightened at some unaccountable [illegible] a spirited horse owned by [illegible] and driven by Henry D. [illegible] went on a wild runaway through the centre of the town late to-day. Before [illegible] the horse's death, two persons were injured and the carriage was wrecked.

Miss Mabel Goodw[illegible], daughter of the driver, and Henry W. [illegible], both of whom were in the carriage, were [illegible] when the carriage was hurled into a telegraph pole. The half [illegible] after freeing the carriage [illegible] the animal ran head-on into a tree. He was shot to end his agony.

MEIKLE BOY WINS GRAMMAR DIPLOMA

Lad Kept Abreast Class Despite Long Stay in Jail Awaiting Trial.

Overjoyed that he is to be given his diploma of graduation from the Lewis Grammar School next Thursday, together with the forty-one other fellow pupils, Edgar Weston Meikle, the sixteen-year-old Lynn boy recently acquitted of the charge of killing his father, has resolved to stick to his studies and enter the high school in the Fall.

When his principal, Anna G. Hunt, of the school promised him last week that he would receive his coveted sheepskin and that his eight months confinement in the Salem jail, pending the murder trial, would in no way affect his standing, Edgar nearly wept for joy.

Next Saturday before Judges Stevens and Sanderson, who sat at his trial, will be argued the plea that they provide for the expenses of the trial through which the boy passed. His counsel, Attorney Richard L. Sisk, will plead that the learned judges order funds from the county treasurer to be set aside to meet the burden of expense, so that the boy's little sum of money, left him by his dead parent, may not be wiped out and he made to face the world penniless.

PLAN ARREST TODAY IN VENNELL CASE

New Jersey Police Get New Clue in the Mystery of Sunset Lake.

Bridgton, N. J., June 22.—Developments to-day in the investigation of the death of Marie Vennell, victim of the strange tragedy in Sunset Lake, last Tuesday, led the authorities to believe to-night that an arrest might be made to-morrow. George Evans, who was boating with Miss Vennell and who said he had to fight her off to keep her from drowning him, too, when the boat upset, is being watched.

Marie Vennell had told her friends that she was engaged but would not tell even her mother more of her fiance than that his name was "George."

EX-SENATOR BAKER DEAD IN KANSAS

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., June 22.—Former United States Senator Lucien Baker died to-day. He was born in Fulton County, O., in 1846, and served in the United States Senate from 1895 to 1901 as a Republican. He was shot accidentally in a street in Leavenworth in 1871 by a man who was engaged in a fight with Colonel D. R. Anthony, two blocks away. He never fully recovered from the wound.

On July 4 next, the Clan-na-Gael will hold a monster demonstration at Oak Island Grove, Revere, and the occasion will be the means of bringing together prominent Irishmen from all over the country. The sentiments of the Irish people will be voiced against the English rule in Ireland and resolutions condemning the seizure of American vessels by Canadian officials will be presented and acted upon.

A feature of the day will be the presence of Governor Higgings of Rhode Island, and John Devoy of New York, both of whom will speak for the cause of Ireland and outline the most potent means in procuring independence for Ireland.

Another feature of equal moment will be the presence of representatives of the new Sinn Fein organization, who will advocate a boycott of all English made goods.

In addition to the speechmaking there will be present athletes from all over the State, who will participate in the games to be held in the afternoon under the direction of the New England Amateur Athletic Association.

REVOLT SWEEPING LIKE TIDAL WAVE OVER SOUTH OF FRANCE.

Wine Growers Infuriated by Deputies Vote of Confidence in Clemenceau Ministry.

CABINET IS TOTTERING

Clemenceau Offers to Release All Prisoners If Order Is Maintained.

RIOTERS ATTACK TROOPS

Grave Fear of Mighty Revolution Felt by Authorities in Paris.

PARIS, June 22.—Revolt, unchecked and fast developing into revolution, is sweeping southern France like a tidal wave. Animosity, deep and swift-growing, is enveloping the present ministry.

Clemenceau is in disfavor and his downfall is demanded by his enemies, predicted by neutrals and feared by his friends. In consequence France to-night faces a real crisis. Sunday, always the dangerous day in times of political unrest, is awaited with fear and trembling.

News that the deputies had extended a vote of confidence to the present government reached the out-of-the-way districts in the disaffected wine-growing provinces of Southern France today. The result was an intensification of the animosity toward the government and an increase in the general disorders.

Grave Cabinet Crisis.

Meanwhile the situation with the Clemenceau ministry continues grave. Senators and deputies from the South called upon President Fallieres late this afternoon and begged him to take a hand in the interest of their oppressed constituents.

Fallieres replied that he had no constitutional right to do this, but the deputation rejoiced a few hours later when the deputies, despite their vote of confidence, wrung from them by Clemenceau yesterday, voted to take up the detailed discussion on next Monday of the new law drawn up for the relief of the southern district.

All reports from the southern district to-night indicate a better situation from the standpoint of the military, but a growing seriousness of the conditions among the striking wine growers

Montpelier Storm Centre.

Montpelier seems to be the storm centre. One of the most serious riots of the present disorders occurred there at an early hour to-day.

Following a night of wild excitement the strikers formed in line and paraded through the streets, brandishing torches and occasionally discharging firearms into the air and shooting out street lights. Finally the mob, many of them drunk with wine, attacked the police station and theatre, hurling cobble stones through the windows and doors.

The dragoons responded to a riot call and charged the mob in the public square. Several rioters fired at the soldiers and the dragoons, hard pressed, drew their sabres and charged the gang, finally clearing the streets after scores had been wounded and forty arrests made

The 142d Regiment left Montpelier today for Beziers, where trouble was brewing. The wine growers, however, blocked the railroad tracks with scores of plows and carts. The soldiers then retreated and sought to leave by a roundabout course, but scouts apprised the mob of their intention and the railroad tracks were blown up. A number of trains were allowed to enter Montpelier to-day, but to-night all the rails had been cut or blown up and all the telegraph lines broken.

Rioting in Agde.

Reports from Agde say that there has been considerable minor rioting in that vicinity and some destruction of property

Beziers reports that a number of railroads have been blown up north of the city and that Narbonne is cut off as a result of the severing of telegraph lines.

Perpignan was also the scene of considerable disorder, a state assessor who called there to-day barely escaping with his life when the populace learned of his presence. The office of the prefecture of police was again fired, but the flames were extinguished without great damage.

In all the affected regions preparations are being made for demonstrations to-morrow and serious trouble seems inevitable

BAPTISM OF ACID FOR NEW RELIGIOUS SECT

Citizens of Ohio Town Vent Indignation With Drastic Measures.

Alliance, Ohio, June 22.—A delegation of thirty citizens invaded the "gift of tongues" camp shortly after midnight today, armed with "squirt guns" filled with diluted sulphuric acid. They turned the fiery stuff on the worshippers, burning the clothes off some. Over a dozen were painfully injured. Rev. Mr. Lupton, the leader, was so seriously burned that a physician is attending him to-day.

Indignation against Lupton and his camp is strong.

LAWYER WEDS WIDOW OF MILLIONAIRE CLIENT

Pittsfield, June 22—Mrs. George R. Finch, widow of a millionaire paper manufacturer of Glen Falls, N. Y., and George A. Ostrander of Albany, a prominent lawyer and residuary legatee under the will of Finch, were married at Lenox today. Ostrander's wife recently secured a divorce. She tried to have it annulled when she heard he was to marry Mrs. Finch, who relinquishes a $25,000 annuity through her marriage to Ostrander.

Heir to Millions, Secretly Wed, Passes Honeymoon in Asylum

Harry Orrendorf, Placed in Sanitarium by Mother, Married Kindergarten Teacher.

There have been few stranger honeymoons than that being spent by Harry Cassell Orrendorff, heir to the millions of the late T. C. Orrendorff, who founded the great cartridge belt factory which bears his name in Worcester.

Young Orrendorff, who has been an inmate of Dr. Wadsworth's sanitarium at South Norwalk, Ct., for a year and a half, was secretly married last January to Miss Mary Fleming Nash, a pretty young kindergarten teacher.

News of that marriage has just become public. It has surprised the many people in Boston and Worcester who know the members of the Orrendorff family.

Mrs. Orrendorff, widow of the manufacturer and mother of Harry Orrendorff, placed her son in the sanitarium because he was a nervous wreck.

After he was placed in the institution he met and fell in love with Miss Nash, who lives in South Norwalk

Last January they went to New York, where they were secretly married

Orrendorff took a fine suite of rooms in the Clifford House in South Norwalk for his bride. He and she are together much of the time, automobiling and walking about the town

Crime Hunters Get Bonus Raised, Big Campaign Expected

Four Ministers Selected by Town Fathers and Given $1,000 to Purify the Village.

Wareham, June 22.—It having been demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that the constables in this town do not overwork themselves making arrests for the bonus of fifty cents, which attaches to each arrest, the town has increased that bonus to $2. It is expected that a campaign of crime-hunting will ensue.

The town, at its meeting, also voted $1,000 for the suppression of crime. Four ministers were selected to supervise the disposition of this fund

The speakers at the town meeting declared that there has been altogether too much automobile scorching through the town, and also that the fences and gates and windows have not been held as sacred as they should have been.

The Selectmen had their pay raised from $100 a year to $300. Dr. R. T. Delano sugested $400 a year as a proper wage, but that suggestion was voted down as too extravagant.

Judge Wood of Boise Is Farm Born and Spent His Youth in Maine

There were several children, among them Misses Frances and Nellie Wood, who are now living with the judge and his family at Boise. The mother of Judge Wood was the village beauty. He has a cousin here in the person of the Hon. Elliott Wood, postmaster of Winthrop, and formerly of the United States Senate.

TO DEDICATE HOAR STATUE IN OCTOBER

Memorial to Famous Bay State Senator to Stand on Worcester Common.

Worcester, June 22.—Word was received in this city to-day that the statue of the late Senator George Frisbie Hoar, which is to be placed on the Common, will be shipped to this city in the course of a fortnight. Daniel Chester French, the sculptor who is at work on the statue, says that the statue will closely resemble the plaster cast that was acted favorably upon by the "Hoar Statue Committee" a short time ago. The former Senator is seen in his favorite sitting attitude with a law book spread out on his knee. The statue will be dedicated in October.

'WE'LL GET HAYWOOD FREED,' DECLARE COUNSEL FOR THE MINER.

Lawyers for Defence Confident That They Will Shatter Prosecution's Case.

BIG ARRAY OF WITNESSES

BOISE, Idaho, June 22.—"William Haywood will be freed and his character vindicated!"

Confident of the prospects of not only clearing their client from the charge of murdering ex-Governor Steunenberg but of proving that the Western Federation of Miners was not involved in the Orchard crimes, Haywood's counsel make this triumphant prediction.

With an imposing array of witnesses ready to testify in Haywood's behalf at the opening of the defence on Monday next, the defence hopes to shatter the Orchard testimony and acquit Haywood.

It is conceded on all sides here to-day that the defense is in a splendid tactical position, and with any kind of a fair answer to the evidence of the State it is the general belief that a verdict of not guilty will be returned.

Clarence Darrow's opening address to the jury will be made Monday, to which day court has adjourned.

Must Go to Jury.

The Haywood case must go to the jury. The prosecution closed yesterday, and the defence promptly asked the court to direct a verdict of not guilty on the ground that no case had been made out against the defendant

Judge Wood denied the motion.

"The court is thoroughly satisfied that this case should go to the jury," he said. "If I thought otherwise I would not hesitate so to rule."

The motion of the defence to dismiss the indictment against Haywood was accompanied by brilliant arguments made by Richardson and Darrow for the defence and replied to by Borah for the State.

The arguments were followed closely by a crowded courtroom, the contentions of the defence being particularly interesting in that they presented a complete review of the prosecution's case and the construction and value placed upon it by the defence.

The points upon which the defence based its motion for a dismissal of the indictment were as follows

Points Defence Claims.

First—The only testimony which tends to connect the defendant, William D. Haywood, charged in the indictment herein, is of Harry Orchard, who testified that he was an accomplice in the commission of said offence

Second—Because the testimony of the alleged accomplice in this case is uncorroborated by any other evidence which, in itself and without the testimony of an accomplice, tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offence charged.

Third—The corroboration of the accomplice witness in this case is not sufficient, since it fails to show the commission of the offence, of the circumstances thereof, in any way which connects or tends to connect this defendant therewith

Fourth—Because the testimony in the case is insufficient to warrant the rendition of a verdict or the pronouncement of sentence thereof, under Section No. 7,872 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Idaho.

Fifth—Because the evidence received in the case is immaterial, irrelevant and insufficient upon which to found a verdict or to sustain one if found

"Evidence Has Failed."

Sixth—Because the evidence wholy fails to disclose that the defendant is in anywise connected with or had knowledge of the perpetration of the offence charged in the indictment.

Seventh—Because, within it is charged that the defendant was personally present and did commit the crime therein charged upon the body of Frank Steunenberg on or about the thirtieth day of December, 1905, nevertheless, the evidence fails to disclose that he was present, or that he was either an aider or procurer of any one connected with or who committed the alleged offence which compassed the death of the said Frank Steunenberg in this, to wit: That the evidence which tends to connect the defendant on trial therewith is given solely and wholly by one Harry Orchard, who admits that he himself was guilty of the perpetration thereof, and without the testimony of the said Harry Orchard there is no testimony or evidence which in any wise tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the said offence, and the said testimony and evidence of the said Harry Orchard is wholy uncorroborated, within the meaning and intent of Section 7,871 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Idaho

Mark Twain Guest of King Edward at Big Garden Party

American Prince of Humorists One of Most Conspicuous Personages in Windsor's Thousands.

Windsor, England, June 22.—More than 7,000 guests assembled in the grounds of Windsor Castle this afternoon to attend the garden party with which King Edward wound up Ascot week

The gathering was representative of all classes of society, including members of the royal family, the King of Siam, Prince and Princess Andrew of Greece, the diplomatic corps, members of Parliament, bishops and dissenters, a large representation of Americans, many military and naval officers and a host of notabilities, conspicuous among whom was Mark Twain

The royal party had its headquarters in two large marquees, where the visitors paid their respects. The bands of the Horse Guards and Grenadier Guards furnished the music. Many tons of flowers were used in the decoration of the tents, in which refreshments were served. Ten special trains brought the London guests, and all the roads leading to Windsor were crowded with motor cars.

HERE ARE THREE BABIES WAITING TO BE ADOPTED

Their mother is dead, their father, who loves them dearly, finds the double burden of earning the daily bread and caring for the little ones too hard. Who will adopt them and take care of them as a mother would?

The group shows the young Aunt Selma, who is at present taking care of the motherless babies, with tiny Jerry, two weeks old, in her lap and little Tiva playing on the floor, unmindful of the sorrow that has befallen her. In the medallion is shown Elba, the sturdy little descendant of the brave Vikings.

CLEVELAND'S TRIBUTE READ AT BAYARD STATUE UNVEILING

Thousands at Washington Attend Dedication of Memorial to Eminent Son of Deleware.

Wilmington, Del., June 22.—In the presence of the largest crowd that ever assembled at a public function in Delaware, a memorial statue of Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State in President Cleveland's first Cabinet, former United States Senator and the first American ambassador to the Court of St. James, was unveiled here this afternoon with exercises of the simplest character

The absence of former President Cleveland, who is ill at his home in Princeton, caused general regret Mr. Cleveland was to have delivered the principal address, and in his absence the address was read by John Bassett Moore, professor of international law at Columbia University. Other participants in the ceremonies were Judge George Gray of the United States Circuit Court, and Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, D. D., bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Delaware

Unveiled by Mrs. Bayard.

Mrs. Mary Clymer Bayard, widow of the statesman honored, unveiled the statue.

The statue is of bronze. It stands on a pedestal of Brandywine rock five feet high, two sides of which are to be ornamented by bronze tablets. One tablet will bear the inscription:

Thomas Francis Bayard, born October 29, 1828 Died September 28, 1898

Bayard is the purest and most patriotic man I know Grover Cleveland

After paying a lofty tribute to his former associates, Mr. Cleveland's speech concluded

"While in the strife of party activity a tendency is too often apparent in party management to rely for success on demagogic sophistries and dextrous sleight-of-hand, the best indication the past has furnished of our national security and perpetuity has been found in the acknowledgment by political parties, and that in stress of weather, if they are to regain or retain popular confidence and support, they must turn to the leadership and counsels of such men as Thomas F Bayard

"Best Receipt for Happiness."

"At this time there are among us thoughtful men—not in the least given to hysteria—who fear that evil portents are to be found in our political skies. Whether their fears are substantial or not, a mere hint of national peril should cause every loyal American to wish devoutly that as a guaranty of greater safety there were in the present generation of our political life, more men as wise, as disinterested, as bravely devoted to duty as he whose memory we are honoring to-day

"The youth of our land should learn from the record of this useful life that duty to God, to country and to 'clear belief strengthened into a conviction' is 'the best receipt for happiness—for an exaltation above the power of material conditions.' Let them learn too that their privileges of American citizenship impose upon them the obligation of sober preparation for the custody and preservation of the finest and best government ever vouchsafed to humanity

"Let us be steadfast in our belief, unmoved by clamor and untempted by an inordinate desire for success at any cost of principles and consistency. Thus shall we serve at any cost of principles and consistency. Thus shall we serve our country best, thus shall we know a joy 'that mere success can never know,' and thus will it be that the life we here memorialize shall not have been lived in vain."

HOMES WANTED FOR 3 PRETTY BABIES

Motherless Children, Bright and Beautiful, Are Given Away for Adoption.

ADOPTION.

FOUR BRIGHT and healthy children, ranging from 3 weeks to 3 years, two elder girls and two younger boys; may be adopted by one or more families. For particulars, apply to ADAM LEHTO, 1 Sturteiant st. Norwood, Mass.

Here are three bright babies to be given away to any family for the mere asking.

First there's Ebba, a bright two-year-old, with flaxen curls and big China blue eyes that easily tell of Viking ancestry. Next comes Tiva, a tiny lad of a year, who also has merry blue eyes and light hair. Then there's Jerry, last and least, for he has lived in this big busy world only four weeks, and, as yet, he has not told a soul what he thinks of it or whether he wants to be adopted or not Jerry's eyes are blue when he isn't sleeping, but that at present seems to be about all he cares to do. Perhaps his hair will be flaxen like his big two-year-old brother's, but at this time there isn't enough of it to make it safe to prophesy

Mother Died a Week Ago.

The father of these babies is Adam Lehto, who lives in a small frame cotage in the Finnish settlement of Norwood. His wife died a week ago, and he is so discouraged and earns such small wages that he has advertised all his babes for adoption

Until yesterday there were four of them Mrs. Boggla, a generous-hearted Swedish woman who lives on Chapel street, Norwood, and has a comfortable home, took four year-old Gertrude to bring up as her own

Adam Lehto is a heart-broken and weary man. He says he does not earn sufficient money to hire a housekeeper who would care for his children as a mother should, and so he resolved to let them all go.

Aunt Cares for Them.

For the past week the dead mother's sister, Selma Alfors, has been caring for the babes. She is seventeen and has a bright Finnish face.

"I love the children," she said yesterday in broken English, "but I cannot take care of them. My brother-in-law cannot pay me, and I don't know how to sew and do all the things that my sister did Soon I am going to be married myself, and I feel that I can't stay here. They will be better off if some good family takes them."

The Lehto children live in three small rooms. The house still shows the magic touch of a mother For there are white muslin curtains at the windows and many little fancy ornaments about the rooms made by her. Everything is clean and neat. Tiva gurgles and kicks in his crib, and close by in a cradle sleeps Jerry. Ebba spends most of the time playing about the dooryard.

GERMANY STIRRED BY SCANDAL IN THE ROYAL FAMILY.

Socialists See in Nobles' Degradation Opportunity of Gaining Political Power.

KAISER'S COUSIN INVOLVED

Newspaper Man's Exposure Disgraces Fatherland's Proudest Names.

MAY INVOLVE THE KAISER

Europe Astonished by the Revelation of Graft and Favoritism in Imperial Circles.

BERLIN, June 22.—With indictments of pernicious conduct menacing Prince Philip Eulenburg and at least three other Eulenburgs, Commander of Berlin Count von Moltke and Count Hohenau, Lieutenant-General and the Kaiser's cousin, the third powerful party in the Fatherland, the Socialists, are preparing to mend their late defeat at the ballot box and improve it at the expense of the highborn gentlemen named.

Bebel, the gray-haired leader of the party and royalty's most outspoken enemy, has just served notice on the government that in the Fall he will "revamp the whole dirty mess," comprising an exposure of royal graft and favoritism such as the continent of Europe has not seen since Panama and the Third Empire.

Thus the Kaiser's friends, the Eulenburgs, Moltkes, Hohenaus, et al, are facing two-fold prosecution. The findings of the Grand Jury may force them to self-destruction—for no Prussian noble of exalted rank will submit to the degradation of a trial on such charges—while the Reichstag, at the same time, may condemn them to disgorge the salaries and perquisites they enjoyed so long by the Emperor's favor. As all the parties, except the Hohenaus, are comparatively poor, social as well as material ruin must be their ultimate fate.

Fall of Powerful Family.

The awful significance of it all will be apparent when it is recalled that Philip Eulenburg has made and unmade the chancellors of the empire ever since William II mounted the throne. He had a hand in the unmaking of Bismarck; he discharged Caprivi; he nominated Hohenlohe and later on sent him on his way out of Wilhelmstrasse rejoicing; Buelow was Eulenburg's choice; because he was not in the humor to accept it himself he designated the then ambassador for the post.

To-day the two men are enemies, and Eulenburg would have discharged Prince Buelow several months ago if it had not been for the fact that his erstwhile friend had got wind of the criminal carryings on of the "round table."

The Commander of Berlin is nearest to the imperial person, waits upon him daily, and hence wields immense political power.

The disgraced Hohenaus—they likewise rose Dr. Wood fashion—are offsprings of a left handed marriage of the Kaiser's uncle with a royal maid of honor. As imperial relatives they were always above gossip, and up to a few weeks ago the average Berliner would have considered it lese majeste even to hint at the terrible stories about their depravity current in court circles.

Compared with the above Baron Von Holstein, who was forced to resign his post in the Foreign Office, is small fry socially, nevertheless, his disgrace came as a shock to diplomacy the world over, for next to Prince Eulenberg, the Baron was the moving power in making and unmaking German ambassadors and diplomats ever since the days of Bismarck

As previous cables stated, the Fatherland has to thank a "mere newspaper man" for the exposure of this most infamous gang of political tricksters and cancers on the body politic

Newspaper Man Made Exposure.

Maximillian Harden, editor of the "Zukunft" (Future), at one time the friend and confident of Bismarck, began his crusade against the Round Table in November last. The noble hornets, intensely aroused, tried to quiet the editor by threats of the duello. In a single day Harden was the recipient of half a dozen challenges. But Harden had but one answer for all, viz: "I am a gentleman and do not fight with scoundrels. You and your gang are too dirty a lot to bother with."

In the last decade alone Eulenberg and the other members of the Round Table, have fattened at the public expense to the extent of millions, it is charged; not only did they all get all the fat plums for themselves that their positions warranted, but they saddled the public service with scores of drones and incompetents who, it is hinted, were not ungrateful to their patrons

The Round Table was exceedingly well organized; it had a powerful press agent in Baron Holstein, commander-in-chief of the official, or "reptile," press and brow-beater-in-ordinary to German newspapers in general.

For several months Holstein had an elaborate plan under way to silence Harden's paper by seizing the publication as a menace to the State. Then, in self-defence the editor added to his other charges that of immorality such as destroyed Oscar Wilde and brought the whole guilty crew to book

Simultaneously the anonymous letter scandal which disgraced the Berlin court between 1893 and 1895 is revived The authors of the pernicious missives directed against the Emperor, Empress, royal princes and princesses, courtiers and all ladies men were never discovered, though several influential people were arrested and disgraced on suspicion It is now claimed that the members of the Round Table were responsible for most of them, particularly those that charged certain high personages with vices.

15,000 TO MARCH IN SHRINERS' BIG FETE

Members of Order Invade Boston for Celebration.

ALEPPO TEMPLE IS HOST

Observes 25th Anniversary. Memorial Service To-Day at Mechanics Hall.

Aleppo Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Oasis of Boston, observe their twenty fifth anniversary to-day and to-morrow with the assistance of over ten thousand visiting Shriners from all parts of the country.

Boston has never seen such a gathering of members of the Arabic Order as will be here for the next two days. So freely have the invitations to come and help Aleppo Temple observe the event been answered that the committee believes there will be fully fifteen thousand men in the parade on Monday afternoon.

This observance is not all joy. This afternoon at 2:30 is held the memorial service for the departed members of the Temple in Mechanics Hall. The program that has been arranged by the general committee promises one of the most impressive services that has ever been held by any organization.

Chorus and Symphony Orchestra.

Potentate Charles G. Henry presides at the services. The soloists include Mrs. Marie S. Sundelius, soprano; Mrs. Margaret G. Guckenberger, contralto; Harold S. Tripp, tenor and Charles Delmont, bass. They will be assisted by a large chorus and an orchestra composed of fifty members of the Boston Symphony under the direction of Benjamin Guckenberger.

The oration is delivered by Past Imperial Potentate John H. Atwood of Leavenworth, Kansas.

There will be a recitation of "He Who Died at Azan," from the Arabic, by Mrs. Elvie Burnett Willard.

The invocation is by Noble Rev. R. Perry Bush.

On Monday morning at 10 o'clock occurs the conferring of the Order on the candidates at Mechanics Building. Recorder Benjamin W. Rowell had over three hundred applications last night. These candidates will be made full-fledged Nobles at the ceremonial on Monday.

Big Parade Monday.

Monday afternoon is the big parade. There will be probably 15,000 men in line, each wearing full evening dress and a Shriner's fez. While it is generally understood that evening dress shall not be worn before 6 o'clock, yet that costume in the Shrine may be worn at any hour of the day when in parade.

All Shriners who are visiting in Boston are invited to take part in the parade, and as special guests Aleppo Temple will have the officers and Arab patrols of Palestine Temple of Providence, Kora Temple of Lewiston, Me., Melha Temple of Springfield and Bektash Temple of Concord, N. H.

Past Potentate James S. Blake is chief marshal and Charles H. Porter chief of staff.

Three bands assist the paraders and at the conclusion a stand up free luncheon will be served in Mechanics Building. There will be food for 15,000 or all who come, according to the committee, which consists of Nobles William A. Patenaude, Clarendon E. Holman, George Bieller, Jr., and Henry B. Perkins.

In the parade Mrs. Zilla Aleppo, the Temple's camel, and her two-year-old daughter, Miss Ozan Aleppo, will be features that will attract general attention.

March in Three Divisions.

The parade starts at 1 o'clock from Commonwealth avenue and Arlington streets, and moves through Beacon, Boylston and Tremont streets to Winter, countermarching to Boylston street, Washington, Summer, High, Congress, State, Washington, School, Beacon and Arlington streets, Commonwealth avenue, Dartmouth street to Huntington avenue, where it will be dismissed.

The Shriners will march in three divisions, each headed by a band. This is the committee which has charge of the affair:

20,000 ODD FELLOWS TO MEET AT REVERE

45 States Will Send Delegations to Annual Field Day Sports at Point of Pines.

TO TAKE PLACE JUNE 29

The second annual field day of the Odd Fellows of Eastern Massachusetts which will be held at the Point of Pines, Revere, on Saturday next, promises to be the biggest event of the kind ever held here. All indications are that there will be an attendance of over 20,000, including local Odd Fellows, visiting members of the order, their wives, families and friends. From every part of the country word is coming of delegations that will join in this biggest of clambakes and get-[illegible].

Although nominally given under the auspices of the Odd Fellows of Eastern Massachusetts, there will be immense pilgrimages of whole lodges, encampments, cantons and Rebekas to the Mecca at Revere from every point in the State as well as from the other forty five States in the Union.

From Far Off Montana.

The invitation is a general one and has been spread broadcast throughout the land. Think of a man out in Montana getting an invitation to come and eat clams, enter a potato race and watch the fireworks in or near Boston. And yet hundreds of them are coming from places as far away—not to eat clams or run races or watch the fireworks, but to meet brother Odd Fellows from every section and to show that railroad mileage doesn't count in comparison with the bigness of the order itself and the breadth of its tenets of good fellowship.

The committee in charge of arrangements has provided a most interesting program, including a special shore dinner, competitive drills, dancing and games. There will be many costly prizes for the athletes and the tacticians, and the glorious outing, which begins at 10 a. m. and ends at 10:30 p. m., will end with a grand display of fireworks.

Owing to the enormous crowd expected the committee in charge has thoughtfully provided for a Red Cross hospital, with physicians, nurses and attendants, to minister to the overfatigued and to be prepared for any emergency that could arise.

123 Lodges to Attend.

Up to date 123 subordinate lodges have accepted the invitation to attend in a body, and thousands of friends outside of the order will accompany the visitors, in order to take advantage of such a memorable occasion.

Elaborate preparations are being completed for the reception of the visitors, especially those from a distance. Many of the latter will, of course, come several days ahead of the field day and take advantage of their presence in Boston to visit the places of historical interest. For these, special reception committees will be named and their stay will be made especially pleasant.

Point of Pines is being fitted up for this festive gathering of an army of 20,000. Great preparations have to be made to handle such a crowd at dinner and suitable decorations are being completed.

LAWN FETE TO AID PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

Brookline Young Women Work to Make St. Mary Garden Party Success.

With the many handsome young women of the parish working day and night to make the affair a success, the committee in charge of the annual garden party of the Church of St. Mary of the Assumption, Brookline, to be held at the church grounds Thursday, June 27, do not doubt that the outdoor fete will be of the most substantial benefit to the church fund.

Since the idea of the party was first broached and the young ladies were enlisted in the cause of making the party a financial success they have walked from one end of the town to the other interesting parishioners and others in the party. Their efforts have met with success, and from present indications the party will eclipse all such previous ones.

Barn Dance in Town Hall.

The Rev. Lawrence J. Glynn, who is in active charge of the garden party, under the supervision of the pastor, the Rev. Michael T. McManus, P. R., hopes that it will realize $1,000, at least. The proceeds will be added to the fund for the erection of the parochial school, which is to open next September.

Many features incident to the garden party have been held and are being arranged for. Among the most prominent will be the illustrated lecture to be delivered in the Town Hall by Michael J. Dwyer, Sunday evening, June 23, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. He will have for his subject "An Evening with Thomas Moore" and his long study of the theme promises a most delightful affair. A quartet, composed of Miss Mary Crowley, soprano; Miss Theresa Magenis, contralto; Joseph Judge, tenor; and Bennett Benjamin, bass, will assist, and James M. Whelan of the Cathedral will be accompanist.

On the evening before the garden party, Wednesday, June 26, a barn party will be held in the Town Hall, under the auspices of the young men of the parish. In securing this, the largest hall in the town, the committee in charge of the dance feel that they are to be congratulated for the hall has not been permitted by the Selectmen to be used for a dancing for the past eight years.

Selectmen to Be Judges.

A monster attendance is expected and all must appear in farmer costume. The five members of the Board of Selectmen have also agreed to act as judges of the best costumes in the hall. Before appearing in the hall the young men, numbering about 200, will parade about the town dressed in their fanciful costumes and carrying torches.

The garden party will be held from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m., and music by the Letter Carrier's band will be furnished from 4 p. m. There will be four parish tables with many side shows, presided over by the laedi sof the parish, and all sorts of amusement will be provided. Athletic games in the afternoon and two tug-of-war matches in the evening will be among the features.

TWINS CRIPPLES, DOCTOR IS SUED

Springfield Physicians Aroused Over Paralytics' Action Against Practitioner.

Springfield, June 22.—Both the medical and lay world are deeply interested in the suit pending in the Superior Court against "Professor" W. E. E. Jewelle, to recover $325 paid to him by Louis Yelenik of West Springfield, the father of the unfortunate little Yelenik twins who were stricken several years ago with incurable paralysis.

Yelenik wants the return of the money

Yelenik wants the return of the money cure the boys even after the members of the Springfield Medical Society had pronounced them [illegible] relief. Judge Schofield has taken the case under advisement. Jewelle was recently convicted in the Superior Court for practicing medicine without a diploma and the Medical Society has been watching him carefully.

The story of the Yelenik twins, Emil and Stephen, who are now twelve years of age, is a remarkable one. Of the eleven Yelenik children they are the only ones who are not in rugged health.

One morning [illegible] awakened by their mother it was found that they could scarcely walk. They appeared to be almost totally paralyzed below the waist. The case puzzled the doctors, who declared them to be beyond the reach of medical aid.

"Professor" Jewelle persuaded the father, it is alleged, to send the boys to his sanitarium.

The father, according to his testimony, mortgaged his house and paid over every cent to Jewelle for their care.

At last the father could raise no more money and the boys were removed to their home. They had grown worse and were helpless.

The little fellows presented a pathetic appearance in court, where they were carried during the trial of the case and aroused much sympathy.

EJECTED RECEIVER, MUST PAY $10 FINE

For failing to recognize the authority of the United States Circuit Court, in the person of W. Edwin Ulmer as receiver for the Musical Railway at Revere Beach, Joseph Tombino was adjudged in contempt of court by Judge Lowell yesterday and fined $10. [illegible] ejected Receiver Ulmer from the railway when the latter undertook to take charge of the property.

Judge Dodge also ordered the appointment of Receiver Ulmer vacated because at the time of his appointment the true situation was not presented to the court. By his action the receiver appointed by Judge Fessenden of the State court is allowed to resume possession of the property at Revere.

COPPER STOCK GOES DOWN; PROFITS RISE

The More the Companies Earn, the Lower the Price of Securities Go.

Boston "coppers" have continued on the downward price-scale, while the companies which the securities represent have maintained the record-breaking earnings that have been completely divorced from company earnings. The various issues that are dealt in on the Boston Stock Exchange are now from 25 to 30 per cent lower than they were in January. The more the copper producing companies have earned in the high priced metal market the lower the shares have dropped in value. The strange situation now presents itself where an expectation of copper conditions are presaging a general upswing in the prices of copper shares to follow a reduction in the price of copper metal.

In other words, it is expected that when the present uncertainty regarding the metal market shall be relieved by a reduction in the price of the red metal the market for the copper shares will be improved.

Sellers Are Bearish.

Some consumers and some interests which are occasionally large sellers of copper, are very bearish in their talk. In fact, the situation is exaggerated. If there is any great fall off in the consumption of copper no one in the trade seems to know it.

Advices from abroad show that the visible supply of copper in Europe had declined another 500 tons by the middle of June, and the reports from the principal producing camps for the first five months of the year show that over 17,000,000 pounds less of copper have been produced than for the same period of 1906.

In only one month so far in 1907 has the production exceeded the figures for the corresponding months of last year. In the meantime consumption has used up practically all the available supplies of the metal to the end of July.

Buyers Opportunity Near.

A local authority on copper said, yesterday:

"The critical moment for the users of copper is almost at hand. Their supplies of the metal will hardly last many weeks longer and about July 1 it will be necessary for the big consumers to make contracts for deliveries for the rest of the year.

"The common story is that producers will make offerings at a considerable concession in price, even as low as 20 cents per pound, but none of the big companies has made any concession and they all are unanimous that the price of the metal will remain where it is for a few weeks."

What is generally expected is a reduction of two or three cents per pound, which will continue until the metal market has been stimulated. At present, Lake copper is quoted at 24½ cents, and electrolytic from 23¾ to 24 cents. These prices are merely nominal, however, for there are practically no bids or offerings.

NEVADA MINING STRONG ON CURB

Goldfield Daisy Goes to $1.60. Heavy Buying of Goldfield Stocks in Frisco.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 22.—Nevada mining stocks were the only active features on the curb market to-day. Goldfield Daisy was the leader with an advance to $1.60. Goldfield Consolidated stock was strong. The expectation of a reduction in the price of copper metal has hurt the market for stocks in copper mining companies and has diverted public attention to the Gold shares. The production now going on by these companies is starting a moderate boom which is expected to grow.

After the close of the market in New York there was heavy buying of the Goldfield stocks in San Francisco by wire from New York. The advance on the New York curb of Goldfield Daisy from $1.30 to $1.75 uncovered an unwieldy short interest, which immediately put orders in the San Francisco market. The stock sold at $2 a share in San Francisco. The excitement in this stock was the chief feature of the mining market.

Transactions in other shares were on a light scale. It is said that there are other stocks in the mining list in a similar position, and conservative brokers are warning their customers against selling these shares without first being sure they can borrow them.

With the return of Thomas W. Lawson, Wall street expects great activity in the mining shares.

STOCK MARKET STAGNANT, CLOSES DULLEST DAY AND WEEK IN THE YEAR

BIG WITHDRAWAL OF CASH FROM BANKS

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

New York, June 22.—Although there are many persons in the financial world who believe that certain individuals are standing in the way of an improved market, the underlying conditions are such that it is doubtful whether any group of financiers can control the situation absolutely. The fact with which they have to reckon at present is the withdrawal of money from the banks by small depositors everywhere, and by large depositors in several localities.

There are perhaps seven thousand national banks, State banks and trust companies in the United States. It would not be excessive to say there has been withdrawn in all parts of the United States cash averaging $10,000 to each institution. This would make $70,000,000 in cash withdrawn from circulation.

As each dollar in the banks amounts to four dollars in credit, it actually means that almost $300,000,000 of business credit has been destroyed as a result of the lack of confidence. This fact alone is enough to account for all the upsets in the stock market and for the reports of shrinking business. That the operation is going on in Europe as well as in America is proven by the universal demand for cash.

LOSSES EXCEEDED GAINS IN BOSTON

$18,000,000 in Gold Exported During Week Likely to Reach $25,000,000.

One of the dullest of stock market weeks was brought to its fitting culmination yesterday by the dullest day of the year. At times the stock market was absolutely stagnant. At times a weak, listless movement changed prices a fraction of a point. Taken as a whole, the days trading showed that stocks were almost too tired to move at all.

Prices receded again, in New York, throughout practically the entire list. In Boston the losses exceeded the gains in number. The total sales on the two exchanges together aggregated only a little over 60,000 shares. In the larger city the total was 55,000 shares. The totals in themselves, small as they were, did not tell the full story of lifelessness, apathy and entire lack of spirit. At times the whirr of the tickers was not to be heard at all.

Palyed-out Market.

The tape was easy to read. It told of a played-out market, of "professional" trading that has resulted in a sold-to-a-standstill market. Public interest, as expressed by stock dealings, is a minus quantity. With the habitual traders thus left in control, as they have been for weeks, the prevailing tendency has been to sell stocks, profits to be made, of course, by repurchasing them at lower prices. There is no buying power, and the net result is that there is almost no stock market.

Wall street seems to be undergoing a period of hating itself. The rare days of June have brought no sunshine into the gloom of professional gambling between professionals. The Summer days have given the outside public other things to think of beside stock speculation. One of these things is the prospect of its passing a pleasant Summer somewhere if it does not engage quarters in the stock market. It had a somewhat prolonged stay in that resort early last Spring.

Events of the Week.

Resumption of gold exports, the cutting of a melon by the Adams Express Company, delay in the declaration of an unchanged Reading dividend, the address of Frank A. Vanderlip at Jamestown, and a favorable bank statement—these were the principal events of the week in the New York stock market. All of them together were unable to lift the market out of the state already mentioned.

With the amount of gold engaged for shipment during the week, the total amount has reached about $18,000,000 on the present movement. In spite of this steady outflow of gold, sterling exchange has maintained remarkable firmness. It is the opinion of a number of international bankers that the end of the movement is not yet in sight. Present indications are that it will not stop until the exports reach $25,000,000.

Paris has taken most of the gold, but London entered the field Friday as a bidder for the metal. This was regarded as significant, and the fact that the Bank of England saw fit to make advances representing the equivalent of interest in transit as a special inducement for securing the precious metal is taken to mean that its requirements will not be satisfied by the $1,750,000 so far engaged for shipment thither. Part of this amount was engaged Friday, the Russo-Chinese Bank yesterday taking $650,000 more for shipment.

Money Market Quiet.

The money market has remained quiet. Aside from the foreign exchange firmness, the general monetary situation is somewhat easier. Call money has been shaded a fraction, but banks are not lending much money except for the accommodation of their own customers, and those the most persistent. The banks both in New York and Boston, are preparing for heavy demands to be made on them for payment of July 1 interest and dividends.

The announcement that the Adams Express Company was to distribute an amount to stockholders which means a 200 per cent dividend on capitalization was received with glee, naturally, by the shareholders, but it was regarded by the rest with mixed emotions. The natural query that now suggests itself is as to what was done with all these millions previously, and as to whose benefit they were used. The public is not likely to be informed on this point.

Reading was sold below par because the "know-it-alls" declared the dividend rate would not be increased. Then it was raised on the statement from the same wiseacres that it would be increased. Then came the day of the directors meeting and Wall Street held its breath. The meeting adjourned without taking any action, and there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth. The next day, however, an unchanged dividend rate was announced. The price has not changed much since then, and the speculators have probably won or lost little in consequence.

The Boston Market.

In Boston, the trading during the week was marked by an almost complete absence of public interest. Those who own stocks outright are not anxious to sell them at present low prices, and, because of the prevailing uncertainty, do not care to add to their holdings. This left the market to the professionals, and the result was narrowness and dulness. The stagnation of the market was so pronounced at times that brokers left the "floor." On the day of the Harvard-Yale baseball game, for instance, there was a general exodus from the Exchange. At such times it were folly to expect any developments of interest.

Yesterday in New York was a fitting climax of a dull week. In the opening minutes it was hard to tell, except by the clock, that the market had opened. Inside of ten minutes the tape began to take short rests and continued to do so throughout the rest of the session. The trading during the first hour was the smallest for one hour on any day in several years. It was a deplorable showing even for a Summer Saturday. Price changes were unimportant, but most of them were losses. Union Pacific, Amalgamated, Reading, Steel common and Smelters were the only stocks to make any approach to activity. The closing came dull and generally lower.

Trading in Boston yesterday brought the ridiculously low total of less than 7,000 shares for the entire session. Except for Telephone rights, there was nothing in any way approaching activity. The price of the right advanced from 35 to 44 cents.

Prices were irregular, with Isle Royale and Calumet & Arizona the only strong features. The former gained 1½ to 17 and the latter 2 to 156. Utah, which had been a feature earlier in the week, had lost its activity several days ago. Copper Range remained quiet, as did other formerly active stocks, such as American Telephone, Shoe Machinery, Green-Cananea and North Butte.

Financial Truth—Free.

If you have ever invested money, ever expect to invest money, or speculate, or to own stocks, bonds, or to have money in bank, you should be on the mailing list of "King's Financial Bulletin," the financial newspaper that fears no one, is subsidized by no one, and wears no muzzle of any man, clique or corporation.

It is free to you for the asking—your name in a letter or on a postal card will bring it.

It is a real newspaper, of eight pages, published every Saturday. It contains all the financial news. It KNOWS the Truth, the whole Truth and nothing but the Truth, and TELLS it, about the entire field of finance and investment.

It points the way to intelligent and profitable investment. More: It warns the investor against the traps and pitfalls that are set for his feet.

Its "Bureau of Investigation" alone should make you want "King's Financial Bulletin." This bureau is conducted by William B. Snow, for twelve years an inspector in the Post Office Department. Readers of "King's Financial Bulletin" are at liberty to ask for information regarding any and all securities offered for sale, and through the "Bureau of Investigation" they receive, free of cost, exactly the same service that Inspector Snow gave the government before he became identified with my office and the "Bulletin."

"King's Financial Bulletin" calls a spade a spade every time, and the language used is always plain United States English. It saves the investors of America millions of dollars by its warnings and advice—makes for them millions more by pointing out safe, sane and profitable investments.

That's why more than 50,000 investors read it each week—because it is original, sound, worthy of confidence—because it is different.

"King's Financial Bulletin" will be sent you free, postpaid, if you but write for it. Address C. F. KING, Financial Agent, Entire Fourth Floor, Journal Building, Boston, or Entire Second Floor, St. James Building, Broadway and 26th Street, New York.

THESE FIVE BEAUTIFUL BABIES WIN PRIZES

LAST DAY OF BIG CONTEST IS JULY 14

First Announcement of Closing Made To-day; Give the Baby a Chance.

By Eleanor Ames.

THE first announcement of the actual date of the closing of the Boston American's "Most Beautiful Baby" Contest is made to-day.

The last picture will be received on Sunday, July 14, and after that "all the King's horses and all the King's men" couldn't get the prettiest baby in the world a chance to join in this remarkable contest.

There are enough photographs of Greater Boston babies in the hands of the judges already to drive the average person distracted, but the five women artists who have undertaken the role of Paris have entered the work with greatest earnestness, determined not to be overwhelmed by the avalanche of material from which they have to select, accepting their responsibilities seriously and determined above all things upon fair play.

These judges—Mrs. Jean Paul Selinger, Mrs. Henry H. Kitson, Miss Jean Oliver, Miss Mary L. Macomber and Miss Sally Cross—are not only locally famous, but their names are synonymous with art excellence and genius in America and Europe.

No Time Like the Present.

So bear in mind that numbers will not appall these judges. You can send in your darling's picture at the very last second, if you WILL procrastinate, and have just as good a chance to win the fortune which awaits the Infantile Venus or Adonis. But don't procrastinate too long, for the letter box of the Baby Contest Editor will shut tight at the appointed moment.

This contest is now seventeen weeks old, and it is amazing the number of beautiful babies it has brought to the attention of the judges. Mother pride is proverbial, but one can readily understand the pride that must be felt by the parents of the little ones whose photos have been sent in to this office. Such winsome, cunning, dear little faces have never before been seen together, and the task of selection must indeed be a difficult one.

Last Candidate May Get $500.

The competition is becoming keener and keener; the photographs are coming in with a rush, and so, too, are letters from over-anxious mothers, who think that because they have not seen their little ones' pictures in the Sunday groups they are already thrown out of the contest. It is well, therefore, to explain once for all that although the one hundred babies who in the course of twenty weeks of the contest have their pictures printed in the Sunday American (five every Sunday), are winners of the smaller prizes offered by this paper, the decision for the $500 cash prize will be made from the ENTIRE COLLECTION of photographs.

So cheer up, and remember that baby has a chance at the grand prize up to the very last second, and remember what that prize is—FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash, which will be put into a bank until baby is eighteen years of age, drawing interest all those years. When "baby" is ready for college or business that $500 will have grown to something like ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS.

It would give the girl a fine education.

It would set the boy up in a modest business and perhaps be the beginning of a prosperous career.

For Mother and Babe.

And don't forget the $100 prize for the most charming picture of "MOTHER AND BABY"—that's another prize worth winning, and the rival pictures are coming in by the hundreds. Beautiful pictures they are, too, some of them of Madonna-like sweetness, and the Art Committee in charge of the awards are enthusiastic over the revelation of beauty brought about by this contest.

HOST OF BEAUTIES TROOP MERRILY FROM BABYLAND

Classified List of Latest Little Ones from Towns and Cities in Greater Boston.

Here is the complete list of names of all babies whose pictures have been received in the Boston Sunday American prize baby contest from Wednesday, June 12, to Wednesday, June 19.

A complete list of those babies whose pictures had been received and classified up to Wednesday, June 12, was published last Sunday.

Next Sunday in the Boston Sunday American there will be published a list of names of all babies whose photographs reached this office after the list printed to-day was made up.

So great is the volume of photographs being received in this contest that it is impossible to classify those names received later than Wednesday of each week for publication on the following Sunday. They will be in the next list.

HEARS SHOT; FINDS MAN DEAD WITH GUN

Lawrence, June 22.—Hearing a shot in the direction of the woods, opposite the General Hospital, a young man employed near by hurried there and found Julius H. Paul with a bullet hole in his head and his hand clutching a revolver. Life was extinct. Paul was employed by the White Sewing Machine Company and was about thirty-five [illegible]

$50 A WORD FOR SAYING OF YOUR BABY

American Ready to Pay Hub Little One More Than Twain or Kippling Get.

THE standard rate on the highest priced periodicals for words of wisdom or good cheer from men and women of note is five cents a word.

Mark Twain is credited with getting several times that rate—Rudyard Kipling even more.

Imagine your little three-year-old Willie or four-year-old Bessie being paid FIFTY DOLLARS A WORD!

No one in the world was ever paid so much before—yet Willie or Bessie has a chance to do just that thing.

$500 for Saying.

The Boston American will take FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS' worth of just such literature, and what is more will pay for it in an investment that will perhaps double and treble in value by the time the winner is of age.

Have you a baby? Can you afford to let him or her neglect a chance that costs only a little attention on your part and a postage stamp?

Send in your child's bright sayings. Thousands of others have already done so and some of the contributions have been startling in their cleverness, but you are not a true parent if you have not unbounded faith in the supremacy of your own darling.

Some baby is going to get that prize—a $500 Dorchester building lot and, to paraphrase "Florodora," "it might as well be yours."

Can You Beat Them?

Just compare the following gems with the cute thing your little one innocently springs before the minister at dinner or confides to you at bedtime and remember that there may be the foundation of a great fortune in your child's charming flash of wit.

The contest is fast drawing to a close, but who knows? It may be the very last contribution to the contest that wins the prize. Send your contribution to the Brightest Baby Contest Editor, Boston American.

Listen to these:

WANTED HAIR TO GROW

WILLIE, my little boy, aged two and a half years, saw me watering the plants one day and asked what I was doing that for. I said, "To make them grow." One day a friend came to see me and brought her two-months-old baby, which she left in the carriage in the dining room. Willie was amusing him while we sat in the kitchen. Suddenly the baby started to cry and I went in to see what the trouble was. I found Willie pouring cold water on the baby's head. I asked him what he did it for, and he said:

"I want to make his hair grow."

MRS. MAY RUSSELL.
No. 577 Freeport street, Neponset.

WOULDN'T TELL

ONE [illegible] my little niece, Jennie, [illegible] and one-half years, was saying her prayers. She began "Now I lay me" and got as far as "God bless mamma, 'Nana,' and——" here she stopped and with a quick look up at 'Nana' went on—"Oh, Lord, I won't say anything about Billy to-night. Nana is here and she don't like him, and make Jennie a good girl." Needless to say, 'Nana' became greatly interested in the paper at that moment.

MRS. C. D. TUTTLE.
Roxbury.

GOD BLESS PAPA

MARIA is two years and eight months old. I have taught her to say "God bless papa" in her prayers. Saturday evening her papa came home, bringing some bananas. No sooner had she eaten one than she wanted another, which I refused her. Her papa, coming from the other room at that moment, and not knowing that I had refused to give her another banana, gave her one. In a loud voice she immediately exclaimed, "God bless papa."

MRS. W. MOTTOLA,
No. 7 Rollins court, Roxbury.

WANTED LAST NUMBER

LITTLE Paul, aged four, while counting one day, stopped when he got to ten and said to his elder brother:

"If one is the first number, what is the last number?"

His name is Paul Henry Moss.

MRS. S. E. MOSS.
No. 30 Wave avenue, Beachmont.

GROWING MADE HIM BIG

FRANKLIN is four years old, and quite tall for his age. One day he came running in and his aunt asked him what made him so big. "Growing, of course," he answered.

FRANKLIN'S MAMMA.
No. 562 Eighth street, South Boston.

IT WAS A SHAME

GERTRUDE FRASER, who has just reached the age of eighteen months, loves her father so much that he can hardly tear himself away from her embraces in the morning in order to get to his work. As he was leaving the other morning, saying, "By-by, baby, papa has to leave you now to go to work," she looked up and said, in a sad tone, "It's a shame."

MRS. G. FRASER.
No. 352 W. Third street, South Boston.

LOOKING AHEAD

MY baby is three years old. One Sunday a friend of my brother's, who comes quite often to see him, got friendly with her. So, one day I said to her, "Do you want to go with Tommy?" With a smile she replied, "When I get a big girl I will."

MRS. ISABELL SOAR,
No. 2 Lyons street, Dorchester.

MUST HAVE HURT AWFUL

I WILL send a few of my little girl's sayings. She will be four in July. One day she asked, "Mother, did the Lord make me?" "Yes, dear." "It must have hurt me awful! He must have had hard work putting my arms on."

One day she called on the lady down stairs and asked for something to eat. "I don't know but what you will think I am a tramp," she said.

MRS. FRANK H. DOW.
No. 163 Western avenue, Lynn.

KITTEN'S NAME WAS FITZ

ONE day last week my little girl was [illegible] The lady up stairs was watching her and said: "What is your kitten's name, Winnie?" Winnie looked up, with the kitten in her arms and said: "Her name is Fritz. Wait and you will see her take one."

MRS. P. B. LANNAN.
No. 21 Sudan street, Dorchester.

GOD'S WATER TANK BURST

PHILIP DANA REED, my little grandson, aged four, asked his mother one day what made it rain so hard. She said she did not know. He thought a moment, then said:

"Oh, I guess the water tank in God's kitchen has broke."

On another occasion he asked one of the neighbors what her kitten's name was. It had no tail. She told him the name was "Minus." He looked long at the kitten, then said: "Well, she looks it."

MRS. O. B. RICKER.
No. 44 Glendale street, Everett.

A MAN FOR HIS COUNTRY

MY little boy, two years and ten months old, came to me yesterday with a strawberry box on his head and said: "Mamma, look at me. I am going to be a soldier boy—a man for my country."

MRS. JOSEPH DOYLE.
No. 47 Marshfield street, Roxbury.

CLEANING OUT THE HOUSE

ONE day I found my little Rose, who is three and one-half years old, hard at work with a match and a traveller's empty inkwell. I told her she would get her dress soiled. She said: "Me don't care if I do. Me want to clean this little house out."

MRS. LOWNEY.
No. 19½ Centre street, Roxbury.

WAS NOT A RELATIVE

LESLIE HOWARD, aged five years, prayed for each member of the family separately at bedtime. He was asked to add a visitor to his prayer and said:

"No, she is no relation to me, and I have more than I can pray for now."

MRS. C. E. HEWETT.
No. 155 Oxford street, Portland, Me.

WOULD TAKE A BROTHER

CLIFFORD BROWNE CUTTING is now three years old. He asked me where I bought him, and I told him from our doctor. Shortly afterward his father was sick, and every time the doctor would come he would watch him intently. One day little Clifford put his hands behind him, walked up to the doctor with a sober face and said:

"Doctor, [illegible] I want you to bring me a little baby sister, but I will take a brother."

Then he ran away and hid.

MRS. MARY B. CUTTING.
No. 44 Myrtle street, Melrose.

SUGGESTS MOVING DOWN

ON a moonlight night last Summer my little boy, then 3 years old, was sitting in my lap looking out of the window at the moon and he made this remark to me:

"Mamma, why does God live up there in the sky?"

I said, "Herbie, dear, he lives there to watch over you and see if you are a good boy."

At that time the tenement under us was vacant and my little boy replied, "Well, mamma, why don't God move downstairs, then he will be nearer to me and watch me better?"

MRS. ARTHUR W. GARLAND.
No. 8 Franklin street, Charlestown.

WANTED THE COVER ON

MY little George, aged three, came in for a piece of bread. I took a biscuit and cut it in halves, giving him the lower half. He looked at it and said:

"Mamma, why don't you put the cover on?"

MRS. LEDDY.
No. 96 Winter street, East Cambridge.

NO HAIR TO HURT

MY little grandson, who has long curls, was told that he was going to have them cut off and he was going to be like a little man. "I want to go to grandpa's barber," said he, "because I don't want any hair on top of my head that will hurt to have combed."

CHARLES L. WHITCOMB, JR.
No. 35 Henderson street, Arlington.

COULDN'T SEE TO SLEEP

MY little girl, two and a half years old, was put to bed in the dark. She cried, and when I went in to see what the trouble was she said, "I can't see to sleep."

MRS. GEORGE F. SMITH.

This is an unusually large number of Pianos to be sacrificed. Only once in the history of our business have we had so many fine instruments on sale at one time. To clear every one off the sacrifice floor before next Saturday night we have put a price on each of them that is so very low that it seems almost a shame. The price is really an insult to the pianos. But what are we going to do? We must sell them. That is all there is to it. The pianos are the world's best makes. We guarantee this. Any wise, economical buyer can have any one of these pianos on the easiest possible terms. Don't buy till you visit the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PIANO DEALERS! No pianos will be sold to dealers or makers for a less price than marked for public sale. Each piano is marked a selling price to cover expenses, and in no case can a maker or dealer get a lower price than an individual. OPEN DOORS TO MOST EXCLUSIVE COLONY

The Edward T. Harrington Co. Offer a New Resort to Sweltering City Dwellers.

WILL SELL ABOUT 150 LOTS

No longer will the "Four Hundred" reign supremely exclusive o'er Newport's rock-ribbed coast.

No longer will Newport's Summer colony, the fashion centre of blue-blooded lineage and wealth, extend its welcome only to the aristocracy.

For the portals to Rhode Island's most attractice Summer seat, the playground of society, will be thrown open to the ordinary mortal, the peace-loving wage-earner.

Barred Door is Opened.

Society, in its Summer pranks, may be viewed at close quarters hereafter. The Edward T. Harrington Company of Boston has solved the problem. It has opened the barred door and offered a haven to sweltering city dwellers.

The First Beach Land Company will conduct a mammoth land sale in Newport, R. I., on July 9 next, through the Edward T. Harrington Company, 293 Washington street, Boston. Interest of the real estate world is centered on the sale because of the magnificent results which this company has accomplished in similar enterprises.

Right on the borders of Newport's handsome drives and estates, in closest proximity to notables who are famous the world over, and fanned by refreshing sea breezes, the First Beach of Newport is a most alluring spot for the city dweller who sighs for relief from the sunbaked streets.

Great Chance for Investment.

It offers an excellent opportunity for investment. Valuations there have increased with tremendous bounds. The wage earner who contemplates seaside life during the Summer months or all-year round is given a chance to get in on the ground floor.

Any innovation in any enterprise or business is looked upon with askance until success is clearly and fully defined. The experience of more than thirty-five years of the Edward T. Harrington Company in the sale and development of land insures the stability of this undertaking.

Their system is entirely their own. To take a large tract of land and develop it in the ordinary way, along the lines laid down by old-time methods, it would ordinarily take a lifetime to produce what a large firm can do in a very short while.

About 150 lots, ranging from 5,000 square feet to acreage, will be offered, and the average price is from $150 to $300. If the lump sum for the purchase is not available, the thrifty may pay $25 down and $5 monthly, no interest and no taxes.

Very Easy Terms.

This company made a notable sale last year in Winthrop, one of the prettiest burbs in Boston. They advertised for e 187 lots of land, and sold, in one r, 178 out of the 187. In less than days this concern had the entire matter aned up and the property in other ads. This would read like a fairy tale the average man who sells land. The great secret of their success lies in fact that they will not take for sale t which they do not fully believe in. On about fifty lots the prices are from 0 to $400, on the same terms of payent; a few of the larger lots range from 0 to $2,000, ten per cent. to be paid wn and the balance in monthly payents of ten per cent. of the purchase ce until paid for.

Value Will Increase.

Many lots offered in this sub-division ll certainly double and quadruple in ue as they are in close proximity to wport, with its magnificent estates and mous drives. The First Beach Land Comny's land is traversed by Purgatory road d many other beautiful thoroughfares; most every lot commands a view of the ean unsurpassed on the coast.

Their home office is in Boston and they fer you to anyone in that city; they ve been so long established that their me is a household word, and they say: Read in this paper, from time to time, e advertisements as they appear, giving l instructions relative to the purchase the land.

WAGE EARNERS INVADE SEAT OF THE "400."

Magnificent lots, a great opportunity for investment, in close proximity to Newport's famous Summer colony, are offered on easy terms by the First Beach Land Company at a mammoth land sale on July 9 next.
